Intoxicating Substances

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 148, if he will identify the substances covered by the Intoxicating Substances (Supply) Act 1985 and the number of prosecutions that have taken place in each of the last five years providing a regional breakdown where available. [10224]

Mr. Sackville: The Act covers the supply of any substance which is likely to be inhaled for the purpose of causing intoxication; no particular substances are specified. But the compounds and products commonly associated with volatile substance abuse are listed in annexes D and E of the 1995 report of the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs on volatile substance abuse, a copy of which is in the Library.

The number of prosecutions for offences under the Act by region, in the last five years for which figures are available, were as follows:

Region	1995	1994	1993	1992	1991	Totals

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department is he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report "The Government's Use of External Consultants". [10195]

Mr. Howard: The Home office is either acting on or has already complied with each of the relevant recommendations of the scrutiny report. In particular, a policy statement has been issued, new arrangements for ministerial approval of external consultancies are being followed and reporting arrangements are in place. A new guidance manual, covering these areas and consolidating existing guidance, is about to issue.

Pepper Sprays

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reviews his Department has carried out into the health effects of pepper sprays, oleoresin capsicum, since 1990; who carried out each of the reviews; what were the conclusions of each of the reviews; when each review (a) started and (b) ended; and what is the current security classification of the report arising out of each review. [10251]

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office police scientific development branch started reviewing all available data relating to the health effects of oleoresin capsicum in early 1991, and continues to do so. The data have also been reviewed by the Department of Health and the Ministry of Defence. This has not resulted in any published report, although a summary of the police scientific development branch's findings were included in an article in "Police Science and Technology Review" last June. In addition, my right hon. and learned Friend commissioned research into the possible carcinogenic effects of oleoresin capsicum's main incapacitating ingredient, capsaicin. This was undertaken by Hazleton Europe between 14 July 1994 and 22 August 1994. This resulted in two reports, entitled "Capsaicin: Measurement of Unscheduled DNA Synthesis in Rat Liver Using an In Vivo/In Vitro Procedure" and "Capsaicin: Induction of Micronuclei in the Bone Marrow of Treated Mice", which are unclassified and available in the Library.

Speaker's Conferences

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the typescript minutes of evidence of the Speakers' conferences on electoral law 1965 to 1968 and (b) the minutes of evidence he retains in respect of earlier Speakers' conferences. [10444]

Mr. Sackville: Successive Speakers have directed that the unpublished papers of Speakers' conferences should be publicly available only on the expiry of 50 years and the subject to the consent of the Speaker in office in respect of each application for access to them.

Refugees

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of refugee applications in each of the past five years. [10491]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is given in the table.

Applications[1] for asylum received in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, 1992–96 (January to November)

Year	Number of principal applications
1993	22,370
1994	32,830
1995	43,965
1996 (January to November	25,590

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest five.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons he funds (a) the Refugee Council and (b) the refugees arrival project. [10489]

Mr. Kirkhope: We provide a core grant to the Refugee Council which contributes to a range of the council's activities as an umbrella organisation supporting the interests of refugees and refugee organisations.

The grant from the Home Office contributes about 80 per cent. of the total funding available to the refugee arrivals project to enable it to provide advice and support to asylum seekers arriving at airports in Greater London.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who advises him on the monitoring of the refugee situation and on the appropriate levels of financial support to those voluntary organisations who are providing services to refugees. [10493]

Mr. Kirkhope: Statistics are maintained on the number of people seeking asylum each year and those given permission to remain either as refugees or exceptionally outside the immigration rules. The voluntary agencies funded by the Home Office are alive to the changing refugee situation which influences the aims and objectives which underlie the grant we pay.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much public money has been made available to refugee agencies in each of the past five years. [10490]

Mr. Kirkhope: The total amount of grants given to refugee voluntary agencies in each of the past five financial years is set out in the table. The amounts vary from year to year due to the fluctuating level of funding needed to support the programme offering temporary protection to refugees from the former Yugoslavia.

Year	Total grant £million
1995–96	6.1
1994–95	9.4
1992–93	4.2

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consult the (a) Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster and (b) other Church and faith leaders about services to refugees. [10494]

Mr. Kirkhope: The provision of services to refugees is a matter for local authorities and those central Government Departments with policy responsibility in the relevant areas. We are always ready to listen to the views of Church and other faith leaders about issues affecting refugees.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what specific advice has been given by his Department to refugee aid and advice agencies about changes in the levels of funding in recent years. [10492]

Mr. Kirkhope: Home Office officials have regular discussions with the refugee organisations to which we make grants. We have made it clear during these meetings that, due to the need to control public expenditure, no guarantees could be given that the level of grants would necessarily be maintained.

Metropolitan Police (Accommodation) Clearance Costs

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the acquisition and clearance cost of the sites at (a) Grafton square and (b) Old Town SW4. [10487]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the acquisition and clearance costs of both sites are as follows:

Item	Cost £
Purchase of Grafton Square	912,500
Purchase of 63 Old Town	1,260,000
Legal fees, stamp duty and agents fees	70,000
Demolition costs	126,000
Total	2,368,500

Part of the land was surplus to the scheme and was subsequently sold for £50,000

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the strategic review of the provision of police accommodation in Lambeth started and finished; what external views were sought on this strategic review; and if the views of the Lambeth divisional commander were sought. [10486]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that a review of the long-term police accommodation needs in Lambeth is ongoing as part of the process to update the Metropolitan police's operational building strategy by September 1997. The review will take a number of months to complete, during which time the Metropolitan police intend to seek the views of interested parties, both internally and externally.

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the architects' and surveyors' costs to 31 March 1996, in the preparation of the divisional police headquarters at Grafton square. [10488]

Mr. Maclean: The commissioner tells me that the proposals were developed mainly by architectural staff in the Metropolitan police property services department. All costs, up to March 1996, totalled the equivalent of £857,000, inclusive of external consultants' fees.

Game Licences

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for the future of game licences. [10404]

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. and learned Friend has announced the Government's intention to abolish the licence to kill game. Consultation on the proposal to abolish the licence, and to abolish and/or simplify other aspects of the game licensing system, will take place as soon as possible.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what request he has made, and what reports he has received, to or from the advisory committee for the Metropolitan police concerning the recent review of its support services. [10499]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has received regular reports from the Metropolitan police committee on the recent review of support services. He received a copy of the final report published on 4 November 1996, and has asked to be kept informed of progress on the implementation of the recommendations.

Airports (Passenger Handling)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on passenger handling arrangements at (a) Heathrow and (b) other United Kingdom airports. [10323]

Mr. Kirkhope: Paragraph 27(1)(a) of schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971 requires that carriers disembark passengers from ships and aircraft in accordance with arrangements approved by the immigration service. These arrangements invariably include a requirement that passengers who are not European Union—European Economic Area nationals be presented in an orderly manner to the immigration officer for interview. This requirement is met in a variety of ways at different locations, reflecting the different traffic patterns and accommodation configurations which exist. At Heathrow airport, carriers have engaged a private security firm to carry out this function on their behalf.

Licensing (Special Hours Certificates)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representation he has received on problems arising from the granting of special hours certificates under section 77 of the Licensing Act 1964 as extensions to standard licences; what plans he has to alter the licensing arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [10517]

Mr. Kirkhope: We have received a number of representations from the licensed trade about a 1995 Crown court judgment, whose effect appears to be to restrict premises which hold a special hours certificate from operating as public houses during the day and as discotheques at night. I understand that a test case, sponsored by the trade, received judgment in the High Court on 16 December, and that the plaintiffs have been given leave to take the matter to the Court of Appeal. We shall continue to monitor developments closely, and will consider whether action is needed in the light of the decision of the courts.

Remand Prisoners (Newspapers)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons remand prisoners are not entitled to receive (a) the Irish Times, (b) the Irish News, (c) the Irish Press and (d) the Belfast Newsletter. [10637]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Hugh Taylor to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 13 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the supply of Irish papers to prisoners.

Prisons provide, at public expense, one newspaper for every ten prisoners, taking into account the preference of prisoners and the need to provide as full a range of newspapers as possible. Additionally, prisoners can receive newspapers directly from publishers, newsagents or booksellers, either at the order of relatives or friends or by payment from prisoners' private cash or prison pay. For unconvicted prisoners the supply of newspapers at their own expense is specifically provided for in the Prison Rules and there are no particular restrictions on the four titles you mention.

Police Expenditure

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the aggregate of (i) each police authority's capped expenditure limit or in the case of the Metropolitan police the estimated budget requirement, (ii) police rule 2 grant for additional police officers and (iii) police rule 3 grant for (a) each individual police authority, (b) each class of police authority and (c) all police authorities in 1996–97 and 1997–98 and the change in each in pounds and as a percentage. [10306]

Representation of the People Acts

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which the operation of the Representation of the People Acts has been found to be in breach of the European convention on human rights. [10768]

Mr. Sackville: The United Kingdom is currently challenging in the European Court of Human Rights a decision of the European Commission of Human Rights last year on an application brought by Mrs. Phyllis Bowman, executive director of the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child, on the operation of section 75 of the Representation of the People Act 1983.

There are no other instances.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to bring forward amendments to the Representation of the People Acts in respect of material issued about a candidate without his or her permission following the recent ruling of the European Commission of human rights. [10769]

Mr. Sackville: There are no plans to do so at this time.

Firearms

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Office what plans he has to offer compensation to owners of handguns or other weapons who wish to surrender them to the authorities although not compelled by law to do so. [8159]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 18 December 1996]: We accept that the provisions in the Firearms (Amendment) Bill relating to gun clubs will make it difficult for some owners of .22 pistols to continue to shoot. We have therefore decided to make payments, on an ex gratia basis, to firearm certificate holders who choose to surrender such guns to the police. There are no such plans in relation to other weapons whose surrender will not be required.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Appointments

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in respect of how many and which public appointments a nominee has been specifically and separately sought from the Government of the Irish Republic at Maryfield since 1 January 1990; and if he will make a statement. [5115]

Sir John Wheeler: The following list sets out the vacancies which were notified to the Irish Government separately from those notified in the six-monthly lists. Punishment Shootings

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many so-called punishment shootings have taken place in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years and the current year to date; and how many were believed in each year to have been carried out by (1) the Provisional IRA,

(2) other Republican terrorists,

(3) the Ulster Defence Association,

(4) the Ulster Volunteer Force and

(5) other Loyalist organisations. [9220]

Sir John Wheeler: The number of casualties as a result of "punishment" shootings for the period 1 January 1991 to 11 December 1996 is as follows:

Year	By Loyalist groups	By Republican groups	Total
1993	60	25	85
1994	68	54	122
1996[1]	19	3	22

[1] To 11 December.

It is not possible to specify which individual group carried out an offence.

Council for Voluntary Action Report

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the report entitled, "Missing the Target: a critique of Government policy on Targeting Social Need in Northern Ireland", published by the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action; and what plans he has to implement its recommendations. [9689]

Mr. Ancram: The Government have noted the report on targeting social need published by the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action in December 1996. Though it contains some constructive comments, other criticisms of Government policies are not accepted, particularly when it is suggested that Northern Ireland should diverge from particular national or European Union policies. It would not be appropriate to come to a final view on the report's recommendations in advance of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights' report on employment equality which is scheduled to be published in the near future and which will also deal with targeting social need.

Disability

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people from Belfast, West (i) are currently in receipt of disability allowance, (ii) have had applications for disability living allowance turned down in 1996, (iii) are currently in receipt of incapacity benefit and (iv) have had applications for incapacity benefit turned down in 1996. [9751]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Dr. Joe Hendron, dated 20 December 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question on Incapacity Benefit and Disability Living Allowance.

I have attached a table showing the number of people in the Belfast West constituency who are in receipt of Incapacity Benefit and Disability Living Allowance. Unfortunately, figures are not available for either benefit for the number of applicants who have been turned down in 1996.

I hope this explains the position for you but I would be happy to provide any further information you require.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas adjournment; [9827]

(2) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9826]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10192]

Sir John Wheeler: Expenditure details are not immediately available for all bodies, especially in the first three years. However, from the information available to Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office, the amount spent by their non-departmental public bodies on external consultants in each of the last five years was:

Year	Expenditure (£000)
1991–92	968
1992–93	1,746
1993–94	1,696
1994–95	1,861
1995–96	2,890

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants". [10193]

Sir John Wheeler: The report did not extend to Northern Ireland because of the separate public expenditure accountability and administrative arrangements that exist there. However, guidance has been issued to the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office based on the report's recommendations.

Language Teaching

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on the promotion and teaching of (a) the Irish language and (b) the Ulster-Scots language in 1996 in each of the last five years. [10645]

Mr. Ancram: The table shows the identifiable expenditure on projects with an Irish language or Ulster-Scots dimension for the financial years 1991–92 to 1995–96. It includes expenditure on education through the medium of the Irish language, but does not include expenditure on the teaching of the Irish language in English medium schools because this information is not collected separately. Applications for grant assistance are assessed on their merits and the disparity between the levels of funding reflects the number of Irish language and Ulster-Scots cultural groups in Northern Ireland, and the relative stage of development of the Irish language and Ulster-Scots cultural movements.

Fluoridation

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the consulting engineers who have been involved in the M and E design work associated with the proposals for the fluoridation of the water supply in Northern Ireland. [10543]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Water Service under its chief executive, Mr. H. R. Plester. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from H. R. F. Plester to Mr. Peter Robinson, dated 7 January 1997:

Mr Moss has asked me to reply to your parliamentary question asking if he will list the consulting engineers who have been involved in the M & E design work associated with the proposals for the fluoridation of the water supply in Northern Ireland.

The Water Service has not commissioned any consulting engineers to carry out design work associated with the proposals for fluoridation of the water supply in Northern Ireland. All design work to date has been undertaken by the Water Service's own design staff.

EU Financing

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money Northern Ireland has received in each financial year from EC sources apart from payments under the structural funds. [10811]

Sir John Wheeler: The following amounts have been identified as being received in Northern Ireland from European Community sources other than the structural funds since 1987–88, when meaningful figures first became available:

Financial year	Total £ million
1988–89	27.8
1989–90	46.0
1990–91	48.0
1991–92	59.5
1995–96	128.7

These receipts are from the guarantee section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund. However, it should be noted that the bulk of guarantee section receipts are disbursed centrally by the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce and details of payments are not generally maintained at regional level. Other small payments are made by the European Commission direct to recipients which are not passed through the United Kingdom Government.

EU Social Fund

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money under the European social fund for Northern Ireland in each financial year to date accrued to (a) the private sector, (b) non-central Government public sector bodies and (c) central Government. [10814]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is as follows:

The totals for European social fund receipts are taken from published Government and Northern Ireland public expenditure plans.

As the information is not readily available in the format requested, the breakdown for each year is based on the percentage outturn for 1994.

EU Regional Development Fund

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money Northern Ireland has received in each year to date from the European regional development fund; how much has been devoted to (a) infrastructure projects undertaken by non-central Government bodies, (b) infrastructure projects undertaken by central Government and (c) industrial projects. [10813]

[1] These programmes combine elements of both industry and infrastructure. Under the new structural funds arrangements from 1989 emphasis was placed on programmes rather than individual projects and some of these so combine the industrial and infrastructural elements that they cannot be validly separated. The table therefore shows an extra column in respect of this class of ERDF receipt.

[2] Includes estimated receipts to date for 1996–97 financial year.

[3] European regional funds receipts to community initiative programmes benefiting Northern Ireland are included in answer number 14 of 13 January 1997.

European Community (UK Payments)

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was Northern Ireland's share of the United Kingdom's payments into the European Economic Community from 1 January 1973 to date; and what was Northern Ireland's share of receipts for the same period. [10812]

Sir John Wheeler: It is not possible to determine Northern Ireland's actual share of the United Kingdom's contribution to the European Community because payments are made on a national and not a regional basis. Similarly it is not possible to identify the full extend of receipts from the Community. However, a Northern Ireland attributed share of the contribution to the EC is calculated as an accounting mechanism because of the operation of a separate Northern Ireland consolidated fund. This notional attributed share does not count as an item of expenditure within the Northern Ireland public expenditure programme and has therefore no bearing on the level of public expenditure in the Province.

Figures for the notional attribution of part of the Northern Ireland's share of the United Kingdom's payments and for those areas where the receipts from the European Community's structural funds can be separately identified are as follows:

Financial year	Attributed share (part)	Identified receipts[1]
1973–74	1	0

Total	1,647	1,645

[1] This comprises total identified EC structural funds receipts and, from 1994–95, financial instrument for fisheries guidance receipts in Northern Ireland. Receipts under the guarantee section are disbursed centrally by the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce and are, therefore, not included in the above figures.

[2] Attributed share figures for the last three years are provisional estimates which will be revised when final details of NI's attributed share of tax revenues is determined.

European Initiatives

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been received by Northern Ireland under each of the European Community initiatives in each financial year to date; and what proportion of funding each year (a) represented a cash addition to the Northern Ireland economy and (b) was used to offset Government expenditure. [10810]

Sir John Wheeler: Under the 1989–93 structural funds allocation, Northern Ireland had 11 approved Community initiatives. The amounts received to date under each initiative are:

(a) Receipts earned by the private sector and by non-central Government public sector bodies are paid to the claimant. The receipts represent cash additions to the recipients. Receipts earned by central Government are paid into the Northern Ireland consolidated fund. All receipts are subject to EC audit arrangements and normal Government accounting requirements.

(b) The overall level of receipts is taken into account in the Government's decisions on public expenditure allocations, and their availability enables expenditure to be maintained at a higher level than would otherwise be feasible.

Public Appointments

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy that in each submission put to him for public appointments where an Irish Government nominee is on the list that any nominee of an hon. Member or a political party for that vacancy is also placed on the same list. [9580]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 18 December 1996]:

I refer the hon. and learned Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 4 December 1996, Official Report, column 705.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Teachers' Pensions

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will estimate the cost to the teachers' superannuation scheme if all current contributors and deferred pensioners chose to transfer their accrued pension rights from the teachers' scheme into a personal pension arrangement. [8561]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 10 December 1996]: The cost to the teachers' superannuation scheme—TSS—if all current contributors and deferred pensioners as at 31 March 1997 chose to transfer their accrued pension rights into a personal pension arrangement is estimated at £14 billion. This estimate assumes that current contributors opt out of the TSS and so transfer their benefits only in respect of service after 5 April 1988.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will estimate the cost to the teachers' superannuation scheme if all current contributors aged (a) 50 or over and (b) 55 or over years, as at 31 March 1997 chose to transfer their accrued pension rights from the teachers' scheme into a personal pension arrangement. [8562]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 10 December 1996]: The costs to the teachers' superannuation scheme—TSS—if all contributors aged (a) 50 or over and (b) 55 or over as at 31 March 1997 chose to transfer their accrued pension rights into a personal pension arrangement are estimated as £3½ billion and £1½ billion respectively. These estimates assume that contributors opt out of the TSS and so transfer their benefits only in respect of service after 5 April 1988.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the reduction in the teacher work force consequent upon the proposed changes in the superannuation scheme; and if she will make a statement. [9981]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend does not expect the proposed changes to lead to reductions in the teacher work force.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the adequacy of current teachers' superannuation regulations to deal with teachers aged 55 years and over in the local education authorities of Wales. [9979]

Mrs. Gillan: Under the current regulations, the costs of premature retirement are pooled among all employers of teachers, and are brought to account some years after the event. This system does not encourage employers to behave prudently. Under the proposed new arrangements, since employers will have to pay the extra cost of each premature retirement as and when they make it, they will make more considered, prudent, decisions. These considerations apply to local authorities in Wales and to all other teachers' employers.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the impact upon the morale of the teaching profession of her proposals to make changes in the superannuation scheme. [9980]

Mrs. Gillan: The Budget settlement allows for the cost to employers of a continuing programme of premature retirement. There is therefore no reason why teachers' morale should be affected by the proposals.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the principal changes she proposes in the teachers' superannuation scheme; and if she will make a statement. [10220]

Mrs. Gillan: The principal changes proposed by my right hon. Friend are as follows: a reduction in the employers' contribution rate from 8.05 per cent. to 7.2 per cent.; making teachers' employers pay the extra cost of premature retirements as and when they make them; including the cost of pensions increase in the finances of the scheme; increasing the death grant from one to two years' salary from 1 April 1998; making teachers who have been barred for misconduct ineligible for ill health retirement benefits; and re-introducing the requirement that teachers should be permanently incapacitated in order to qualify for ill health retirement benefits.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received concerning her proposals to make changes in the teachers' superannuation regulations for teachers aged 55 years and over. [10142]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend has received a large number of representations in respect of the proposed changes to the teachers' superannuation regulations.

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if teachers who are members of the teachers' pension scheme currently have an entitlement to receive an unenhanced pension based on years of service up to the date of dismissal; if dismissed as redundant aged over 50 years; and what legal advice she has obtained on the lawfulness of changing that entitlement, as proposed on 22 October, by means of amending regulations. [10281]

Mrs. Gillan: Under the current regulations, a teacher over 50 receives an immediate pension only if their employer certifies to the Secretary of State that the teacher's employment has been terminated by reason of redundancy or in the efficient discharge of the employer's functions. Under the proposed regulations, teachers' employers would be allowed to make enhanced severance payments, up to 66 weeks' of salary, as an alternative to premature retirement, The Superannuation Act 1972 empowers the Secretary of State to make amending regulations after consultation.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will estimate the financial consequences of the proposed changes to funding early retirement for teachers in the maintained and in the independent sector. [10497]

Mrs. Gillan: The reductions in the employers' contribution rate from 8.05 per cent. to 7.2 per cent. will lead to estimated reductions of £87 million and £8 million in spending on superannuation contributions in maintained and independent schools respectively. The Budget settlement assumes that maintained schools will continue to make premature retirements at 75 per cent. of current levels in 1997–98. The estimated net extra cost in the first year of that level of premature retirement would be £15 million. If a similar rate of premature retirement takes place in independent schools the extra cost in the first year would be £1.8 million in 1997–98.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applicants by teachers for early retirement have been (i) accepted, (ii) rejected and (iii) not determined in each of the past three years; and what she estimates the numbers might be if her draft proposals are enacted. [10495]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department collects data on the number of premature retirements granted by teachers' employers, but not on the number of applications made by teachers to their employers. Premature retirement is at the discretion of the employer.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the costs of early retirement for teachers is proposed to fall on the last school or on the education authority. [10498]

Mrs. Gillan: Under the current legislation, the cost of premature retirement for teachers in LEA-maintained schools falls on the LEA, unless it has good reason to charge the cost to the school's delegated budget. The Government have tabled an amendment to the Education Bill now before the House which would allow LEAs to charge the cost to a school's budget if the authority has not agreed to the premature retirement.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if teachers and former teachers have accumulated customary rights to early retirement that will not be extinguished by the proposed changes to funding arrangements. [10496]

Mrs. Gillan: Teachers have no accumulated right to premature retirement, which is at the discretion of the employer.

National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the total annual budget for the National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities; [9148]

(2) what proportion of the total budget of the National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities is accounted for by administrative costs and the remuneration of members; [9151]

(3) if he will list the members of the National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities and the terms of their appointments. [9152]

Mrs. Gillan: The members of the National Advisory Council on Employment of People with Disabilities—NACEPD—are: Mr. Alan Smith CBE, FIPD (Chairman), Professor Ian Bruce, Mrs. Guinette Davies, Mrs. Andrea Dean, Ms Rita Donaghy, Dr. Stephen Duckworth OBE, Mr. Richard Excell, Dr. Ann Fingret, Sir Peter Large CBE, Mr. Bert Massie OBE, Mr. Paul Newman, Mr. Tim Papé OBE, Ms Susan Scott-Parker, Mr. Richard Sermon, Mr. Ian Sneddon, Mr. John Spencer, Mr. Roger Spoor OBE, and Mrs. Dianah Worman. NACEPD was reconstituted on 1 July 1994 for three years until 30 June 1997, when the terms of members' appointments expire.

The total estimated costs for NACEPD in 1996–97 are £70,200, of which 96 per cent. covers allowances for members' loss of earnings and travel and subsistence expenses, and the provision of the council's secretariat.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what have been the average exam results for state sector schools (a) in the Bolton local education authority area and (b) nationally in each of the last three years. [9665]

Mrs Gillan: The average exam results for state sector schools (a) in the Bolton local education authority area and (b) England in each of the last three years are:

Jobcentres

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment with whom she has consulted regarding the suitability of open plan arrangements in jobcentres with respect to the safety of Employment Service staff. [10283]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from R. D. Horne to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 13 January 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about who has been consulted regarding the suitability of open plan arrangements in Jobcentres.

Jobcentres operated by the Employment Service and its predecessors have always been open plan since their inception in the early 1970s. From the mid-1980s a programme, with staff agreement, to convert to open plan layouts in Unemployment Benefit Offices was in progress.

Our new integrated Jobcentres, combining the two services, retained an open plan layout because it provided a much more effective and pleasant environment for delivering our services. These require interviews with jobseekers that involve sensitive discussions about their personal circumstances and requirements. Space Planning experts and design consultants were employed to help plan the interior layouts, which have since been subject to thorough risk assessments designed to reduce the risk to the safety of our people to a minimum after the introducation of the Jobseekers Allowance (JSA). The assessments conducted by competent assessors were undertaken in all Jobcentres during 1996. A further round of assessments is planned for 1997 when we have sufficient experience of operating JSA.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors underlay the decision by Employment Service management on 1 October to appeal against the issue of a Crown notice of improvement to the Employment Service following an assault at the Camberwell jobcentre. [10282]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from R. D. Horne to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 13 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about the Employment Service response to the issue of a Crown Notice following an assault at Camberwell Jobcentre.

The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) informed us of their intention to issue a Crown Notice and invited our comments. Our officials met with theirs and provided further information and evidence to clarify the issues raised by HSE. Following this meeting and a further exchange of correspondence we were informed by HSE that they no longer intended to proceed with the issue of a Crown Notice.

I hope that this is helpful.

Contract for Work Pilots

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date contract for work pilots will commence; in what areas they will be located; what will be the procedure for referring claimants to the programme; if benefit sanctions will apply for refusal to attend; and if these pilots will be linked to project work pilots. [10265]

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, North-East (Mr. Congdon) on 12 December 1996, Official Report, columns 316–17, for a list of potential areas. There are no plans to introduce project work in any of these areas. The contract for work pilots will begin in the spring of 1997, once tender negotiations have been completed satisfactorily. The Government's intention is that clients will be referred to the programme by the Employment Service at the first restart interview that they receive after the start of the pilot, and that, subject to the approval of Parliament, those who fail to attend without good cause will be subject to benefit sanction under the provisions of section 19 of the Jobseekers Act 1995, and regulation 69, 73 and 75 of the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996.

Jobmatch Programme

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what ways the jobmatch programme for claimants aged 18 to 25 years will differ from the rules and provisions of the pilot programme. [10261]

Mr. Forth: The new jobmatch programme will be delivered through the Employment Service and will remain broadly similar to the pilot programme. It will offer 4,000 places in 1997–98 to help those aged under 25 who have been unemployed for two years or more to leave unemployment for a part-time job. The programme will differ from the pilots in that there will no longer be two payments of the weekly jobmatch allowance after the initial payment period of 26 weeks, and in that the procedures for issuing training vouchers will be simplified.

Literacy and Numeracy

Sir Roger Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if her proposed mandatory baseline assessments will incorporate screening for children at risk of literacy and numeracy difficulties. [10262]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Sir J. Hannam) on 3 December 1996, Official Report, column 611.

Education Standard Spending Assessment

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list in percentage terms the amount of the education standard spending assessment (a) distributed directly to schools and (b) retained by the local education authority indicating the sum of each amount transferred to the county for each of the county authorities. [9745]

Mr. Robin Squire: Local education authorities are free to set education budgets higher or lower than their education standard spending assessments—SSAs. As education SSAs are not earmarked, there is no prescribed proportion for delegation to schools, or deployment by the authority for other purposes. The table sets out, for each shire county LEA unaffected by local government re-organisation,

(a) its education SSA,

(b) its adjusted aggregated schools budget—ASB—representing the funding to be distributed directly to schools, and

(c) the adjusted ASB as a percentage of the SSA.

The figures are for 1996–97.

Adjusted ASB includes both the aggregated schools budget for LEA schools, and the annual maintenance grant paid to grant-maintained schools.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the percentage of four-year-olds expected to take up a pre-school place in the first year of the national voucher scheme. [9765]

Mr. Robin Squire: The percentage of four-year-olds expected to take up a pre-school place in the first year of the national nursery education voucher scheme will depend upon a number of factors, including the number of pre-school places that satisfy parents' choice, bearing in mind their needs and those of their children.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the number of four-year-olds whose parents do not speak English as a first language in each local education authority area; and how many leaflets she plans to make available for distribution to parents of four-year-olds in each local education authority, in languages other than English, to inform them about the nursery voucher scheme. [10148]

Mr. Squire: It is Departmental policy to make education leaflets for parents available in the nine most widely spoken languages other than English; 130,000 copies of the guide for parents on the nursery education voucher scheme have been printed in these nine languages. All parents have been given the opportunity to request this and future information on the scheme in one of the nine languages via a special multi-language order form sent with their initial mailing of the guide. The size of the print run was informed by the take-up of translated versions of leaflets in previous Departmental campaigns and it is expected that the supply will meet the demand over the first year of the scheme.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many days of leave she plans to take during the Christmas adjournment; [9819]

(2) how many days leave she has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer adjournments; and how many days leave she took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9818]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to you today.

Claimants (Interviews)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the format of the new intensive series of advisory interviews for claimants unemployed more than two years; what will be the procedure for referring claimants; if benefit sanctions will be imposed for non-attendance; and what will be the impact of the programme on the 1-2-1 interview programme. [10264]

Mr. Forth: The new jobfinder programme will comprise a series of intensive interviews which focus on helping people who have been unemployed for two or more years back into work. It will build on the success of the 1-2-1 programme, which will continue to help people who have been unemployed for 12 months. The Government's intention is that jobseekers reaching two years or more unemployment will be referred to the programme by the Employment Service at the relevant restart interview and that, subject to Parliament, those who fail to attend without good cause will be subject to benefit sanction under the provisions of section 19 of the Jobseekers Act 1995, and regulation 69, 73 and 75 of the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 313, on national vocational qualifications, if she will list those national vocational qualifications which were accredited before July 1994 which (a) had not attracted full awards and (b) had attracted fewer than 100 awards. [9776]

Mr. Paice: The information requested is contained in a number of tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Pre-school Pupils

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 25 November, Official Report, columns 24–26, what was the (a) number and (b) percentage of three and four-year-olds in (i) reception classes in primary schools and (ii) nursery schools or nursery classes in primary schools, in each local education authority and nationally in January. [9778]

West Midlands	2	4
Coventry	—	—

1. The answer covers the academic years 1 September 1994 to 31 August 1995 and 1 September 1995 to 31 August 1996.
2. The classification of failure applies from the date that the school received the Office for Standards in Education published report.
3. The numbers include those schools which were subsequently restored to health or were closed. They do not include five failing special schools which have both primary and secondary provision, one of which is in the west midlands (Walsall).
4. The west midlands region has been defined as comprising Coventry, Walsall, Staffordshire, Solihull, Warwickshire, Wolverhampton, Birmingham, Dudley, Shropshire, Hereford and Worcester, and Sandwell.

National Curriculum (Exempt Schools)

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which schools are exempt from the national curriculum; and if she will make a statement. [9970]

Mrs. Gillan: Independent schools, non-maintained special schools, maintained special schools established in hospitals, and pupil referral units are the only schools which do not have to follow the national curriculum.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has made of the amount spent on external consultants by her Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10166]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the actions her Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report on the Government's use of external consultants. [10167]

Mr. Squire: On 23 February 1995, the Employment Department sent the efficiency unit an action plan for implementing all the recommendations of the original report which were relevant to the Department.

The action plan is being implemented. The merger of the Department for Education and the Employment Department afforded an opportunity to review the guidance available on the use of external consultants. New guidance issued since the merger and procurement and contract management guidance, due to be issued by the end of this financial year, takes full account of the recommendations.

Challenge Fund Grants

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the eligibility criteria for awarding grants under the challenge fund for science equipment announced in the Budget; and if she will make a statement. [9886]

Mr. Forth: It is for the Higher Education Funding Council for England to decide on the detailed criteria for its 1997–98 research equipment initiative. The council intends to finalise the criteria before the end of the current financial year, and details will be placed in the Library. The 1996 Budget letter to the council made clear, however, that the £20 million grant earmarked for research equipment would be expected to generate matching private funds from industry and other users of research.

GCSE Scores

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of school leavers gained GCSE grades A* to C in (a) mathematics, (b) English and (c) science in the most recent year for which figures are available, broken down by grade. [9975]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is not available for school leavers. However, the percentage of 15-year-olds in England who gained GCSE grades A* to C in (a) mathematics, (b) English and (c) science in 1994–95 were as follows:

	Mathematics Per cent.	English Per cent.	Science Per cent.
Grade A*	2	2	3
Grade A	7	8	7
Grade B	13	17	15
Grade C	19	23	18
Grades A* to C	40	50	43

On-the-job Training

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of employees of working age received on-the-job training in (a) the south-west and (b) the United Kingdom broken down by gender in the most recent year for which figures are available. [9977]

Mr. Paice: From the spring 1996 labour force survey, the percentage of employees of working age who received on-the-job training in the four weeks prior to the interview is:

	Total Per cent.	Men Per cent.	Women Per cent.
South west	6.6	6.4	6.9
United Kingdom	6.3	6.2	6.4

Information on the number receiving training in a year is not available in the form requested.

Schools (Parental Choice)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the recent Audit Commission report on the Government's policies in respect of parental choice over school places and provision. [10406]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Audit Commission's report "Trading Places" covers some important topics. I welcome the attention it gives to removing surplus places, which we have been emphasising for some time. I also welcome its acknowledgement that Government policies have driven up standards.

I am, however, disappointed with some of the simplistic conclusions the commission draws. There is no mismatch between LEAs' responsibilities and their powers. LEAs can determine their own priorities. They retain all the powers they need to manage the supply of school places and to respond, with other providers, to parental choice. It remains true that some LEAs have been rather slow in removing surplus places.

School Expenditure

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is (a) the average sum per pupil and (b) the average percentage of the general schools budget, allotted by each local education authority in the current financial year for (i) mandatory exception from delegation, (ii) discretionary exceptions outside the potential schools budget, (iii) discretionary exceptions within the potential schools budget and (iv) the aggregate schools budget; [10401]

(2) what is (a) the average sum per pupil and (b) the average percentage of the general schools budget allotted by each local education authority in the current financial year for discretionary exceptions outside the potential schools budget and which is (i) delegated and (ii) not delegated to schools; [10400]

(3) what is (a) the average sum per pupil and (b) the average percentage of the general schools budget, allotted by each local education authority in the current financial year for (i) money allocated to schools via age-weighted pupil units, (ii) premature retirement compensation, (iii) school transport, (iv) statementing and support for statemented pupils and (v) school meals (net of income). [10402]

Mr. Robin Squire: The table sets out the information requested, except in respect of two items. In relation to funding allocated via age-weighted pupil units, I shall write to my hon. Friend when the requisite figures have been extracted and collated. Where a local education authority has chosen to delegate funding which it might have retained as a discretionary exception outside—or within—the potential schools budget, the amounts in question form part of the aggregated schools budget and cannot ordinarily be separately identified from the LEA's local management of schools' financial statements.

The information in this table has been derived from financial statements produced under the section 122 of the Education Act 1996 (formerly section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988), incorporating LEAs' changes to their statements notified to the Department by 31 December 1996.

Professors of General Practice

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many professors of general practice there were in each of the last five years. [10677]

Mr. Forth: The information requested is not available centrally. I understand that in the 1995–96 academic year there were 23 professors of general practice in post at universities in the UK.

"Going GM" Conference, Warrington

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list those organisations (a) invited to attend, (b) who attended the "Going GM" conference for head teachers and governors scheduled to be held in Warrington on 21 October; and what was the total cost to public funds of (i) organising and (ii) running the conference. [10629]

Mr. Forth: Invitations to the "Going GM" conference in Warrington on 21 October 1996 were sent to head teachers and chairmen of governors of all LEA-maintained primary and secondary schools in Cheshire, Knowsley, Liverpool, St. Helens, Sefton, Wirral, Bolton, Bury, Manchester, Oldham, Rochdale, Salford, Stockport, Tameside, Trafford, Wigan and Lancashire; 118 delegates attended the conference, 90 representing primary schools and 28 representing secondary schools.

The conference cost around £3,500 to organise and £10,700 to run on the day.

Education Standard Spending Assessment (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors underlay the scale of the increase in the education standard spending assessment for Buckinghamshire county council between 1996–97 and 1997–98 relative to that of other local authorities in England. [10699]

Mr. Robin Squire: The provisional education standard spending assessment for Buckinghamshire in 1997–98 represents an underlying increase of 2.6 per cent. compared with the national average increase of 3.4 per cent. The below average increase is mainly due to a marginal reduction in secondary pupil numbers, a reduction in the proportion of children entitled to free school meals, and a reduction in the area cost adjustment. Standard spending assessments will be finalised at the end of the month.

Professors of Practice and Community Nursing

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many professors of (a) practice nursing and (b) community nursing there were in each of the last five years. [10678]

Mr. Forth: The information requested is not available centrally.

Standing Committee of Employment Reports

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what reports have been issued by the Standing Committee of Employment of the European Communities since the Essen European Council; to whom they have been distributed; when and where they were published; what participation United Kingdom personnel have had in their deliberations; and what actions Her Majesty's Government have taken in response to these reports. [10820]

Mr. Paice: The EC Standing Employment Committee does not issue reports.

SCOTLAND

Mearnskirk Hospital

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Greater Glasgow health board concerning future NHS provision from the site of Mearnskirk hospital; and if he will make a statement. [6890]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Greater Glasgow health board has granted preferred provider status to the Victoria Infirmary NHS trust for the development of 60 care of the elderly beds at Mearnskirk hospital. It is expected that this facility will more than match expected future needs in that sector. Both the board and the trust are keen to seek best value for money and to ensure that the proposed development is of a high standard and provides an environment best suited to providing care.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to reach a decision on the future development of Mearnskirk hospital, Newton Mearns. [6891]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Victoria Infirmary NHS trust remains on track to open new facilities at Mearnskirk hospital in 1998.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with East Renfrewshire council concerning a partnership for the provision of future services from Meanskirk hospital. [6900]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. Having been granted preferred provider status by Greater Glasgow health board for the development of 60 care of the elderly beds at Mearnskirk hospital, I understand the Victoria Infirmary NHS trust is currently considering how the private finance initiative might contribute to establishing the new unit. Its plans do not involve East Renfrewshire council, and I understand that neither Greater Glasgow health board nor the Victoria Infirmary NHS trust is aware of any discussions with East Renfrewshire council in relation to this development.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (i) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and Summer Adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year; [9794]

(2) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas Adjournment. [9795]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Curriculum Projects

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the projects undertaken by the Scottish Consultative Council on the Curriculum since 1989 from the Gordon Cook Foundation of Aberdeen grant of £250,000 and the value of expenditure on each. [9514]

Mr. Raymond S. The initial investment from the Cook Foundation was £200,000, which has generated interest of £180,270 over the period since 1989. In addition, officer time to a value of £95,000 has been funded by the Scottish Office via core grant to the Scottish CCC.

Biological Hazards

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) who authorised the closure of the category 4 containment laboratory at Ruchill hospital, Glasgow; when the closure took place; what were the criteria for closing the laboratory; what public consultation took place; and if he will make a statement; [10693]

(2) what arrangements apply in Scotland for dealing with category 4 laboratory specimens; and what assessment he has made of the safety of (a) patients and (b) specimens. [10696]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Hazard group 4 covers the most pathogenic of the biological hazards which have required to be investigated in category 4 containment laboratories. The only organisms in the group that have been the subject of any laboratory investigations within the United Kingdom are those which cause viral haemorrhagic fever. During the time the category 4 containment laboratory at Ruchill hospital was open it was used very infrequently for the investigation of suspected category 4 organisms. Across the United Kingdom the vast majority of cases of suspected viral haemorrhagic fever have proved to be malaria. No case of viral haemorrhagic fever has ever been recorded in Scotland.

In 1992, and acting on advice received from the Health and Safety Executive, it was agreed that a number of specific improvements required to be made if the facilities were to continue to operate at Ruchill. A sub-committee of the advisory group on infection was tasked to consider whether the required improvements should be made and, if not, what alternative arrangements needed to be put in place. The sub-committee recommended the closure of the high security clinical facility. The subsequent retirement of two of the staff who were skilled in the use of the category 4 laboratory precipitated the closure of the laboratory, which ceased to be operational early in 1995.

Interim guidance on the management of suspected cases of viral haemorrhagic fever was issued in May 1995 from medical advisers within the Scottish Office Department of Health to all consultants involved in communicable diseases in Scotland. The guidance covered the arrangements for initiating laboratory investigations, for obtaining clinical advice or care and for the transportation of patients. Also included were details about the new locus to be approached following the withdrawal of the service from Ruchill. The principles outlined in the guidance have been incorporated into an updated guide on the control of viral haemorrhagic fever which the United Kingdom Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens has recently finalised. The new document entitled "Management Control of Viral Haemorrhagic Fevers" is scheduled for publication later this month. I shall arrange for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

GP Fundholding Practices

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what have been the amounts retained by general practitioner fundholding practices at the end of each financial year since the introduction of general practitioner fundholding for each health board area in Scotland. [10698]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information in the table sets out GP fundholder savings which are retained by the health board on the fundholder's behalf to be used for the benefit of patients.

Maternity Unit (Glasgow)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 25 November, Official Report, column 43, what is the proposed building start date for the new maternity unit at Glasgow royal infirmary. [10530]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The trust's current timetable provides for the building work to commence in summer 1998.

Highlands and Islands Convention

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) by what means of transport and at what cost to public funds he returned to the House following the meeting of the Highlands and Islands convention in Inverness on 16 December; [10293]

(2) if the transport facilities used by him to return to the House from the meeting of the Highlands and Islands convention in Inverness on 16 December were offered to other hon. Members attending the convention; and if he will make a statement; [10294]

(3) when a request was made to the RAF to provide him and the Under-Secretary, the hon. Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch), with transport facilities to return to the House from Inverness following the Highland and Islands convention on 16 December. [10509]

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the total cost to the Scottish Office of the RAF flight which took him to and from the Highlands and Islands convention in Inverness on Monday 16 December; [10690]

(2) where he boarded the RAF flight which took him to the Highlands and Islands convention in Inverness on 16 December; [10692]

(3) if he will specify the type of aeroplane and the seating capacity of the aircraft which transported the Secretary of State for Scotland and his Minister of State to and from the Highlands and Islands convention in Inverness on 16 December; and what were the names and designations of all the passengers on the flights. [10684]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A request for transport was made by my office and approved by the RAF on Tuesday 10 December in order to enable me to carry out all my engagements on 16 December. Going north, I boarded the flight at RAF Northolt. The aircraft was a HS125 which seated seven people. On the return flight from Inverness I was accompanied by my hon. Friend the Member for Kincardine and Deeside—the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland—and three Scottish Office staff. A number of matters of ministerial business were dealt with during the flight.

The cost of the flight was £682 per flying hour, plus £62 per hour of waiting time after the first three hours, which are not charged. The cost of a single ticket on a scheduled British Airways flight from Inverness to London would have been £145 per person.

As the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace) knows from his own experience, I am always willing to offer transport to hon. Members where possible.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total costs, including travel costs, of the Highlands and Islands convention on 16 December. [10691]

Mr. Forsyth: Costs incurred to date for the meeting of the Convention of the Highlands and Islands on 16 December amount to £1,058.

This amount excludes travel and subsistence costs for which claims are still being received from convention members.

ENVIRONMENT

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many responses he has received to the consultation paper on the future of the home energy efficiency scheme; how many of the responses supported additional measures within the scheme; and how many indicated that additional measures should be dependent on an increase in the scheme's financial resources; [10232]

(2) what will be the maximum grant under the home energy efficiency scheme once the revised scheme comes into effect; and from what date this will apply; [10231]

(3) what changes will be made to the standard draught-proofing job available under the home energy efficiency scheme, once the revised scheme comes into effect; and from what date these changes will apply. [10244]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We received 59 responses, many of which were from bodies representing a number of organisations and companies. Sixty one per cent. of respondents supported the introduction of additional measures to the scheme, and 24 per cent. suggested that additional measures should be accompanied by the allocation of more money.

Following the consultation exercise I have announced revisions to the scheme, increasing the range and choice of energy efficiency measures available, and I hope they will come into effect in April this year. I intend that the maximum grant will remain unchanged at £315. The measures to be included, and their specifications, have yet to be determined.

These changes, together with the increase in the allocation for 1997–98 for this popular programme of 3 per cent. to £75 million, demonstrate our commitment to helping the most vulnerable people keep warmer and use energy more efficiently.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what were the total sums paid to over 60-year-olds under the HEES in the financial years (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96; and what is his estimate of the amount to be paid in (c) 1996–97 and (d) 1997–98; [10223]

(2) how those householders not on low-income benefit but who are entitled to assistance under the HEES have their contributions calculated; [10221]

(3) how many (a) applicants for and (b) recipients of full assistance under the HEES there were in the current year and the year preceding the changes announced on 28 November 1995. [10222]

Mr. Jones: A total of 624,000 grants were paid under the home energy efficiency scheme in 1995–96 and 470,221 in 1994–95. There is no distinction between applicants and recipients, since grant is applied for after the work has been done by a network installer. There is no central record of inquiries to installers which do not result in work being done under the scheme.

The total amounts of grant paid to applicants giving age as their ground for qualification are set out in the table. It should be borne in mind that those applying on the grounds of age may also be entitled through receipt of a qualifying benefit.

It is not possible to estimate the number of grants to over-60s in 1997–98, since I have announced that the scheme will be extended to include a wider range of measures during 1997, and this may affect current patterns of demand.

Householders aged 60 and over applying since April 1996 receive grant of 25 per cent. of the cost of the work, provided that the cost does not exceed the maximum grant level. Their contribution is therefore 75 per cent. of the cost. If the work costs more than the maximum grant, which happens in the case of a minority of houses which are either very large or of unusual design, the work may still go ahead with grant aid if the client wishes. The client is then required to pay the amount of the excess in the same way as all claimants.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much money from the 1996–97 home energy efficiency scheme budget has been used to fund work where the application was made on or before 31 March 1996; and how many grants have been made in relation to such applications to the latest available date; [10236]

(2) how many grants have been made under the home energy efficiency scheme from 1 April 1996 to the latest available date; in how many cases these were maximum grants; and in how many cases the applicants were required to meet a proportion of the costs; [10237]

(3) what was the average grant made under the home energy efficiency scheme in each of the last three years; and what is the estimated amount for the average grant for 1997–98. [10238]

Mr. Jones: A total of 159,318 grants were paid to householders who had registered an interest before 31 March 1996, at a cost of around £27 million, between 1 April and 30 November 1996. This represents about half of the 319,747 grants paid in the period. Of these, 79,773 were for the maximum amount permitted, and 53,737 applications indicated that the cost of work exceeded this maximum. The number of cases where the applicant paid the excess is now known.

This information about average grants is as follows:

Year	Mean grant value
1996–97[1]	167
1995–96	165
1994–95	170
1993–94	171

[1] To end of November.

I cannot yet estimate the mean grant value for 1997–98, when the revised, more flexible scheme offering a wider range of energy efficiency measures will start operating, because the pricing bases have not yet been decided.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) in respect of how many cases where application for home energy efficiency scheme grants have been approved the work has not yet been carried out at the latest available date; [10240]

(2) what was the national average waiting time for (a) processing applications for home energy efficiency scheme grants and (b) carrying out the work under the home energy efficiency scheme once an application was approved in each month of 1996 to the latest available date; [10229]

(3) what was the average waiting time in each region of England and in Scotland and Wales for processing applications for home energy efficiency scheme grants and carrying out work under the home energy efficiency scheme once an application was approved in each month of 1996 to the latest available date; [10230]

(4) what is the waiting list of applicants for home energy efficiency scheme grants which have been received but have yet to be processed at the latest available date. [10239]

Mr. Jones: During the first three months of 1996, installers nationally had order books of between 14 and 18 weeks' work. Between April and November, the latest date for which information is available, the average installer had over 30 weeks' work. Information is not available by region. Latest indications are that this period is decreasing, while customer satisfaction research indicates that actual waiting times tend to be significantly shorter than installers' order books suggest.

The increase was caused by the pre-registration of better-off householders aged 60 and over before the end of March in order to qualify for grants under the old rules. The scheme managers and installers have dealt with the demand efficiently and have ensured that the proportion of the scheme budget going to benefit the least well-off has not diminished by comparison with previous years. The scheme managers will shortly be writing to about 210,000 people who registered an interest last year but have not yet claimed grant to remind them to contact an installer. I estimate that another 40,000 householders have more recently applied to installers for grants and are waiting for work to be done.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many representations he has received which criticised his decision to restrict assistance under the home energy efficiency scheme to low-income households in the three months following the announcement of his decision; [10253]

(2) how many representations he has received which criticised the universal entitlement of householders aged 60 years or more for assistance under the home energy efficiency scheme from its inception until the announcement on 28 November 1995 of its restriction to low-income households. [10252]

Mr. Jones: In April 1994 the scheme was expanded to allow full grants to people aged 60 and over regardless of income. This drew comment from both energy action organisations and the press. For example, the report "HEES: The Impact of Change", published by National Energy Action in September 1995, concluded that other sectors of the HEES clientele were becoming marginalised, and that more affluent over-60s clients, particularly those in larger owner-occupied dwellings, were over-represented in numerical terms, and were claiming a disproportionate amount of HEES funding. Since April 1996 householders aged 60 and over who do not receive income-related benefits or disability allowances have been required to make a contribution to the cost of measures provided under the scheme. Around 200 representations were received following the announcement of the change, though most of these were primarily about the scheme's level of funding.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what revision he has made to his estimate of the total number of jobs to be carried out under the home energy efficiency scheme in 1996–97 since his answer of 7 March 1996, Official Report, columns 303–304; and what assessment he has made of the reasons for the changes in the anticipated number of home energy efficiency scheme jobs to be carried out in 1996–97; [10233]

(2) what estimate he has made of the impact on job numbers in (a) energy efficiency services and (b) suppliers of energy saving materials and related services of the reduction in the home energy efficiency scheme budget from 1 April 1996 to the latest available date. [10235]

Mr. Jones: I have not changed my expectation that more than 400,000 grants will be paid under the home energy efficiency scheme in 1996–97, and present indications are that this will be the outcome. Already more than 2 million grants have been paid under this scheme, improving almost 10 per cent. of the entire housing stock and helping people in the greatest need to keep warmer and use energy more efficiently. This is a substantial achievement. One of the criteria for choosing installers within the scheme is their portfolio of work, to ensue that they should not rely on the scheme as their only source of income. There are many opportunities at present for the domestic energy efficiency supply and installation industries. As well as the home energy efficiency scheme there are the regional electricity companies' standards of performance schemes and the Energy Saving Trust's cavity wall insulation scheme. The latter is supported by the Department and I expect at least 40,000 homes to be insulated by the end of the present financial year. In total, these energy efficiency grant, subsidy and cashback schemes should benefit about 500,000 homes, mostly occupied by the more vulnerable households, in the current financial year.

Hot Water Tank Insulation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) total dwellings and (b) dwellings with a hot water tank have (i) hot water tank insulation and (ii) hot water tank insulation of 80 mm or more in (1) England, (2) Wales, (3) Scotland and (4) Northern Ireland. [10242]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Recent information is not available in this precise form. The following table provides estimates of the number of households in England, Wales and Scotland with hot water tank insulation in December 1995 and the number of dwellings in Northern Ireland with insulation in 1991.

Thousands

	Total households/ dwellings	With hot water tank	With hot water tank insulation	With 80mm or more insulation

Northern Ireland	574	not known	492	not known

Health and Safety Laboratory

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent to date on the prior options review and conversation to agency status of the health and safety laboratory; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10074]

Sir Paul Beresford: The conversion of the health and safety laboratory to an internal agency of the Health and Safety Executive on 1 April 1995 followed a review by the Health and Safety Executive's then director general, John Rimington. The estimated cost to the health and safety laboratory of preparing for agency status during 1994–95 was £507,000. It is not possible to quantify the related costs of the other staff of the Health and Safety Executive who were involved in the review of the laboratory and in its subsequent conversion to agency status.

The estimated cost to the Health and Safety Executive of the prior options review was £61,000. All costs were met from within HSE's existing resources.

The health and safety laboratory's status as an agency provides greater exposure to the market place and this is increasing both its efficiency and effectiveness.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the health and safety laboratory as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee. [10076]

Sir Paul Beresford: Employees of the health and safety laboratory serve on (a) 73 United Kingdom, (b) 62 European and (c) 25 international committees. They lead the United Kingdom team on 21 European and 12 international committees.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the health and safety laboratory; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10075]

Sir Paul Beresford: The review of the health and safety laboratory has been completed and its outcome was announced by my noble Friend Earl Ferrers on 24 July 1996. The Health and Safety Executive has established a team to prepare a detailed plan to implement to the Government's decisions. The estimated cost of preparing this plan is £50,000. It will not be possible to estimate the full costs of implementation until that plan has been finalised. All these costs will be met from within HSE's existing resources.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the health and safety laboratory. [10077]

Sir Paul Beresford: Employees of the health and safety laboratory chair (a) six United Kingdom, (b) eight European and (c) seven international committees.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10164]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not held centrally and could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report on the Government's use of external consultants. [10165]

Sir Paul Beresford: A large number of the report's recommendations addressed controls that are already part of the strong framework my Department has in place over the use of external consultants. However, that framework has been strengthened further, through:

(a) issuing revised guidance. This re-emphasises in particular:

- the requirement for a project brief or business case for each consultancy;
- the role and responsibilities of the project manager for each consultancy contract; and
- the procedures for establishing that the consultancy has delivered value for money.

(b) Ministerial approval for the Department's annual expenditure plan for consultants.

In addition, the Department's purchasing has been made more professional through the establishment of centres of procurement expertise at key points in the organisation, including those who buy consultancies.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (i) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review and privatisation of the Building Research Establishment; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10002]

(2) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the privatisation of the Building Research Establishment; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10003]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The costs of the prior options review, which is complete, and of the privatisation will fall to the Department's administration vote. Work on the review involved staff from this Department overseen by an advisory group drawn from Government and industry. Work on the privatisation involves staff the majority of whom are not working full time on this work. In both cases the staff and related costs could be determined only at disproportionate cost. Expenditure on professional fees in connection with the prior options review were around £100,000. It is estimated that professional fees in connection with the privatisation will be in the region of £1.3 million.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Building Research Establishment as representatives of UK interests; and how many of these employees are leading the UK team on their committee. [10004]

Mr. Jones: The information is as follows:

	UK	European	International
Number of Committees	350	143	56

Mr Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Building Research Establishment. [10005]

Mr. Jones: The information is as follows:

	Committees chaired by BRE employees
UK	34

Loft Insulation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) total dwellings and (b) dwellings with access to a loft have (i) loft insulation, (ii) loft insulation of 150 mm or more and (iii) loft insulation of 200 mm or more in (1) England, (2) Wales, (3) Scotland and (4) Northern Ireland. [10241]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Recent information is not available in this precise form. The following table provides estimates of the number of households in England, Wales and Scotland with loft insulation in December 1995 and the number of dwellings in Northern Ireland with insulation in 1991.

Thousands

	Total households/ dwellings	With accessible loft	With loft insulation	With 150 mm or more insulation
England	19,581	15,649	14,306	2,687

Scotland	2,108	1,352	1,203	93
Northern Ireland	574	534	465	not known

Draught-proofing

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many dwellings have (a) draught-proofing and (b) draught-proofing of 40 per cent. or more of the dwelling's rooms in (1) England, (2) Wales, (3) Scotland and (4) Northern Ireland. [10243]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Recent information is not available in this precise form. The following table provides estimates of the number of households in England, Wales and Scotland with draught proofing in December 1995 and the number of dwellings in Northern Ireland with draught proofing in 1991.

National Non-domestic Rates

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) the estimate he has made of national non-domestic rates available for distribution in 1996–97 and 1997–98 and (b) the percentage difference in both cash and real terms between the two years; and if he will list the differences between the two years. [10479]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is as follows:

	1996–97	1997–98	Percentage difference
Distributable Amount of non-domestic rates
—cash prices	12,736	12,027	–5.6
—1996–97 prices	12,736	11,791	–7.4

For a list of the differences between the two years, I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, North-East (Mr. Congdon) on 27 November, Official Report, columns 242–44.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment from what date the shadow unitary local authorities scheduled to come into effect in April 1998 are permitted to enter into PFI contracts. [10439]

Sir Paul Beresford: Where an authority gaining unitary status is an existing county or district council, it will be a continuing authority and there is no need for a shadow council; the role of the authority acquiring new functions is expanded to encompass the shadow role. In these cases, whether the authority can enter a PFI contract before it assumes full unitary powers depends on whether the contract pertains to one of its existing or one of its new functions. If it concerns one of the new functions, the authority can enter into a contract only if it will facilitate the preparation for the discharge of its new functions.

There are only two authorities which will be new authorities with a shadow council elected in 1997 and with assumption of full unitary status on 1 April 1998. A shadow authority may enter into contracts only pursuant to those functions which include powers to facilitate the preparation for the discharge of its new functions.

South Yorkshire Supertram

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the effect of the South Yorkshire supertram project on the rates of council tax in Barnsley metropolitan borough council from April 1997. [10321]

Sir Paul Beresford: Under the Secretary of State's provisional capping principles, the South Yorkshire supertram project would have no impact on council taxes in Barnsley. It is, of course for Barnsley to decide whether to spend up to its cap.

Local Government Finance

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the (a) total standard spending assessment and police grant and (b) total external support including revenue support grant, non-domestic rates, standard spending assessment reduction grant and police grants to be received by (i) each individual local authority, (ii) education authorities and (iii) all authorities in (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1996–97 and for each the change over 1996–97 and (a) cash and (b) percentage terms, adjusting 1996–97 amounts for local government reorganisation and for changed local authority functions and responsibilities in 1997–98, and the transfer of responsibilities for care in the community from central Government budgets in 1997–98; and if he will supply this information in written and machine-readable forms; [10694]

(2) what is the (a) total standard spending assessment and police grant and (b) total external support including revenue support grant, non-domestic rates, standard spending assessment reduction grant and police grants to be received by (i) each group of local authority classified by Department of Environment regions, (ii) each group of education authority classified by Department of the Environment region and (iii) all authorities classified by Department of the Environment region in (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1996–97 and for each the change over 1996–97 in (a) cash and (b) percentage terms, adjusting 1996–97 amounts for local government reorganisation and for changed local authority functions and responsibilities in 1997–98, and the transfer of responsibilities for care in the community from central Government budgets in 1997–98; and if he will supply this information in written and machine-readable forms. [10702]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are (a) the provisional standard spending assessment for 1997–98, (b) the standard spending assessment for 1997–98 as it would have been had the Elliott report on area cost adjustments been implemented and (c) the difference between those two figures expressed in (i) percentage and (ii) cash terms for (1) Buckinghamshire county council, (2) Aylesbury Vale district council, (3) Chiltern district council, (4) Wycombe district council and (5) the Thames Valley police authority; and if he will make a statement. [10682]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is contained in the table.

1997–98 provisional SSAs calculated using both the proposed Area Cost Adjustment (ACA) factors and the ACA factors in the Elliott report

	1997–98 provisional SSA using proposed ACA factors £ million	Hypothetical 1997–98 SSA using ACA factors from Elliott report (rounded) £ million	Difference (rounded) £ million	Difference £ Per cent.
Buckinghamshire CC	282.824	292.4	+7.5	+2.6
Aylesbury Vale DC	12.491	13.2	+0.8	+6.1
Chiltern DC	6.939	7.0	+0.1	+0.9
Wycombe DC	13.249	14.0	+0.7	+5.4
Thames Valley Police	103.541	106.3	+2.8	+2.7

The hypothetical SSAs using ACA factors from the Elliott report are approximate. They are believed to be a reasonable guide to the extent of the difference in SSAs, but would require detailed refinements if they were to be used in determining revenue support grant.

Coal Mines (Injuries)

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many major injuries were reported under the requirements of the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 for all United Kingdom coal mines for the year April 1995 to March 1996. [10685]

Sir Paul Beresford: The number of major injuries reported to HM inspectorate of mines occurring in UK coal mines for 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996 was 159.

WALES

Adult Education (Learning Disabilities)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total funding in Wales, in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available, for adult education for people with learning disabilities; what is the projected spending for the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [10200]

Mr. Hague: Expenditure of this kind is determined by local authorities and other bodies; aggregate information is not collected centrally.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10184]

Mr. Hague: None. This is a matter for individual non-departmental public bodies to determine as part of the day-to-day management of their affairs.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants." [10185]

Mr. Hague: My Department has reviewed its procedures to take account of the scrutiny report recommendations. The revised arrangements have been applied to all consultancies undertaken in this financial year.

Skilled Workers

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the number of skilled workers in Wales (a) in employment and (b) unemployed. [9890]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The spring 1996 labour force survey estimates of the skills of persons in Wales are shown in the following table:

Skills of persons of working age in Wales, Spring 1996[1]

Thousands

Skill type	In employment	ILO unemployed[2]
Professional/intermediate	380	15
Skilled (non manual)	242	16
Skilled (manual)	266	21
Partly skilled	187	24
Unskilled	66	10

[1] Excludes persons in the armed forces and those who did not answer.

[2] Skill type defined by last job. Information on the skills of the ILO unemployed who have never worked (estimated to be 14,000 people in Wales) are not available from the Labour Force Survey.

Employment (Students)

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of successful full-time higher education students from institutions in Wales other than the University of Wales gained first destination permanent employment in each of the years 1989–90 to 1993–94. [9974]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested may be found in table 6.10 of the recent Welsh Office publication "Further and Higher Education and Training Statistics in Wales 1996", published in May 1996. A copy of the publication is available in the Library of the House.

Training

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of employees of working age received on-the-job training in Wales, broken down by gender in the most recent year for which figures are available. [9976]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The spring 1996 labour force survey estimated that, in Wales 8 per cent. of male, 5.5 per cent. of female and 6.8 per cent. of all employees of working age received on-the-job training in the four weeks before the interview. The information for numbers receiving training in a year is not available in the form requested.

Roads

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on planned expenditure on new construction and improvement of roads in Wales for the next year. [9972]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend announced our spending plans for 1997–98 on 12 December 1996, Official Report, columns 405-19. These include £113 million for the trunk road and motorway network and £76 million for local roads, including £54 million for transport grant schemes. Details of future improvements to the road network will be published in the Welsh Office's departmental report in the spring.

GCSE Grades

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of school leavers gained GCSE grades A*–C in (a) mathematics, (b) English and (c) science in the most recent year for which figures are available, broken down by gender. [9978]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information is not collected centrally on grades achieved in individual GCSE subjects by school leavers. Information relating to pupils aged 15—age as at 31 August 1995—or the academic year 1995–96 is contained in the following table.

Percentage of 15 year olds[1] in Wales achieving GCSE grade A–C by subject—1996*

	Mathematics	English	Science
Boys	39	40	42
Girls	42	58	43
Pupils	40	49	42

[1] Age as at 31 August 1995.

Assisted Places

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many pupils in each county in Wales have been included in the assisted places scheme in the last five years; and how many are planned in the next two years. [9850]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The number of assisted place pupils in Wales in the last five years, in each of the counties within which participating schools are located, is shown in the following table, along with information the number of assisted places planned in the next two years. Information on individual pupils' place of residence is not held centrally.

The table for 1996–97 and beyond reflects local government reorganisation and includes the additional places made available through the expansion of the scheme from September 1996, at a further seven schools across Wales. Planned places for Denbighshire are subject to redistribution should the proposed closure of Howells senior school, Denbigh proceed.

Inward Investment

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of direct inward investment projects attracted to Wales in each of the years 1992–93 to 1995–96. [9971]

Mr. Hague: The number of overseas generated inward investment projects attracted to Wales in each of the years 1992–93 to 1995–96 are provided in the following table:

	Projects
1992–93	87
1993–94	77
1994–95	57
1995–96	69

Figures based on financial year.

Secondary Schools (Expenditure)

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the amount spent per secondary school pupil in each of the (a) grant-maintained and (b) LEA schools in Wales in the most recent year for which figures are available. [9997]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Comparable information on expenditure per pupil in LEA and grant-maintained schools is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member to provide him with the information and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Class Sizes

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the average class size in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in each of the past 10 years. [10654]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Year	Primary schools	Secondary schools
January 1996	25.9	20.2
January 1995	25.9	20.2
January 1994	25.6	20.1
September 1992	25.0	21.4
September 1991	25.0	21.5
September 1990	24.8	21.0

September 1988	24.8	20.7
September 1987	24.5	21.3
September 1986	24.4	21.6

Notes:
[1] Average class size is calculated as the number of pupils divided by the number of classes. In the case of primary schools, the number of classes used is the number of registered classes (including ordinary, special and nursery classes) whereas for secondary schools it is the number of classes in which the pupils were taught in a specified period on the day of the schools' census.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average class size in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in each local authority area in Wales. [10673]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is shown in the following table. Both LEA maintained and GM schools are included.

Schools

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of schools in Wales (a) have no spare places and (b) are less than 75 per cent. full. [10655]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information is currently available centrally only for most schools outside the former county of Gwynedd. Of those schools, in 1995 approximately (a) 30 per cent. had no spare places and (b) 25 per cent. were less than 75 per cent. full.

TRANSPORT

London Underground

15. Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure safety on London Underground. [8771]

Mr. Bowis: Safety is the top priority for both the Government and for London Transport. The Railways (Safety Case) Regulations 1994 required London Underground to prepare a safety case setting out its approach to safety management, and this was accepted by HM railway inspectorate last January. London Underground intends to update its safety case on a regular basis and to publish an annual safety plan.

20. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve the existing infrastructure of the London Underground system. [8766]

Mr. Bowis: The Government's plans for improving public transport in London, including services on the existing London Underground network, were set out in the transport strategy for London.

London Transport

17. Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of London Transport to discuss London's transport needs. [8769]

Mr. Bowis: I last met the chairman of London Transport on 9 January when we travelled on the first passenger-carrying run of the new Jubilee line extension trains. We were able to see and celebrate the remarkable progress in this expansion of London Underground services.

River Transport

18. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in the last 12 months he has travelled on the River Thames in his official capacity to assess river transport. [8768]

Sir George Young: I have travelled on the River Thames once in the past year in my official capacity, when I visited the Port of London Authority in June last year.

Heathrow-London Rail Link

19. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost of establishing an underground connection at Ealing on the Paddington to Heathrow express line; and if he will make a statement. [8767]

Mr. Bowis: None. The Heathrow express scheme to which my hon. Friend the hon. Member refers is being developed by BAA plc and it would be a matter for it to consider if it wished to introduce a stop at Ealing or on any other part of the route. However, a stopping service is proposed to run from St. Pancras to Heathrow. This is likely to include a stop at Ealing Broadway.

Fenchurch Street Line

21. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received on the Fenchurch Street line. [8765]

Mr. Watts: None.

Road Users (Medicinal Drugs)

22. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the dangers posed by road users who are under the influence of medicinal drugs. [8764]

Mr. Bowis: Some prescribed and over-the-counter medications may impair driving skills. However others, if taken as advised, will improve driving performance by removing the adverse effects of the medical condition. A 1989 study by the Transport Research Laboratory found that the incidence of medicinal drugs in fatal accidents was six times lower than that of alcohol. We recently began a further three-year survey of road fatalities to update our knowledge in this area.

Motorway Noise

23. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to reduce noise from increased traffic levels on existing motorways affecting domestic properties; and if he will make a statement. [8763]

Mr. Watts: Tighter noise emission standards for new vehicles were introduced on 1 October 1996. In addition, when renewing the surface of a road the Highways Agency considers the materials and technology available. Some of the surfacing products now available generate significantly less tyre noise than older surfaces, and they can be used where they are no more expensive in whole-life cost terms than conventional surface treatment.

Manchester Airport

24. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received concerning his Department's open skies policy at Manchester airport. [8762]

Sir George Young: I have received a number of letters recently, including one from my hon. Friend, as a result of Manchester airport's open skies campaign.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which airlines have a right of veto in respect of air services between Bangkok and Manchester airport; what assessment he has made of the conformity of such vetos with fair competition policy; how many such vetos exist; and what proposals he has to remove them from bilateral agreements. [9885]

Infrastructure

25. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he has taken in the last year to improve transport infrastructure in south-east England. [8761]

Sir George Young: The Government are committed to a wide range of measures to improve transport infrastructure in the south-east. In the last year, this has included signing the development agreement for CTRL, continuing work on the Jubilee line extension and funding for 27 local authority transport packages and including in our revised trunk road programme schemes in the south-east with a total value of about £2 billion.

Rail Safety

26. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had recently with bodies responsible for rail safety. [8760]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I met Frank Davies, the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission, on 21 October 1996, to discuss various railway safety matters.

We have also had reports both from the Anglo-French Intergovernmental Commission and from the independent Channel Tunnel Safety Authority on the recent fire in the channel tunnel.

Passenger Rolling Stock

27. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the total investment in cash terms in new passenger rolling stock serving north Kent and south London destinations over the last 10 years. [8758]

Mr. Watts: Expenditure on new passenger rolling stock serving north Kent and south London destinations, for the 10 years from 1986–87 to 1995–96 totalled £510 million at cash prices.

Infrastructure Expenditure (London)

28. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received from (i) the Board of London Transport and (ii) London Underground Ltd. concerning their allocation of expenditure for renewal of their infrastructure. [8757]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and I meet the chairman and other members of the board of London Transport on a regular basis and discuss a wide range of issues including finance.

Shipping Safety

29. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to promote safety for shipping in United Kingdom waters; and if he will make a statement. [8756]

Sir George Young: We have successfully pursued a number of proposals, through the International Maritime Organisation and the European Community, leading to agreements on improving safety standards in shipping. These include the Stockholm agreement on ferry safety, which we shall be implementing shortly through new regulations. We shall continue to work towards the implementation of higher standards in construction and management of ships.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas adjournment; [9797]

(2) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9796]

Sir George Young: I refer to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster today.

Second Tamar Bridge

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the estimated costs to his Department of (a) consultancy work and (b) compulsory purchase in relation to the second Tamar bridge projects in each of the last three years; and what was the total cost to his Department. [10207]

Mr. Watts: The costs for consultancy work are as follows:

Compulsory powers have not been used to purchase properties in relation to this project.

However, properties have been acquired in response to blight notices served on the Secretary of State under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 or applications under discretionary powers in the Highways Act 1980. The approximate costs of these acquisitions are as follows:

1996–97: £2,425,000

Following the abandonment of the project, the properties will be re-sold as soon as possible.

InterCity West Coast

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the public subsidy for InterCity West Coast for services to (a) Watford and (b) Milton Keynes in each of the last five years. [9760]

Mr. Watts: It is not possible to provide subsidy figures for individual rail services. The grant claim for InterCity West Coast over the last three years is as follows:

1996–97: £92.53 million

1995–96: £84.69 million

1994–95: £99.05 million

Prior to 1 April 1994, grant was paid to British Railways Board as a whole, and not in respect of individual rail companies.

Manchester Metro

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if departmental grants towards the costs of the Manchester metro Salford Quays–Eccles extension are conditional on the best and final lowest tender price being secured for this contract. [9842]

Mr. Watts: No. Bidding for the contract to build the Manchester metrolink extension to Salford Quays and Eccles has been conducted under rules prescribed by the European procurement directive. Award criteria were set at the outset of the competition, and notified to the tenderers; bids were evaluated against these criteria.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account he will take when considering funding for the Greater Manchester metrolink extension—Salford Quays to Eccles—of any subsidies paid to EU manufacturers successful in the competitive tendering; and if he will make it a condition of funding that no such subsidies have been or are being paid. [10653]

Mr. Watts: Funding of £17.3 million for the Manchester metrolink extension to Eccles via Salford Quays, through the capital challenge programme, was announced on 16 December. Greater Manchester passenger transport executive is responsible for the award of tenders to build and operate the system.

State aids to manufacturers are regulated and policed by the European Commission. Her Majesty's Government would not knowingly provide support towards a contract to any firm which is in receipt of illegal state aid.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10180]

Mr. Bowis: The following amounts were spent on external consultants by the Department of Tranpsort's non-departmental public bodies in the last five years:

£ thousands

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Trinity House	42	30	34	32	88
Northern Lighthouse Board	271	216	43	13	59
London Regional Passengers' Committee[1]	—	—	—	18	2
The Traffic Director for London	40	120	2,050	3,250	3,700

[1] The Department only assumed responsibility for the London Regional Passengers' Committee in April 1994.

The Department's other non-departmental public bodies—the rail users' consultative committees and the Disabled Persons' Transport Advisory Committee—did not incur expenditure on external consultants in the last five years.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants". [10181]

Mr. Bowis: The actions taken by the Department of Transport in response to the multi-departmental scrutiny on the Government's use of external consultants are listed in the Department's implementation report, which was submitted to the Cabinet Office in April 1996. Copies of the implementation report have been placed in the House Library.

Civil Aviation Authority

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 29 November, Official Report, columns 420–21, when his officials have discussed with the Civil Aviation Authority the issue of commissioning a balance of benefits study in relation to the renegotiation of the US–UK air service agreements (Bermuda II); and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the analysis in relation to the bilateral talks. [10292]

Mr. Bowis: Officials regularly discuss UK–US aviation matters with the Civil Aviation Authority, and such discussions have included the feasibility of an overarching "balance of benefits" study of liberalising UK–US air services. We decided not to instruct the CAA to undertake such an analysis: the number of variables which would need to be taken into account, and assumptions which would have to be made, would make it impossible to model results which could be treated with any confidence. I am however satisfied that UK negotiators are fully briefed for the current series of bilateral talks.

Mr. Bowis: The current UK–Thailand air services arrangements do not permit the operation of services between Bangkok and Manchester by Thai Airways International. The Department of Transport has been seeking talks with the Thai authorities for some time now with a view to liberalising these arrangements.

London Transport Prestige Project

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if a tender for the London Transport prestige project which is not fully compliant with the specification set by London Transport will be eligible for consideration as a preferred bid; and if he will make a statement. [10430]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for London Transport. I understand that it is conducting the prestige competition in accordance with both its normal procurement practices and the relevant European procurement legislation.

Rail Services (Financial Support)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what mechanisms he plans to deliver financial support for rail services in the English and Scottish passenger transport executive areas in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000; and what estimates he has made of the amounts to be provided. [10422]

Mr. Watts: We intend that, subject to the approval of the House of Commons, special grant should be paid in 1997–98 and beyond to all the English passenger transport authorities, for local railway services in their areas. Similarly, The Scottish Office intends, subject to the approval of the House of Commons, to pay special grant to Strathclyde PTA. The exact level of support for these rail services in future years will not be determined finally until the franchises have been signed, and the levels of services settled with the PTEs.

Road Maintenance Costs

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the average cost per mile of maintaining (a) motorways and (b) A roads in (i) 1990 and (ii) 1995. [10346]

Mr. Watts: I regret that data for 1990 are not readily available. However, in financial year 1991–92, roads maintenance expenditure—capital and current—was approximately £152,000 for each mile of motorway and £25,000 for each mile of A road. The equivalent figures for financial year 1994–95 were £166,000 and £34,000 respectively.

South Yorkshire Supertram Project

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will carry out a review of the basis on which his Department took its initial decision to award a section 56 grant to the South Yorkshire supertram project; [10316]

(2) what assessment he has made of his Department's role in sanctioning the total funding package for the South Yorkshire supertram. [10315]

Mr. Watts: As with all such cases, the Department's decision to award section 56 grant, and to sanction other elements of the funding package, was based on an appraisal put forward by the promoter of the project, in this instance South Yorkshire passenger transport executive, and was in accordance with the procedures and criteria published in circular 3/89, "Section 56 Grant for Public Transport." I will consider whether experience of South Yorkshire supertram has wider implications.

Mr Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will (a) publish and (b) place in the Library the results of studies undertaken by his Department into the cost-effectiveness of his Department's support for the South Yorkshire supertram. [10317]

Mr. Watts: Work is still in progress on the supertram monitoring study, commissioned jointly by my Department and South Yorkshire PTE. The "before" surveys relating to this project have already been published. When the full study has been completed, my Department will be discussing arrangements for publication with South Yorkshire PTE.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the liabilities which will fall due to the South Yorkshire metropolitan borough councils after 31 March 1997, arising from the South Yorkshire supertram project; [10320]

(2) what assessment he has made of the advantages of extending the period over which debts incurred by the South Yorkshire metropolitan borough councils arising out of the construction and operation of supertram may be repaid. [10319]

Mr. Watts: My Department and the South Yorkshire local authorities are currently discussing these issues.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the costs to public funds to date of the South Yorkshire supertram project, including all credit approvals, capitalised debts, revenue costs and other liabilities. [10318]

Mr. Watts: The funding authorised by my Department for the construction costs of South Yorkshire supertram is as follows:

Section 56 grant	62.529
Non-trading credit approvals	62.529
Trading credit approvals	81.741
Capitalised interest	15.790
ERDF grant	6.526
Pre-1991 spending	12.759
Total	241.874

The figure for pre-1991 spending includes some items that were funded by South Yorkshire PTE. The total does not include administrative costs incurred by my Department, which could be quantified only at disproportionate cost. These figures do not include operating losses and other post-construction costs, which are a matter for South Yorkshire PTE.

Boeing 747 Fuel Tanks

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the safety of Boeing 747 aircraft fuel tanks. [10322]

Mr. Bowis: The United States National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the accident to TWA flight TW800. The cause of the accident has not yet been established although it is the view of the NTSB that the centre wing fuel tank exploded as part of the accident sequence. The source of ignition for the explosion has yet to be identified and the three theories—bomb, missile and aircraft malfunction—remain open.

Under International Civil Aviation Organisation rules, primary responsibility for promulgating information necessary to maintain the continued airworthiness of an aircraft type rests with the state of design. In the case of the Boeing 747 the US Federal Aviation Administration is the body responsible. As a result of its investigation the NTSB has made some interim safety recommendations to the FAA. If, following consideration of the NTSB safety recommendations, the FAA determines that mandatory corrective action is necessary, it will issue an airworthiness directive. It is the policy of the Civil Aviation Authority automatically to endorse all such directives and to ensure that the operators of relevant UK registered aircraft undertake the prescribed action.

Motorway Service Stations

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with the franchisees of motorway service stations the measures they can take to show when services on one side of the motorway, other than petrol filling stations, are closed. [10324]

Mr. Watts: All motorway service areas are required to offer a range of basic facilities, including toilets, free short-term parking and fuel, 24 hours a day every day of the year. Operators are entitled to close parts of their MSAs during quiet periods but the specified minimum facilities must remain available at all times to all motorway users, including the disabled. If my hon. Friend has a particular problem in mind, perhaps he will let me know and I will arrange for it to be taken up with the operator concerned.

M1 (Lighting)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in lighting the remaining parts of the M1; what is the future timetable; and if he will make a statement. [10330]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Sir Irvine Patnick, dated 13 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the M1 motorway and the possibilities for lighting provision along those remaining unlit sections.

The M1 is lit from Junctions 1 to 19, 20 to 21A, 23 to 26, and 40 to 42. The section between Junctions 42 and 43 will be lit as part of the M1–A1 Link Road Scheme which is currently under construction. In addition, the M1 between Junctions 31 and 32 is programmed to be lit as part of the motorway widening scheme which remains in the programme. There are currently no further lighting schemes programmed for the M1.

Greater Manchester Rail Services

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what schemes are being provided, by what mechanism, for rail services in the Greater Manchester area in 1996–97 which in previous years were supported by the section 20 "bolt on" arrangement and metropolitan railway grant; and what arrangements he plans to introduce for future years. [10420]

Mr. Watts: From 1 April 1996 the franchising director assumed responsibility for the financial support of local rail services in the Greater Manchester area previously supported by the Greater Manchester passenger transport executive. It is intended that from 1 April 1997 responsibility for those services will revert to GMPTE, supported by special grant. It is intended that the level of services to be so supported will broadly reflect that currently supported by the franchising director. Subject to approval by the House of Commons, the grant would be paid under section 88B of the Local Government Act 1988.

A46–A47 Link Road Scheme

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which (a) bodies and (b) individuals have requested meetings with representatives of his Department in respect of the A46–A47 link road scheme; and who notified him of each request. [10314]

Mr. Watts: With the exception of the hon. Member himself, we have no record of any such requests.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if discussions to date involving his Department in respect of the A46–A47 link road constitute routine discussions about funding under the transport policies and programmes process. [10343]

Mr. Watts: Those with Leicestershire county council.

Two-wheeled Motor Vehicles (Training)

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the Driving Standards Agency circular letter to all registered keepers of two-wheeled motor vehicles up to 125cc, dated November 1996, advising them that learners must obtain a compulsory basic training certificate by 1 January 1997; and what assessment he has made of whether the time provided allows a reasonable time for learners to complete the necessary training course. [10331]

Mr. Bowis: We have received about 350 letters and a number of telephone calls since the DSA letter to registered keepers of small motorcycles and mopeds was issued. The change to motorcycle training rules was first announced in August 1995, giving 11 months before the planned date of implementation on 1 July 1996. In March 1996 we deferred implementation until 1 January 1997 to give more time for publicity to reach those affected and for them to take training under the existing rules. The DSA has been publicising the change using leaflets and the media and the November letter to individuals was intended as a final reminder.

The strong demand for training courses during the autumn indicates that the message about the need for training was reaching people. We appreciate that there has nevertheless been a rush to take training courses from those who missed the earlier publicity or had left matters until the last moment and we understand that motorcycle training bodies are endeavouring to meet the demand for courses.

Rail Services (Government Financial Support)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what mechanisms Government financial support for rail services is delivered to the passenger transport executives in England and Scotland; and what estimate he has made of the level of that support during the current financial year. [10421]

Mr. Watts: Metropolitan district councils in England receive recognition of the costs of PTE support for railway passenger services payments. In the current financial year this is included within the calculation of revenue support grant. The support given in this way, and through the Scottish local government finance settlement, amounts to £281.2 million for 1996–97. Railways passenger services in those areas also benefit from expenditure funded by payments under the terms of the deeds of assumption.

National Roads Programme

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by parliamentary constituency each of the schemes in the national roads programme before the 1994 review and the changes to the status of each scheme in the 1994, 1995 and 1996 reviews, including any additional schemes. [10345]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member with details and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

M66 (Contract 3)

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when work is expected to commence on contract 3 for the construction of the M66; what is the length of the contract; and in what month of what year work is expected to be completed. [10502]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Chris Davies, dated 13 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question about the timing of Contract 3 of the M66 Manchester Outer Ring Road.

The present intention is to let this contract in 1998 subject to the availability of funds. We would expect it to be for a period of some two years.

White Hart Roundabout, Northolt

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Sectetary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the cost and time expended by the traffic director and staff to achieve the repair of the phased traffic lights at the White Hart roundabout, Northolt, in December. [10636]

Mr. Bowis: The traffic director for London was not involved in the repair and consequently did not incur any costs. The fault was repaired by the traffic control systems unit under its maintenance contract.

Air Cargo

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the economic consequences for Scotland of a liberalised international air cargo regime; and if he will make a statement. [10665]

Mr. Bowis: The Department of Transport has not made any assessment of an overall liberal air cargo regime for Scotland, since air cargo matters are negotiated bilaterally with individual countries on behalf of the United Kingdom as a whole. In assessing the economic benefits of cargo liberalisation in specific bilateral arrangements, the Department takes account of the overall interests of the United Kingdom, including consumers, airports and airlines.

Rail Privatisation (Pension Funds)

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the names of the trustees of all the pension funds created out of the former British Rail pension fund following the privatisation of British Rail. [10631]

Mr. Watts: In common with other multi-employer pension schemes, the railways pension scheme has one central corporate trustee covering the whole scheme and, if the relevant employers so decide, a pensions committee for individual section funds. These pensions committees operate under arrangements delegated from the central trustee and have the relevant duties and obligations of trustees. The Secretary of State has a locus only in the appointment of members of the pensions committee of the 1994 pensioners section, for which he is the designated employer.

Only the Railways Pension Trustee Company has the names of all current trustees. The current members of the pensions committee of the 1994 pensioners section of the railways pension scheme are:

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list for each franchise let since 31 October the details of payments to or from the franchise in the same format as his answer of 31 October, to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich, (Mrs. Dunwoody) Official Report, columns 241–42; [10418]

(2) if he will list the amount of support paid to British Rail for franchises let since 31 October before franchising and the amounts of administered profit included within such support. [10419]

Mr. Watts: The information is set out in the table.

Payments to the Franchising Director appear as negative amounts.
All payments are real amounts.

DEFENCE

Range Facilities

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities are available at the Shoeburyness range that are not available at any other range of his Department. [10153]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 13 January 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the facilities available at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) Shoeburyness range which are not available at any other range, since as Chief Executive of DERA this is a matter for which I am responsible.

The Shoeburyness range has the only facilities within DERA which enable the following activities to be undertaken:

(a) overwater recovery for shells to a range of 24 kilometres

(b) long range ground to ground firing up to 17 kilometres

(c) Environmental Test Centre for hazardous stores and weapons

(d) ammunition disposal meeting Environmental Agency requirements

(e) fragmentation trials routinely requiring a danger area above 1,800 metres radius.

I hope this information is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy for the long-term provision of range facilities for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency; and if he will make a statement. [10274]

Mr. Arbuthnot: DERA's ranges are provided to meet the current and future needs of the Ministry of Defence and its prime contractors in a competitive and cost-effective manner. Because current requirements are declining, especially for ranges in support of the land programmes, DERA is at present undertaking a study to determine the most cost effective way to provide these essential capabilities. Major users of DERA's land ranges, both within the Ministry of Defence and UK industry, are being consulted. No final decisions have been taken, but if the study recommends significant changes to the way in which the land ranges are run, then staff, unions and other interested parties will be fully consulted in the normal way.

Nerve Agents

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been carried out by the Chemical Defence Establishment, Porton Down, to test the new treatment of a combination of the drugs physostigmine and hyoscine against nerve agents; when these tests (a) began and (b) ended; what were their conclusions; and when the new treatment entered service with the armed forces. [10245]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisolm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 13 January 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning studies carried out by Porton Down to test the new combination of physostigmine and hyoscine against the effects of nerve agents. The Chemical Biological Defence Section (CBD) at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

Assessments of the physostigmine hyoscine combination as a possible pre-treatment against nerve agent poisoning were first reported by CBD in 1984. Further studies into its effect against a range of different nerve agents and its electrophysiological, biochemical and behavioural effects have continued since then and are still ongoing.

No work to determine the efficacy of the pre-treatment against the effects of nerve agent poisoning has been conducted on humans. Studies to assess the military acceptability of the commercially licensed drugs which are combined in the proposed pre-treatment have recently commenced. This work will continue for some years before any recommendations can be made regarding the suitability of the proposed pre-treatment for general use with UK armed forces. The new physostigmine/hyoscine pre-treatment has not yet entered service with UK armed forces.

I hope this information is helpful.

Franco-British Naval Agreement

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the text of the Franco-British naval agreement signed at the recent Franco-British summit at Bordeaux. [9768]

Mr. Soames: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis), on 13 November, Official Report, columns 214-15, to the hon. Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson). A copy of the UK-French naval letter of intent is in the Library of the House.

Auxiliary Oilers

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to announce the award of an order for auxiliary oilers for the Royal Navy. [10544]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence hopes to be able to make this announcement within the near future.

Organophosphate Pesticide Investigation Team

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the work of the organophosphate pesticide investigation team set up on 11 October; and what budget is allotted to support its future work. [9591]

Mr. Soames: The organophosphate pesticide investigation team has not been assigned a separate budget, and costs incurred by its activities currently form part of the budget of the Deputy Chief of Defence Staff (Programmes and Personnel). The estimated net staff cost associated with the production of the substantive report dated 6 December is £30,725.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to rectify the failings of his Department to keep files in accordance with standing procedures to which reference is made at paragraph 1.B.15 of the report D/OPPIT/3 of his departmental organophosphate pesticide investigation team, dated 6 December. [9594]

Mr. Soames: Steps have been taken to ensure that the administrative support necessary to keep files in accordance with standing procedures is available to those areas of the Department referred to in paragraph 1.B.15 of the organophosphate pesticide investigation team report.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will extend the remit of his organophosphate pesticide investigation team to examine the methodology of earlier studies into effects of organophosphates, to which reference is made in paragraph 1.A.9 in his departmental substantive report of the organophosphate investigation team, dated 6 December. [9672]

Mr. Soames: The earlier MOD documents referred to in paragraph 1.A.9 of the Departmental substantive report of the organophosphate investigation team are concerned with the use of, not the effects of exposure to, organophosphate pesticides. As it made clear in paragraph 3.H.12 of the report, the organophosphate investigation team is not qualified to assess the effects of exposure to pesticides.

Chapelcross and Calder Hall Reactors

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost to his Department of operating the (i) Chapelcross and (ii) Calder Hall reactors for each of the last five years. [9636]

Mr. Soames: The reactors at Chapelcross and Calder Hall are owned and operated by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. Details of the contracts between BNFL and the Ministry of Defence for services provided at these sites are commercially confidential and therefore under the code of practice on access to Government information are not given as such information could harm the effective management and operations of the public service.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment was made of the quality control applied to the production of the pertussis vaccine purchased from France, to which reference is made in his departmental memorandum issued in support of the statement made about Gulf war illness on 10 December Official Report, columns 119–23. [9633]

Mr. Soames: No assessment was made of the quality control applied to the production of the pertussis vaccine purchased from France for use during Operation Granby. The Department of Health acted as agents for the import of the vaccine, and arranged for it to be tested by the National Institute of Biological Standards and Control before it was released for use.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the basis of the difference in assessment between his Department and that of the United States Government concerning the likely threat posed by plague in the Gulf war; and which is now assessed to be more accurate. [9568]

Mr. Soames: The factors influencing US Government assessments are not a matter for my Department. The UK assessment at the time of the Gulf war was that Iraq had probably developed plague as a biological weapon. We have had no cause to revise this assessment since then.

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9489]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested in respect of my Department and its agencies, as at 1 November 1996, is set out.

	Total	Male	Female
Full/Part time	115,683	79,593	36,090
Full time	110,649	79,121	31,528
Part time	5,034	472	4,562

Both permanent and casual UK based staff are included. The information is in the form of a headcount, i.e. both full and part-time personnel count as one.

Training Airspace

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes in air defence training airspace requirements will occur as a result of the introduction of the Eurofighter 2000; what factors underlie these changes; and what plans he has for changes in airspace structure to accommodate such changes. [9838]

Mr. Soames: Work is under way to identify the training airspace requirements for Eurofighter.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the briefed western boundary of the airspace in use over northern England and southern Scotland on 17 November 1995 for mutual air combat training by RAF Tornados and Dutch air force F16 aircraft operating from RAF Leeming. [9841]

Mr. Soames: The briefed western boundary of the airspace used by RAF Tornado and Royal Netherlands Air Force F16 aircraft for mutual air combat training on 17 November 1995 was a line from 55 degrees 59 minutes north, 2 degrees 50 minutes west to 55 degrees 3 minutes north, 2 degrees 12 minutes west.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to exclude advisory route airspace from military exercises. [9840]

Mr. Soames: There are no plans to exclude advisory route airspace from military exercises.

Scheduled Exercises (Purple Series)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates and locations of scheduled exercises in the Purple series in the next 12 months. [9873]

Mr. Soames: The next exercise in the Purple series is programmed for October 1997 and has been designated Purple LINK. It will be a computer-assisted exercise based in the United Kingdom and will be undertaken with the Americans. This is the only Purple exercise planned for 1997.

Air Combat Manoeuvring Instrumentation

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to acquire air combat manoeuvring instrumentation equipment for the Royal Air Force which can be used without ground relay facilities. [9834]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We are planning to issue an invitation to tender for the rangeless airborne instrumented debriefing system in the near future. If a limited trial programme proves successful, we plan to procure RAIDS for the entire fast jet fleet by around the turn of the century.

AWACS Controllers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to permit airborne warning and communication system controllers to co-ordinate traffic under their control directly with (a) ground-based military air traffic controllers and (b) ground-based civil air traffic controllers. [9877]

Mr. Soames: There are currently no plans to permit AWACS controllers to co-ordinate traffic under their control directly with ground-based military or civil air traffic controllers.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances controllers in AWACS aircraft are permitted to provide a radar service to aircraft under their control using a radar picture generated by a ground-based radar; and what plans he has to change these rules. [9875]

Mr. Soames: Controllers in AWACS aircraft are not permitted to provide a radar service to aircraft under their control using a radar picture generated by a ground-based radar. There are currently no plans to change this.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those civil air traffic control radars which supply data directly to the UK air defence ground environment; and what plans he has for additional civil radars to be so linked. [9839]

Mr. Soames: The civil air traffic control radars which supply data to the UK air defence ground environment are Burrington, Pease Pottage, Debden, Claxby, Clee Hill and Great Dun Fell. Additional radars which can be linked as required are Perwinnes Hill, Tiree, Stornoway and Sumburgh.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances United Kingdom air defence ground environment controllers are permitted to provide a radar service to aircraft under their control using a radar picture generated by an airborne warning and communications system aircraft; and what plans he has to change these rules. [9876]

Mr. Soames: UK air defence ground environment controllers are not permitted to provide a radar service to aircraft under their control using a radar picture by AWACS aircraft. There are currently no plans to change this.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances UK air defence ground environment controllers are permitted to provide a radar service to aircraft under their control using a radar picture generated by more than one ground-based radar; and what plans he has for changes to these rules. [9836]

Mr. Soames: UK air defence ground environment controllers provide a radar service to aircraft under their control with a single radar selected and are not permitted to provide such a service using more than one ground-based radar. There are currently no plans to change this.

Radiation Experiments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what follow-up tests his Department has conducted on the long-term effects of radiation experiments on volunteers at (a) Harwell and (b) Porton Down; [10206]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the consent forms signed by volunteers taking part in human radiation experiments at (a) Harwell and (b) Porton Down. [10208]

Mr. Soames: It is important to draw a distinction between studies involving minimal amounts of radioactive material used as a tracer and so-called radiation experiments in which individuals are exposed to high doses of radiation in order to assess the damage produced. All studies carried out by my Department, including those carried out on volunteers attending Porton Down, were in the former category. Consequently, no follow-up action was deemed necessary by Porton Down. Consent forms were not in use in the 1950s/early 1960s when the studies involving radio-labelled tracers were conducted at Porton Down.

Matters relating to Harwell are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the guidelines issued by his Department to (a) the Harwell medical ethics committee regarding radiation experiments on humans and (b) the Committee for the Safety of Human Experiments, the medical sub-committee of the Defence Scientific Advisory Council, and the independent ethics committee regarding radiation experiments on humans at Porton Down. [10209]

Mr. Soames: All studies involving volunteers at Porton Down are governed by the principles for ethical control of human experiments as stated in the Nuremburg code, the Helsinki declaration and the guidelines of the Royal College of Physicians. My Department does not issue guidelines to the independent ethics committee of experts who oversee the volunteer programme at Porton Down. Porton Down has not carried out any radiation experiments on humans. Work carried out in the 1950s and early 1960s involved the use of radio-labelled tracer materials in decontamination and medical evaluations and was subject to the normal ethical controls.

Matters relating to Harwell are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information is made available to civil operators concerning the activity status of low-level overland training areas. [9874]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 8 February 1996, Official Report, columns 356–57.

Tornado F3

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the capability of the identification friend or foe system in the Tornado F3 aircraft to receive the secondary surveillance radar codes of civil aircraft. [9879]

Mr. Soames: The Tornado F3 is able to receive secondary surveillance codes of civil aircraft, provided it has been notified of the civil aircraft's code number. In common with other military aircraft and our allies, civil aircraft are located chiefly through use of the F3's primary radar and visual identification. These techniques augment procedural separations enforced by air traffic authorities.

Air Force Training (Former Warsaw Pact)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates and locations of scheduled training deployments to the United Kingdom by units from air forces of former Warsaw pact countries in the next 12 months. [9833]

Mr. Soames: No such deployments have been finalised for 1997, although discussions with a number of air forces are continuing.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year; [9800]

(2) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas adjournment. [9801]

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Vosper Thorneycroft (Official Appointment)

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what scrutiny procedures were undertaken in respect of the recent appointment of a senior MOD official to Vosper Thorneycroft; if any recommendation was made to delay the appointment; what (a) formal and

(b) informal contact the official had with Vosper Thorneycroft while at his Department; and if he will make a statement. [9881]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The official's application to take up the appointment with Vosper Thornycroft (UK) Ltd. was considered under the rules on the acceptance of outside appointments by Crown servants. Although he had frequent contact with his prospective employer, he was not in a position where he could influence the award of defence contracts. Ten competitors of Vosper Thornycroft (UK) Ltd. were consulted about the proposed appointment but none wished to raise objections. It would not have been appropriate, in the circumstances, to have placed any restriction on the proposed employment.

Murdered Tour Guide (Cyprus)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the parents of the murdered tour guide in Cyprus have been informed by Her Majesty's Government that they have the right to claim compensation against the Ministry of Defence. [10326]

Mr. Soames: I understand that the family in question are aware that they have the same rights to make a claim for compensation against the Ministry of Defence as they would have against any other employer or organisation.

Battle of Trafalgar

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to begin preparations for the commemoration of the bicentenary of the battle of Trafalgar and the death of Nelson. [10865]

Mr. Soames: It is too early for detailed arrangements or plans to have been considered by my Department for this important event in October 2005. However, we expect that there will be major coverage, and we are already looking at the possibility of Navy days being held at Portsmouth that year.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report on the Government's use of external consultants. [10169]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In response to the Cabinet Office's report my Department drew up an action plan, which was forwarded to the Cabinet Office in October 1994. This set out the action my Department would be taking on the recommendations contained in the report. As a follow-up exercise to the action plan, all Departments were required to submit, within two years, an implementation report setting out progress on their action plans. My Department's implementation report was forwarded to the Cabinet Office in March 1996 and I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Expenditure

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each year since 1979 the adjustments made to the cash plans for defence spending in future years to take into account revised forecasts of the level of inflation indicating, in each case, whether the increase or decrease in the cash plan matched exactly the revised inflation forecast. [9468]

Mr. Soames: Like all Departments, the Ministry of Defence determines its spending plans in consultation with the Treasury during the public expenditure survey. Adjustments to the previous years' plans are made for a variety of reasons, of which forecast inflation is only one. Therefore it is not usually possible to identify a specific figure from any given set of spending plans that represents an adjustment solely attributable to changes in forecast levels of inflation. The spending plans announced in November 1996, however, maintained the real value of the money planned for spending in 1997–98 because of the Government's commitment to a period of stability for the armed forces. Lower inflation forecasts enabled this to be achieved at a lower cost than estimated at the time of the 1995 public expenditure survey. Money has also been added to the defence budget to cover special housing costs.

Insecticides

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what exemptions apply to his Department in respect of the (a) Food and Environment Protection Act 1985, (b) Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 and (c) Plant Protection Products Regulations 1995, in respect of the use of insecticides. [10635]

Mr. Soames: The Food and Environment Protection Act 1985—the 1985 Act—does not apply to land where there is no interest other than a Crown interest or to land which is exclusively in Crown occupation.

The Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986—the 1986 regulations—were made under the 1985 Act and the same exemptions apply.

The Plant Protection Products Regulations 1995—the 1995 Regulations—were made under the European Communities Act 1972, which does not provide for Crown exemption. However, where the 1995 regulations refer to the 1986 regulations, the exemption provided in the 1985 Act would apply.

Vaccinations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department decided to declassify details of vaccinations used by departmental medical personnel; and what factors underlay this decision. [10650]

Mr. Soames: I announced in my statement to the House on 10 December, Official Report, columns 119–23, our decision to declassify details of the vaccinations used during the Gulf conflict. The decision was taken in the light of a detailed review of the classification of the vaccination programme, given the developments in UK defensive capability against biological warfare agents since 1991.

Polaris

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current operating costs of the Polaris fleet; what were the costs in each of the last 15 years at 1996

prices; and what sum the Government have allocated for (a) decommissioning and (b) scrapping the Polaris (i) submarines, (ii) missiles and (iii) warheads. [10746]

Mr. Soames: The operating costs of the Polaris fleet in each of the last 15 years at 1995–96 prices are as follows:

Financial year	Spend at constant prices £million[1]
1981–82	470
1982–83	472
1983–84	410
1984–85	367
1985–86	383
1986–87	434
1987–88	434
1988–89	373
1989–90	303
1990–91	250
1991–92	183
1992–93	162
1993–94	107
1994–95	67
1995–96	63

[1] All at 1995–96 prices using GDP deflators.

Details of operating costs during the current financial year are in the course of preparation.

The estimated cost for the defuelling, de-equipping and laying-up of the Polaris fleet of submarines is approximately £71 million at 1996–97 prices, over the next 10 years. No firm estimate is yet available of the likely cost of eventual disposal.

The cost of decommissioning and scrapping Polaris missiles currently totals £8 million. These costs include sums already spent plus values of contracts let. The sum covers missile decommissioning/scrapping costs but excludes warhead disposal.

It is not our practice to reveal costs associated with the warhead.

Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men and women and of what rank obtained vocational qualifications in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [10453]

Mr. Soames: All three services are placing increasing emphasis on accreditation of service training and experience.

It is Navy Board policy to negotiate from civilian awarding bodies the highest level of recognition for naval skills and training which meet operational performance statements. The Royal Navy is vigorously pursuing the issue of VQs, principally in the area of NVQs. Within the Royal Navy there are currently three approved assessment centres for NVQs and a further three are planned for designation during the next year. During the current financial year the Royal Navy expects that nearly 8,000 civilian qualifications will be awarded as a result of in-house training programmes and this figure is expected to increase year on year.

Under the Army's VQ policy, all Army personnel are to be given the maximum opportunity throughout their careers to gain VQs and other forms of professional recognition for their workplace skills, knowledge and experience. The process of mapping Army trades and employments against the national vocational standards is progressing well. Over 1,700 VQs were gained by Army officers and soldiers during the period 1 April to 30 September 1996. It is anticipated that schemes offering appropriate qualifications will be available to most Army personnel within two years.

It is RAF policy that everyone will have the opportunity to achieve an NVQ within 18 months of joining the service and most trades have either incorporated NVQs into their initial training courses or are on the verge of doing so. Many RAF personnel are also achieving further trade based or management VQs throughout their service. A range of schemes are being pursued with a view to increasing the availability of VQs including the NVQ accreditation of prior learning which, since its introduction in 1996, enrolled some 9,800 RAF engineering and supply personnel, of whom over 500 have already been awarded certificates.

In addition to in-house initiatives, across the three services individuals are encouraged to pursue VQs in a private capacity to prepare themselves for outside employment when they leave the service.

Detailed information on the vocational qualifications obtained by different ranks of service personnel during the last five years is not held centrally and could not be provided without disproportionate costs.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9484]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Department employs 6,095 staff in the headquarters area, of whom 3,377 are male and 2,718 are female; 3,337 male staff are full-time and 40 are part-time; 2,314 female staff are full-time and 404 are part-time.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas adjournment; [9815]

(2) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9814]

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the answer made by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on Wednesday 18 December 1996, Official Report, column 699.

Public Bodies

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Babraham Institute as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10112]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Institute for Animal Health as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10104]

(3) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Institute of Arable Crops Research as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10044]

(4) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Institute of Food Research as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10048]

(5) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research as representatives of UK interests; and how many of these employees are leading the UK team on their committee; [10140]

(6) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the John Innes Centre as representatives of UK interests; and how many of these employees are leading the UK team on their committee; [10136]

(7) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Roslin Institute as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10108]

(8) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Silsoe Research Institute as representatives of UK interests; and how many of these employees are leading the UK team on their committee; [10132]

(9) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Institute of Arable Crops Research; [10045]

(10) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees for the Institute for Animal Health; [10105]

(11) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Institute of Food Research; [10049]

(12) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research; [10141]

(13) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the John Innes Centre; [10137]

(14) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Roslin Institute; [10109]

(15) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Silsoe Research Institute; [10133]

(16) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Babraham Institute. [10113]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The staff at these institutes are employed by the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council—BBSRC. The prior options process is designed to ensure that the interests of the United Kingdom are best served by these institutes. In most cases, membership of committees in fact reflects the professional or personal qualifications of the individual concerned. Although there are a number of questions of definition, the institutes have provided information on committee membership which is summarised in the table.

Committee membership of staff at BBSRC institutes

	(a) UK	(b) Europe	(c) International
Babraham		2
Institute of Food Research	5	1

Committee membership of staff at BBSRC institutes

	(a) UK	(b) Europe	(c) International
Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research (IGER)	1	1	1
Silsoe Research Institute (SRI)	15	2	9

IGER has indicated that a UK and an international committee is chaired by staff. SRI has indicated that three international committees are chaired by staff.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratories as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the UK team on their committee. [10128]

Mr. Taylor: The prior options process is designed to ensure that the interests of the United Kingdom are best served by research establishments.

Employees of the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratory are members of a very large and diverse range of UK, European and international bodies. The total number of such bodies is in excess of 400. This includes some 45 European bodies, and some 40 international bodies, on which members of the laboratories' staff represent UK interests. In about a quarter of these, the member of the laboratories' staff leads the UK team.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the British Geological Survey as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10100]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the British Geological Survey. [10101]

Mr. Taylor: The staff at the British Geological Survey are employed by the Natural Environment Research Council. The prior options process is designed to ensure that the interests of the United Kingdom are best served by these bodies. In most cases, membership in fact reflects the professional or personal qualifications of the individual. However, information on committee membership is set out in the attached table.

[1] Those holding senior positions.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the British Geological Survey; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10098]

(2) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the institutes and laboratories making up the Centre for Coastal and Marine Sciences; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10094]

Mr. Taylor: Work on this and other similar reviews has principally involved staff in the Natural Environment Research Council. The NERC estimates the Council's expenditure on the reviews covering the three NERC establishments: the British Geological Survey, the Centre for Coastal and Marine Sciences and the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology as £0.4 million, borne by the NERC allocation from the science budget. It is not possible to quantify the costs related to the work by staff elsewhere, for example in Government Departments.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Toxicology Unit; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10027]

(2) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Radiobiology Unit; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10035]

(3) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Virology Unit; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10051]

(4) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Reproductive Biology Unit; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10031]

(5) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Dunn Nutrition Unit; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10039]

Mr. Taylor: The reviews of these units have been completed. Any implementation costs would depend on decisions which have not yet been taken.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Roslin Institute; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10107]

(2) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10139]

(3) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Institute of Arable Crops Research; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10043]

(4) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Silsoe Research Institute; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10131]

(5) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Babraham Institute; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10111]

(6) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Institute of Food Research; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10047]

(7) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Institute for Animal Health; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10103]

(8) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the John Innes Centre; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10135]

Mr. Taylor: The reviews of these institutes have been completed. Any implementation costs would depend on decisions which have not yet been taken.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Toxicology Unit; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10026]

(2) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Radiobiology Unit; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10034]

(3) how many has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Virology Unit; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10050]

(4) how much money has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Reproductive Biology Unit; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10030]

(5) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Dunn Nutrition Unit; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10038]

Mr. Taylor: Work on all these reviews has principally involved existing staff in the Medical Research Council and several Government Departments. It is not possible to quantify the costs relating to individual reviews. However, the MRC considers that overall expenditure on readily identifiable specific costs were £65,000 broken down as follows:

MRC Head Office staff time: £38,000

Consultants' fee: £23,000

Travel: £4,000.

The overall figure specifically excludes staff time at the MRC units concerned and clerical support at head office.

These sums are paid from the MRC allocation from the science budget.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratories; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10126]

Mr. Taylor: The cost of two prior options reviews of the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratories was £36,000, excluding the cost of time spent by existing members of the laboratories' staff. The cost was met from the laboratories' running costs budget.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratories; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10127]

Mr. Taylor: The prior options reviews of the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratories have been completed and announced, and there are no future costs to be met.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratories. [10129]

Mr. Taylor: The approximate numbers of committees chaired by employees of the Daresbury and Rutherford Appleton Laboratories are as follows:

(a) United Kingdom: 15

(b) European: 10

(c) International: 5.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory; and from which budget these sums were paid; [9998]

(2) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [9999]

Mr. Taylor: The prior options review of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory was announced on 29 September 1995. It formed part of an interdepartmental review of the options for the future of all of Government laboratories. NWML's review was carried out by DTI staff. Costs cannot specifically be disaggregated but are estimated to have been less than £10,000. The conclusions of the review were that NWML should remain an agency. There are no costs associated with the implementation of the review's findings.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Centre for Coastal and Marine Sciences as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10096]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Centre for Coastal and Marine Sciences. [10097]

Mr. Taylor: The staff at the Centre for Coastal and Marine Sciences are employed by the Natural Environment Research Council. The prior options process is designed to ensure that the interests of the United Kingdom are best served by these bodies. In most cases, membership in fact reflects the professional or personal qualifications of the individual. However, information on committee membership is set out in the attached table.

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about employees as chairman of committees.

The details are as follows:

(a) 2 UK committees

(10) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Reproductive Biology Unit. [10033]

Mr. Taylor: The staff at these institutes are employed by the Medical Research Council. The prior options process is designed to ensure that the interests of the United Kingdom are best served by these institutes. In most cases, membership of committees in fact reflects the professional or personal qualifications of the individual concerned. Although there are a number of questions of definition, the institute has provided information on committee membership which is summarised in the table.

Radiation and Genome Stability Unit[1]	2	0	0

None of these committees are chaired by staff.

[1] The Radiation and Genome Stability Unit and the Mammalian Genetics Unit were formed in a reorganisation of the former Radiobiology Unit.

Oil Platforms

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the viability of zero-discharge oil platforms. [10483]

Mr. Page: My Department is supporting and co-operating in the research and development which is leading towards the reduction of emissions to the marine environment and to the atmosphere. The concept of a zero discharge platform is very difficult to put into practice but my Department is working to encourage the adoption of such arrangements where these are possible and likely to bring a real benefit to the environment.

Arms Contracts (British Companies)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the extent of British companies' involvement in arms contracts prohibited under UN sanctions. [10749]

Mr. Nelson: Enforcement of export controls and controls on the supply and delivery of goods to specific destinations, imposed in accordance with resolutions of the United Nations Security Council is a matter for the Commissioners of HM Customs and Excise. It is not, however, Customs' general practice to comment publicly about the existence or nature of any investigations of individuals or companies not yet accused of criminal offences, since to do so could risk prejudicing any ongoing inquiries or future criminal proceedings.

Armoured Vehicles (Indonesia)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 9 December, Official Report, column 29, relating to the issue of licences to Avis for the export of armoured vehicles to Indonesia, what is the associated equipment to which he referred in his answer. [10744]

Mr. Nelson: The associated equipment to which my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade referred in his answer of 9 December 1996 consists of ammunition, radio equipment, two gunnery desk top simulators, technical publications and a supply of spare parts and workshop tools. The latter equipment comprises basic components for such items as engine controls, steering, brakes, electric gearbox controls, and exhaust systems all for the support of the armoured vehicles. They would be too numerous to list.

Iraq (Trade Restrictions)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent relaxations there have been in trade restrictions between British companies and Iraq. [10747]

Mr. Nelson: On 11 December, my Department issued an open general licence to communicate. This allows UK companies to comply with the procedures that will be employed by the United Nations Security Council Committee, established by resolution 661 (1990), to implement the arrangements set out in resolution 986 (1995). Under the licence, companies may discuss and sign contracts with a view to exporting to Iraq, medicine, health supplies, foodstuffs and materials, and supplies for essential civilian needs, as well as parts and equipment essential for the safe operation of the Kirkuk-Yumurtalik pipeline system in Iraq. However, companies will still require individual licences to export such goods.

Energy Council

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress was made towards agreeing a European directive on gas liberalisation at the EU Energy Council of Ministers meeting on 3 December, and if he will make a statement. [10823]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 9 December, Official Report, column 30 and the hon. Member for Blaneau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 11 December, Official Report, column 274.

Crown Post Office, Newcastle under Lyme

Mrs. Golding: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for how long the Crown post office has operated from the Iron Market in Newcastle under Lyme. [10503]

Mr. Page: I understand from the Post Office that a post office has operated in Iron Market, Newcastle under Lyme since 1969.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the turnover for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 at the Crown post office in Newcastle under Lyme. [10504]

Mr. Page: Turnover figures for individual post offices are commercially confidential.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many customers used the Crown post office in Newcastle under Lyme in each year since 1988. [10505]

Mr. Page: I understand from the Post Office that the annual number of transactions since 1993–94 at the Crown post office in Iron Market Newcastle under Lyme has been:

Year	Number of transactions
1993–94	1,480,281
1994–95	1,646,161
1995–96	1,615,557
1996–97	[1]942,814

Information for earlier years is not available.
[1] To end November 1996.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10182]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department is responsible for 22 executive non-departmental public bodies, 25 advisory bodies and seven tribunals, considering the 28 industrial tribunals as one body. I regret that the information requested by the hon. Member is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Toxic Chemicals

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many United Kingdom companies are licensed under the Chemical Weapons Act 1996 to manufacture toxic chemicals; and how many licence applications he has refused. [10414]

Mr. Nelson: Two applications have so far been received for individual licences to produce schedule 1 chemicals in excess of 5g in 1997; licences have been issued in both cases. Any companies or individuals wishing to produce up to 5g of schedule 1 chemicals under the open general licence issued pursuant to the Chemical Weapons Act 1996 are required to submit a notification by 15 January or 14 days after the date of first production; no such notifications have been received to date.

Surveillance and Bugging Equipment

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what controls there are on the sale to the general public of surveillance and bugging equipment. [10416]

Mr. Ian Taylor: None, but the use of such equipment is subject to relevant legislation, for example governing the integrity of communications.

Newspapers

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when he last met representatives from the Multiple Newsagents Association; and if he will make a statement on the matters which were discussed at that meeting; [10648]

(2) if he will request the Director General of Fair Trading to refer newspaper distribution to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. [10646]

Mr. John. M. Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones) on 2 December 1996, Official Report, column 495.

Subsidence Claims

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those constituencies in which there are outstanding claims under the Coal Mining Subsidence Act 1991; and how many cases there are in each constituency. [10542]

Mr. Page: This is a matter for the Coal Authority or other "responsible person" as defined by the Coal Industry Act 1994.

Faraday Partnership Scheme

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the level of financial support given by his Department to the Faraday partnership scheme announced by the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council; and what is the projected expenditure. [9973]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The DTI welcomes the EPSRC Faraday partnerships scheme as a contribution to wider efforts to link academia and industry, and will monitor progress. It may be possible for potential partnerships to make bids into any further rounds of the sectoral challenge.

No allocation has been made from DTI central funds for 1997–98 because of financial constraints.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently receiving invalidity benefit in the Rhondda benefit district; what percentage this is of the total population of working age; and what are the average percentages for (a) Wales and (b) England and Wales. [7969]

Mr. Burt: The administration of incapacity benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Allan Rogers, dated 18 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people are currently receiving Invalidity Benefit (IVB) in the Rhondda benefit district; what percentage this is of the total population of working age; and what are the average percentage for (a) Wales and (b) England and Wales.

The information is not available in the format requested. Sickness Benefit and IVB were replaced by Incapacity Benefit (IB) on 13 April 1995. The Rhondda area is dealt with by Tonypandy Benefits office, this forms part of the Benefits Agency (BA) South Wales District.

At 31 May 1996, the latest date for which figures are available, 9,820 customers were in receipt of IB from the Tonypandy Benefits Office.

Data on the working population is not available for individual BA office therefore it is not possible to give the percentage of the working population in receipt of IB for Tonypandy Benefits office.

The available information is shown in the attached table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Percentage of total population of working age in receipt of incapacity benefit

	Per cent.
Tonypandy Benefits Office	n/a
Wales	8.7
England and Wales	4.3

The Incapacity Benefit figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample of the PSCS (INCAP) computer system at 31 May 1996, and exclude a small number of cases not held on this system.

Percentage population figures are calculated from the latest figures available (mid 1994) from "Population Trends" published by the Office for National Statistics, Summer 96 edition.

Benefits Agency (Telephone Calls)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of claimants of benefits other than the jobseeker's allowance make their first contact with the Benefits Agency by telephone (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Wales. [9353]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 18 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what proportion of claimants of benefits other than the Jobseeker's Allowance make their first contact with the Benefits Agency (BA) by telephone (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Wales.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because there has been no UK customer survey on first contact with the BA since 7 October 1996, when Jobseeker's Allowance came into operation.

The statistics available from the most recent customer contact research, conducted in 1995, show percentage of first contact with BA for six benefits. The research makes no distinction between the UK as a whole and individual countries within. Consequently a breakdown of the information to show data for Wales is not available.

The findings of the research concluded that the percentage of benefit recipients whose first contacts with the BA were through the telephone was, by benefit: Income Support 35 per cent., Social Fund 40 per cent., Retirement Pension 56 per cent., Family Credit 58 per cent., Disability Living Allowance 56 per cent. and Child Benefit 57 per cent.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Family Credit

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of family credit there have been in each year since 1990 in Darlington. [9732]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 18 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many recipients of Family Credit (FC) there have been in each year since 1990 in Darlington.

The information is not available in the format requested. It may be helpful if I explain that FC is administered centrally by the Family Credit Unit. Statistics are produced on a national basis and provide the number of families in receipt of FC within a particular Benefits Agency (BA) office area at a given date. However, this only serves as a "snap-shot" of the position at that given date and does not provide details of the number of families in receipt of FC annually.

Furthermore, details relating to FC claims are normally destroyed after 18 months. However, the information requested is currently available from 1993 onwards and these figures are as follows:

Families in receipt of FC in the area of the BA Darlington Office

	Number
April 1993	1,605
October 1993	1,773
April 1994	1,748
October 1994	1,911
April 1995	2,016
October 1995	2,087
April 1996	2,119
October 1996	2,298

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Benefits Agency Appointments

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people were given financial assistance to travel to Benefits Agency appointments in each of the last five years; [9354]

(2) what was the total amount paid out in financial assistance to people travelling to Benefits Agency appointments in each of the last five years. [9355]

Mr. Roger Evans: This an operational matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 18 December 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many people were given financial assistance to travel to Benefits Agency (BA) appointments in each of the last five years and; what was the total amount paid out in financial assistance to people travelling to BA appointments in each of the last five years.

The information is not available for the number of people given financial assistance and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Financial assistance is given to people travelling to BA offices when they have been invited to attend an office to discuss benefit entitlement. The BA provides reimbursement of the travelling expenses where these are in excess of £0.80p.

The BA also meets the cost of travelling expenses and where appropriate loss of earnings and travelling expenses for a companion or interpreter, incurred in attending a medical examination at a medical examination centre. Most medical examination centres are situated within BA office accommodation although not necessarily on the same site. The amounts paid out are shown on the attached Annex.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Reimbursement of travel in excess of £0.80:
1991–92	84,966
1992–93	100,018

1994–95	118,189

1994–95	[2]1,589,733
1995–96	[3]2,271,155

[1] The increase here is as a result of additional activity for War Pension medical referrals.
[2] The decrease reflects a transfer of funding to War Pensions Agency for medical examinations.
[3] The increase here is as a result of increased activity in respect of Incapacity Benefit medical referrals.
Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Social Security Expenditure

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the revised estimates of (a) the number of claimants and (b) expenditure for each benefit for each year from 1995–96 to 1999–2000 which were the basis for the total expenditure figures contained in table 5.7 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report"; and if he will give equivalent information for cyclical social security expenditure in each of those years. [9284]

Mr. Burt: Detailed breakdowns of total expenditure figures in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" are made available in the subsequent social security departmental report. This will be published in March 1997.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the successive estimates of the number of claimants in 1995–96 for each social security benefit (a) within the new control total and (b) included in cyclical social security expenditure, which were used as the basis for the figures published in each "Financial Statement and Budget Report" since the 1992 autumn statement. [9285]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the basis for the statement in paragraph 5.64 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" relating to the advantage of encouraging private provision in pensions as part of the reform of social security expenditure; and what savings resulted from that policy. [9287]

Mr. Heald: The Government are committed to funded occupational and personal pension provision, and have encouraged growth in this area by the introduction of greater choice and flexibility in pension options. As a result, this country is almost uniquely well placed to meet its pension promises in the new millennium. The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development and the International Monetary Fund have acknowledged the strong position of the UK compared with other countries.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the forecasts of the growth of social security, given in figure 10 of the DSS departmental report (Cm 3213) (a) on the basis of the latest FSBR projections concerning the level of unemployment (b) on the assumption of a constant level of unemployment and (c) using the unemployment assumption as contained in Cm 3213. [9289]

Mr. Burt: Long-term projections of social security benefit expenditure will be made available in the social security departmental report, which will be published in March. I will write separately to the hon. Member about any information he has requested in his answer which is not answered in the departmental report when it is published.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out (a) in cash terms and (b) at constant prices (i) the actual outturn and (ii) Budget estimated outturn of cyclical social security expenditure in each year since 1992; and if he will show the principal factors which affected the difference for each year between the actual outturn and the estimated outturn. [4] 1995–96—Cyclical social security includes benefits paid from the national insurance fund. The 1995–96 accounts for national insurance fund are not yet published so final outturn figures are not available.
1. Data for 1992–93 have not been provided as cyclical social security spending was only defined for public expenditure purposes in July 1992. Estimated outturn figures for social security for 1992–93 were therefore not on the same basis and are not directly comparable with plans for 1993–94 and beyond.
2. The principal factors giving rise to the differences in expenditure between estimated and actual outturn were: higher than anticipated increases in numbers of lone parents and sick and disabled receiving income support; higher than anticipated average amounts paid to income support recipients; and lower than anticipated numbers of unemployed claimants.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much of the private finance initiative expenditure by his Department listed in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" has already occurred; and what are the future commitments implicit in this private finance initiative expenditure. [9288]

Mr. Burt: Table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" gives the capital sums which the Department estimates will be spent by the private sector between 1997–98 and 1999–2000 as a consequence of any private finance initiative deals it may make with the DSS. It does not therefore include any expenditure by the Department itself or any expenditure estimated already to have taken place.

Revenue commitments resulting from the PFI deals concluded by this Department are still subject to negotiation and are currently commercial-in-confidence.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a breakdown by project of the estimated capital spending on his Department's private finance initiative projects for each year given in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report". [9291]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available as disaggregating the figures quoted in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" into individual, identifiable projects at this stage would harm the competitive position of a third party and prejudice the Department's position in on-going and future project negotiations.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of the expected future private finance initiative expenditure by his Department listed in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" is contracted for; and what proportion is estimated. [9292]

Mr. Burt: Of the capital sum which this Department estimates will be spent by the private sector between 1997–98 and 1999–2000 as a consequence of any private finance initiative deals it may make, broadly half has been contracted for already. All figures are estimated as the total level of private sector capital expenditure is not specified contractually.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10196]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows:

Financial year	Expenditure £
1996–97 (to end of November)	34,766
1995–96	40,219

The Department of Social Security's non-departmental public bodies—NDPBs—are funded directly from the Department's overall administration and miscellaneous services vote. The vote accounting arrangements prior to April 1995 preclude separate identification of NDPBs' expenditure on external consultants.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants". [10197]

Mr. Burt: The information has been placed in the Library.

War Pensions

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many sets of guidelines and instructions have been issued by his Department to its officials since 1986 to help them decide whether to award war pensions to claimants who are claiming disablement as a result of experiments at the Chemical Defence Establishment, Porton Down. [10227]

Mr. Heald: Under war pensions legislation, awards may be made in respect of any disablement which is attributable to, or has been and remains aggravated by, service in the armed forces. No distinction is made between those who participated in experiments at Porton Down and other members of the armed forces who did not.

Guidance and instruction in determining entitlement to a war pension is contained in the war pensions manual available to all appropriate staff of the War Pensions Agency.

The version of the manual current in 1986 did not include a section which related solely to Porton Down cases.

That version was comprehensively rewritten in 1993, when a section about such claims was included. The manual was restructured in 1995 to coincide with the introduction of a new computer system and now consists of 12 separate guides, two of which mention Porton Down claims.

Of these two guides, a total of 79 and 117 sets respectively are currently in issue.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the current members of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions; in what form the advice of the committee is communicated to the Minister with special responsibility for war pensions; if this advice is publicly available; on what dates the committee has met since January 1993; and (a) if the minutes and (b) the committee's annual report are publicly available. [10228]

Mr. Heald: The current members of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions are listed below. Advice from members comes through discussion at the meetings, which are chaired by my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State, Lord Mackay of Ardbrecknish, and through individual written representations. Copies of the minutes of committee meetings and supporting papers are distributed to members of the committee, the chairmen and vice chairmen of war pensions committees and to certain ex-service organisations which are not directly represented on the committee. Copies are not usually distributed more widely, but details of the main issues considered by the committee are published in the war pensioners' annual report'. The committee does not produce its own annual report.

[1] Report to Parliament by the Secretaries of State for Social Security, Health, Scotland and Wales in accordance with the Transfer of Functions (Ministry of Pensions) Order 1953 (SI 1198).

European Court of Justice Ruling

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the recent interim ruling by the European Court of Justice in respect of measures concerning poverty and the elderly. [9992]

Mr. Heald: The Government welcome the Court's interim ruling on 24 September 1996. The Court held that no payments of grants to projects should be made until the Court's final decision and that the Commission must make it clear that any commitments it enters into to make grants will be subject to the Court upholding the legality of payment in the main proceedings. The final ruling is not expected until later this year at the earliest.

European Programmes

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has made to the German Government regarding their blocking of the older people's programme and the poverty programme in the Council of Ministers. [9991]

Mr. Heald: Officials are in regular contact with their German counterparts on a wide range of European Union and bilateral issues.

Social Security Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many social security appeal tribunal sessions were held in each month of 1996 for which information is available; and to what extent changes in the number of sessions were affected by the financial situation of the Independent Tribunal Service. [10428]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Month	Number of sessions
January	2,200
February	2,294
March	2,437
April	2,781
May	3,125
June	3,100
July	3,779
August	3,594
September	3,589
October	3,649
November	3,349
December	[1]—

[1] Not yet available.

The running of sessions is a matter for the president of the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS), Judge Bassingthwaighte. However, the ITS has informed me that sessional activity is determined, and regularly reviewed, in the light of a number of factors including caseload, expected and actual intake of new appeals, the readiness of cases to proceed to hearing, the need to clear appeals expeditiously and value for money considerations.

Retirement Pensions (Payments Abroad)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the foreign countries in which the highest number of retirement pensions are paid by the Northern Ireland Office, the numbers of pensioners involved and the average ages of pensioners per country, specifying if pensions are or are not uprated. [10446]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table. The pensions of former Northern Ireland residents living outside the United Kingdom are paid by the pensions and overseas benefits directorate of the Benefits Agency. Figures are available only for the United Kingdom as a whole. It is not possible to identify the Northern Ireland cases separately.

Country	Total number of United Kingdom retirement and widow pensioners in July 1996	Average age of pensioners	Pensions uprated?
Australia	189,520	73	No
Canada	129,512	72	No
USA	94,910	71	Yes
Republic of Ireland	78,128	72	Yes
South Africa	33,927	73	No
New Zealand	32,789	74	No

Italy	21,981	70	Yes
Germany	21,373	70	Yes
Jamaica	20,946	72	Yes

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will recalculate charts 1 to 7 in Government economic service working paper No. 129 using pensioner incomes for 1994 which are compatible with those given in table 5 of the pensioners' income series 1994–95. [10525]

Mr. Heald: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

PENSIM is based on data from the 1988 retirement survey, the 1987 social change and economic life initiative, which contain details of work histories essential to the way in which PENSIM forecasts pensioners' incomes, and the 1988 family expenditure survey. The results are not compatible with the pensioners' income series, which is based mainly on data from the family expenditure survey covering the financial year 1994–95.

The rates of growth in pensioners' incomes, and their individual components, forecast by PENSIM are robust and present a best estimate of what is likely to happen under certain assumptions. It is planned to restructure PENSIM and incorporate more recent data in the future.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of net pensioner income by quintile in 2010 and 2025; and what assessment he has made of how these figures relate to the figures given in table 5 of the pensioners' income series 1994–95. [10524]

Mr. Heald: Estimated mean incomes for quintiles of the single pensioner and pensioner couple populations are given in the table for 2010 and 2025, at 1996 prices. Also shown in the table are estimates of the growth in mean income in each quintile between 1994 and 2010 and 1994 and 2025. All estimates have been made using PENSIM, a dynamic simulation model that projects pensioners' incomes into the next century. PENSIM estimates are based on a number of economic and behavioural assumptions. Due to the reliance on assumptions and the time period covered, estimates should be treated with caution, and have been rounded.

The percentage increases in 2025 for pensioner couples shown in this table correct the information I gave you in my written answer of 18 December, Official Report, columns 765–66.

The net income quintile mean estimates contained in the table are not directly comparable with those contained in table 5 of the pensioners' income series 1994–95, as they are necessarily based on a different data source, are at 1996 prices, and have been calculated using a different methodology. However, PENSIM does provide a good indication of the likely future growth in pensioners' incomes levels.

Growth	25 per cent.	35 per cent.	40 per cent.	45 per cent.	55 per cent.	45 per cent.

[1] Represents less than 5 per cent.

1. Growth figures show growth from PENSIM estimates for 1994.
2. Pensioners are defined as those single aged at state pension age or above, or couples in which the husband is aged at state pension age or above.
3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest £1 and 5 per cent.
4. Quintiles for single pensioners and pensioner couples have been calculated separately - i.e. the bottom quintile of single pensioners represents those pensioners in the bottom 20 per cent. of the income distribution of single pensioners.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will recalculate the figures in table 6, paragraph 7.12 of "Options for Equality in State Pension Age" for a woman retiring aged between 55 and 65 years, with a pivotal age of 60 years, on the basis of current prices. [10526]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table:

Basic pension available at different ages 1996–97 prices

	Age 60 'pivot' (£)

57	50

Government Actuary's Department.

Note:

Table 6, paragraph 7.12 of "Options for Equality in State Pension Age" applies to men and woman as it was assumed that, as now, men and women would receive the same adjustment to their pension for retiring at different ages. Thus the equivalent figures given above apply equally to men and to women.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the agreement entered into at Florence relating to BSE will be implemented in full by the United Kingdom. [9218]

Mr. Baldry: There are five preconditions for the lifting of the export on UK beef under the Florence agreement. We have made substantial progress on four of these. With regard to the fifth precondition, the selective cull, I refer the hon. Member to the statement that the Minister made in the House on 16 December, Official Report, columns 632–34.

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total number of cases reported to his Ministry of BSE in cattle imported from the Netherlands since January 1996, by month. [9845]

Mrs. Browning: No cases of BSE have been reported in cattle imported into Great Britain from the Netherlands since January 1996.

We are however investigating the possibility that one cow, confirmed positive in September 1996, may have been imported from the Netherlands in 1994, but was carrying a British ear tag at the time of report. The Dutch authorities will not be contacted until all details have been verified.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research into BSE has been conducted on behalf of his Department at the ADAS research establishment. [10642]

Mr. Boswell: ADAS conducts BSE research on behalf of MAFF on maternal transmission at three research centres and embryo transfer at one research centre.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library a list of the contracted research undertaken on BSE for his Department. [10643]

Mrs. Browning: The contracted research undertaken on BSE for my Department has been placed in the Library, as requested by the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent reports his Department has received of strains of BSE in lambs. [10765]

Mrs. Browning: There have been no reports of BSE strains being found in lambs. Scrapie, a transmissible spongiform encephalopathy of sheep, became a notifiable disease on 1 January 1993.

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [10143]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply 17 December 1996, c. 574]: A further report on bovine spongiform encephalopathy was placed in the Library of the House today.

The report gives an update on new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease cases and explains the new measures taken on cattle identification and animal feed. Reference is made to the five point plan agreed in Florence for the resumption of exports and explains that all the preconditions, with the exception of the accelerated slaughter programme, have been complied with. It also details the sustained improvement in the handling of specified bovine material in slaughterhouses. The report also announces the occurrence of transmissible spongiform encephalopathy in a domestic cat after the extension of the specified bovine offal ban in September 1990.

The number of clinically suspect cases of BSE reported in Great Britain has continued to fall, and at 31 October 1996 was 36.1 per cent. less than at the same time in 1995 and 63.3 per cent. less than the same time in 1994. A continued improvement is expected for the future.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9382]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I can confirm that I and my officials have undertaken a total of 288 official ministerial visits during 1996. Of these, 57 have been abroad.

Anonymous Individuals (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what was the largest amount of public money paid by way of grants and other financial assistance by his Department to a private individual in each year since 1990; [9435]

(2) if he will list the grants and other financial assistance which are paid to private individuals whose identity is kept confidential. [9436]

Mr. Boswell: MAFF's financial database does not record the legal status of payees. The information requested in respect of private individuals is therefore not readily available and could not be produced without disproportionate cost.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to make public the names of private individuals in receipt of grants and other financial assistance from his Department above a given level. [9434]

Mr. Boswell: The registration of the system holding these data, under the Data Protection Act 1984, does not allow for the publication of information concerning individuals. I have no plans to change the position.

Live Fish Imports

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations his Department has received about the enforcement of the provisions of the Import of Live Fish (England and Wales) Act 1980; and if he will make a statement. [9413]

Mr. Baldry: I have received representations from the Environment Agency and other bodies about introductions of non-native fish, and I am concerned that existing controls have not been entirely successful in preventing the introduction and spread of such fish into inland waters in England and Wales. I intend, therefore, to consult interested organisations on the possibility of making an order under the Import of Live Fish (England and Wales) Act 1980 to provide greater safeguards against the introduction and spread of non-native fish.

Cattle Cull

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received urging him to implement the selective cull. [9439]

Mr. Baldry: My colleagues and I have received many such representations, mainly from farmers and their representative organisations. The Government announced on 16 December that the selective cull would go ahead in the new year, and the necessary legislation was made and laid later that week.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many, and what percentage of the cattle slaughtered under the over-30-month scheme have been disposed of; where they are stored; and in how many sites. [10340]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested, as at 5 January, is as follows:

	Numbers	Percentage
Slaughtered	1,139,799	100.00
Incinerated	43,641	3.83
Rendered	848,798	74.47
In cold storage	247,361	21.70

The meat and bonemeal from animals slaughtered and rendered is stored in 11 dry warehouses in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland, and the tallow is stored at two sites in England. The material in cold storage is stored in 41 depots throughout the United Kingdom.

French Fishing Vessels

Mr. Christopher Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what classes of French fishing vessel, are prohibited from fishing within the French 12 mile limit. [9573]

Mr. Baldry: It is for the French authorities to decide whether to conserve stocks and limit catches by restricting the classes of vessel permitted to fish within their 12 mile limits provided such restrictions apply solely to French fishermen, are compatible with Community law and are in conformity with the common fisheries policy.

Public Bodies

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10122]

Mr. Boswell: The report of the review of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency was produced between March and June 1996 by officials from this Department, assisted by an independent member of the review team. The cost of the review amounted to about £20,000 and was met by the Department.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of Horticulture Research International; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10066]

Mr. Boswell: The report of the review on Horticulture Research International was produced between October 1995 and March 1996 by officials from this Department, assisted by an independent member of the review team. The cost of the review amounted to about £17,000 and was met by the Department.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent to date on converting the Directorate of Fisheries Research into a next steps agency; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10070]

Mr. Boswell: The costs of converting the Directorate of Fisheries Research to an Agency, which will be named CEFAS—the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science—have so far amounted to £373,000, all of which has been met by the Department. This total includes the costs of the prior options review conducted in 1995–96; additional temporary posts and consultancy work to provide for direct set-up costs within 1996–97; and the work of the agency steering group activities involved in overseeing preparations.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Central Science Laboratory; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10054]

Mr. Boswell: The report of the review on the Central Science Laboratory was produced between October 1995 and March 1996 by officials from this Department, assisted by an independent member of the review team and an external accountant. A further study linked to the review was conducted by external consultants between August and October 1996. The total cost including official costs was about £130,000. All these costs were met by the Ministry.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent to date on preparing for the privatisation of ADAS; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10062]

Mr. Boswell: The cost of preparing for the privatisation of ADAS, excluding internal costs in ADAS itself and in MAFF and the Welsh Office, has been £422,713, excluding VAT, to date. The sums are being paid out of a budget specifically established for this purpose.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10124]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of Horticulture Research International as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10068]

(3) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Directorate of Fisheries Research as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10072]

(5) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of ADAS as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee. [10063]

Mr. Boswell: The numbers of employees from the relevant establishments who represent UK interests in each category of committee are as follows:

Organisation	United Kingdom committees	European committees	International committees
ADAS	81	14	17
CSL	65	37(12)	28(10)
DFR	42(6)	6(2)	95(55)
HRI	15	10	19(1)
VLA	14	15(5)	7(3)

The figures in brackets indicate the numbers of staff leading UK teams, as appropriate.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of ADAS; [10064]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Central Science Laboratory; [10056]

(3) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency; [10125]

VLA	0	1	2

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10123]

Mr. Boswell: The review itself has been completed. Any implementation costs will depend on decisions which have not yet been taken.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of Horticulture Research International; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10067]

Mr. Boswell: The review itself has been completed. Any implementation costs will depend on decisions which have not yet been taken.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the future costs of converting the Directorate of Fisheries Research into a next steps agency; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10071]

Mr. Boswell: In my answer earlier today I gave the costs which will be incurred up to the launch of the CEFAS agency. Thereafter, any further costs will be contained within the ongoing running costs of the agency, as part of its day-to-day operation.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Central Science Laboratory; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10057]

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend announced the outcome of the prior options review of the Central Science Laboratory on 9 December. It is not possible at present to estimate future implementation costs.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the future costs of privatising ADAS; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10065]

Mr. Boswell: The future cost of privatisation of ADAS, excluding internal MAFF costs, is estimated to be £930,000 excluding VAT. The sums will be paid out of a budget specifically established for this purpose.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10172]

Mr. Boswell: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report on the Government's use of external consultants. [10173]

Mr. Boswell: The Department produced and implemented an action plan in response to the multi-departmental scrutiny on the Government's use of external consultants and its recommendations. Accordingly, the Department issued new guidance on the employment of external consultants, and revised its procedures for authorising the use of external consultants and for improving information within the Department on consultancy expenditure. Analogous arrangements exist in departmental agencies.

Gelatin

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the amount of gelatin used in (a) human food, (b) animal feed and (c) cosmetic, medical or pharmaceutical products since 20 March. [10413]

Mrs. Browning: We estimate that the quantity of gelatin manufactured in the UK from bovine raw materials which is suitable for food, feed, cosmetic, medical and pharmaceutical uses may amount to approximately 7,000 tonnes. Further details are not available.

Southall Horse Market

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the recent visit to Southall horse market by his officials. [10652]

Mrs. Browning: The last visit was on 11 December and suitable welfare standards were observed.

Beef Labelling

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations he has had with representatives of Muslim and Jewish butchers about the draft EC regulation on beef labelling, document 10495/96; and if he will make a statement. [10527]

Mrs. Browning: Representatives from the Board of Deputies of British Jews and the Union of Muslim Organisations of the UK and Eire together with other interested organisations were invited to, and attended, a consultation meeting held by the Ministry on 28 October 1996 to discuss the Commission's proposals for Council regulations on beef labelling.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he has made in renegotiating the terms of the draft EC regulation on the labelling of beef and beef products since 13 November. [10529]

Mrs. Browning: Since 13 November 1996, the draft proposals have been considered twice at Council working group and by the Special Committee on Agriculture and the Council. Further discussions are not expected to take place until the end of this month at the earliest.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the EC regulation on the labelling of beef and beef products, document 10495/96, as currently drafted on the labelling of meat as kosher and halal; and if he will make a statement. [10528]

Mrs. Browning: The proposal as drafted provides for information on methods of slaughter to be included on beef labels providing that those using such labels can verify that information, to the satisfaction of the relevant competent authority.

Farmers (Negative Equity)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of farmers with negative equity; and if he will make a statement. [10546]

Mr. Boswell: No information is available on the equity position of farmers, but the results of the farm business survey indicates that in 1995–96 less than 1 per cent. of full-time farm businesses in England were in a negative equity position.

Departmental Prosecutions

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what factors underlay the delay in replying to the question from the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West relating to prosecutions by his Department. [10756]

Mr. Boswell: The delay in question was due entirely to an administrative oversight, which is regretted.

Poultry Feed Antibiotics

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research into the effects of poultry feed antibiotics on human drug resistance he has evaluated in formulating voting intentions in the Council of Ministers. [10764]

Mrs. Browning: The Government take very seriously the possibility of the development of antibiotic resistance in humans and animals as a result of the use of antibiotics in animal feed. This is carefully examined as part of the safety assessment of applications for authorisations for antimicrobial products, and is kept under review by the independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee, which advises the Government on the safety, quality and efficacy of veterinary medicines. In considering the use of antibiotics, the committee has consistently followed the principles established in the report of the joint committee on the use of antibiotics in animal husbandry and veterinary medicine—the Swann report—of 1969. The VPC's policy has been that new antibiotics should not necessarily be precluded from therapeutic use in animals but that their prophylactic use should be discouraged. The committee considers each case on its merits against this background.

In 1995 Germany and Denmark took unilateral action to ban the use of avoparcin in animal feed because of an alleged link between its use and the development of bacterial resistance to vancomycin in human medicine. The EU Commission's Scientific Committee on Animal Nutrition—SCAN—evaluated data submitted by

Germany and Denmark, including research which suggested the possibility of transfer of resistance between animals and man. SCAN concluded that the evidence presented did not establish a risk to human or animal health or to the environment. The VPC examined SCAN's report and supported its conclusions.

Bone Meal

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the current permissible uses of bonemeal in the United Kingdom; and if he will indicate those areas where bonemeal has been banned in the last five years. [10770]

Mrs. Browning: The permitted uses for mammalian meat and bone meal are landfill, incineration and, provided the MBM is not derived from BSE suspects, specified bovine material, or animals slaughtered under the over-30-month scheme—non-agricultural fertilisers and pet food. Controls on the use of MBM have been progressively tightened in the light of experience and the latest available advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, the Government's independent advisor on BSE issues. The controls introduced in the last five years are:

1994—prohibition of all mammalian protein, including MBM, in ruminant feed;

March 1996—prohibition on the feeding of MBM to all farmed livestock;

April 1996–prohibition on the use of MBM as agricultural fertiliser; and

August 1996–the banning, except in very tightly defined and controlled circumstances, of MBM from premises where livestock feed is produced, stored, or used.

Animal Feeds

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, columns 648–49, concerning the actions of the Agriculture Council of the European Community, which members of the Commission proposed to ban the use of specified risk materials in the manufacture of animal feeds; if he will list the materials and animals concerned; and what was the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the proposal. [10819]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The proposal in question was by the Commission for a Council decision on the exclusion from human and animal feed of specified risk material as regards transmissible spongiform encephalopathies.

For the substance of the proposal—reference number SEC(96) 2300 of 10 December 1996—I refer the hon. Member for Newham, South to the related explanatory memorandum submitted on 6 December 1996 which was deposited in the Library of the House. At the Agriculture Council discussions on 16 and 17 December the United Kingdom Government were one of five to support this proposal.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what is the average length of time his Department takes to process and approve applications for the countryside stewardship scheme; and if he will make a statement. [8694]

Mr. Boswell [pursuant to his reply, 17 December 1996, c. 576]: The average length of time to process agreements in 1996 is likely to be about six months. This is longer than had been expected, owing in part to receipt of more applications than anticipated. It is the Ministry's intention to reduce the processing time for 1997.

HEALTH

Dental Services (Sunderland)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the registration rate of children aged (a) under four years, (b) five to 10 years and (c) 11 to 19 years with general dental practitioners in the Sunderland health authority area. [4415]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is contained in the table.

General dental service: Percentage of child patients registered with general dental practitioners at 31 October 1996 by age group of the population at 30 June 1995—Sunderland health authority

Percentage

	4 years and under	5 to 10	11 to 17
Registration rate	37	81	75

Excludes patients registered with salaried dentists. Patients aged 18 and over are treated as adults and registered into continuing care.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many national health service dentists routinely use amalgam in fillings; and how many use materials developed since the introduction of amalgam. [5572]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is contained in the table.

General dental service: estimated number of dentists[1] receiving payment for at least one amalgam and non-amalgam filling in a quarter[2]

England

	Number of dentists[3]
At least one amalgam	[4]13,675
At least one filling in a material other than amalgam	[4]13,016

[1] Figures include dentists who claimed in respect of adult and child treatments. However, the majority of child treatments are currently carried out under capitation arrangements. Fillings paid for under capitation arrangements are not reported and are not included in the analysis.

[2] This information is taken from the payment schedule data of one quarter (September–November 1996).

[3] The information presented relates to the number of dentists who made claims for fillings. Dentists claim payment at the end of a course of treatment. These figures thus show the number of dentists who finished courses of treatment in which they performed fillings.

[4] These figures rely on data from a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore estimates.

A total of 15,249 dentists received a schedule of payment in the period September to November 1996.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, columns 820–21, on the largest annual NHS payments to dentists, for how many hours work on NHS patients the dentist was paid in each of the years given. [9076]

Mr. Malone: Dentists are paid item of service fees and a fee for each patient registered with them. They are not paid by the hour.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, columns 820–21, on the largest annual NHS payments to dentists, how many patients were treated by the dentist in each of the years given. [9074]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, columns 820–21, on the largest annual NHS payments to dentists, if he will list the categories of treatment and the percentage of the total NHS fee income for each category earned by the dentist in each of the years given. [9073]

Mr. Malone: Gross fee payments are made up of the following categories of treatment:

Capitation payments: monthly fees received for each child under 18 registered to cover the cost of "routine" treatments;

Continuing care payments: small monthly fees received for each adult aged 18 and over registered;

Weighted entry payments: one-off payments made in respect of child patients with poor oral health to restore the child's teeth to a reasonable standard;

Adult item of service: payments made in respect of adult treatments;

Child item of service: payments made in respect of mainly advanced child treatment.

Gross fee earnings and the percentage of the total national health service gross fee income attributable to each category for the highest earning dentist of each year is in the following table.

Year	Gross fee earnings[1]	Capitation per cent.	Continuing care per cent.	Weighted entry per cent.	Adult item of service per cent.	Child item of service per cent.
1995–96	604,000	8.4	6.0	0.9	79.2	5.5
1994–95	617,000	0.0	0.0	0.0	2.9	97.1
1993–94	661,000	0.0	0.0	0.0	3.5	96.5
1991–92	395,000	0.0	0.0	0.0	3.3	96.7

[1] These have been rounded to the nearest £1,000. Gross fee payments do not account for all NHS earnings.

Other payments such as maternity, seniority and long-term sickness payments are payable in addition to gross fees.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, columns 820–21, on the largest annual NHS payments to dentists, if he will list each category of payment which can contribute to NHS earnings. [9077]

Mr. Malone: The categories of payment are: item of service fees; continuing care and capitation payments; seniority payments; vocational training allowances; maternity payments; long-term sickness payments; postgraduate education allowances; and partial reimbursement of non-domestic rates. These are contained in the statement of dental remuneration. Copies of the latest statement of dental remuneration have been placed in the Library.

Sterilisation Reversals

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued on the availability of sterilisation reversals within the NHS; and what estimate he has made of how many (a) health authorities and (b) GP fundholders will commission such services for their NHS patients. [10284]

Mr. Horam: The priority given to sterilisation reversal operations generally is a matter for local decision in the light of health authorities' first-hand knowledge of local priorities and competing claims on resources.

No guidance has been issued specifically on the availability of sterilisation reversals on the NHS. However, information on family planning services generally is contained in "Guidelines for reviewing family planning services" (January 1992) copies of which are available in the Library.

Hospitals

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community, GP or cottage hospitals delivering primary care were operating in each regional health authority area in (i) 1979 and (ii) the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9772]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available centrally.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas adjournment; [9791]

(2) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9790]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy gave him today.

Dental Services (Children)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children under 16 years of age were registered with a dentist, in each region, in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [9837]

Mr. Malone: The data held centrally are for children aged 17 and under and by health authority and, prior to 1 April 1996, family health services authority. Tables containing this information have been placed in the Library.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Sir Roger Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of expenditure in the year 1997–98 on research into ME, chronic fatigue syndrome, excluding psychiatric investigation; and if he will list the specific projects. [10263]

Mr. Horam: Information is not available centrally on expenditure in the national health service on research into chronic fatigue syndrome—myalgic encephalomyelitis. The Department is currently funding a research project through the national health service research and development programme called, "Should GPs manage chronic fatigue syndrome? A controlled trial" and expects to provide a further £6,032 during 1997–98. However, the main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. It always welcomes high-quality applications and these are judged in open competition with other demands for funding, and awarded according to their scientific quality.

East Anglian Ambulance NHS Trust

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received regarding the performance of the East Anglian Ambulance NHS trust over the last six months; and if he will make a statement. [9766]

Mr. Horam: A small number of representations have been received in the Department. The Anglia and Oxford Regional Office of the national health service executive is monitoring the trust's performance.

Doctors

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics he collates on the number of doctors leaving the profession within five years of qualification. [10447]

Mr. Malone: Evidence of doctors leaving the profession is available from studies published in 1991 by Professor James Parkhouse. This gives the results of surveys of doctors who qualified in 1974, 1977, 1980 and 1983.

The Department has commissioned further cohort studies of doctors' careers by the medical careers research group at the Oxford unit of healthcare epidemiology. These will examine career patterns of doctors who qualified in 1988, 1993 and 1996. The studies, which collect data via questionnaires, will continue to look at wastage from the medical profession and the reasons why doctors leave the NHS.

Foreign Doctors

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current number of non-British doctors employed by the NHS who are (a) citizens of EU countries and (b) citizens of non-EU countries. [10449]

Mr. Malone: The Department receives no information on citizenship of doctors.

Community Care

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total amount of funding transferred from the health budget of each local health authority for community care purposes for 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [10313]

Mr. Burns: This information is not held centrally.

Staff Shortfalls

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current shortfall in the NHS of the number of practising (a) orthopaedic surgeons, (b) anaesthetists, (c) urologists, (d) paediatricians and (e) psychiatrists. [10448]

Mr. Malone: The information available relates to the number of vacancies for these specialties. These are shown in the table. However, data on vacant posts are difficult to interpret. The census is a snap shot of 30 September each year. Some vacancies will be wholly or partly filled by locums. For others, national health service trusts may find alternative ways to provide the service rather than re-advertising. The numbers give no indication of how long the post has been empty; some of these will be in the process of being filled.

Vacant posts in selected medical specialties
England at 30 September 1995

Whole time equivalent

	Number
Traumatic and orthopaedic surgery	90
Anaesthetics	160
Urology	30
Paediatrics	100
Psychiatry group	360

All figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
The available information relates to consultants, staff grade, senior registrar, registrar and senior house officers.

Raw Fish (Worms)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom have contracted worms from eating (a) sushi and (b) other raw fish in the last year for which figures are available. [10417]

Mr. Horam: There have been no cases of human infection due to fish roundworms reported in the United Kingdom since 1991.

NHS Budget

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the average annual cash increase at 1996 prices in the NHS budget from 1991–92 to 1996–97; and what percentage of the additional spending has been on bureaucracy. [10405]

Mr. Horam: Table 1 shows the average annual cash increase at 1996–97 prices in the national health service budget from 1991–92 to 1996–97; 1996–97 figures are forecasts.

Table 1: NHS total gross expenditure (£ million)

	Cash	Cash at 1996–97 prices
1991–92	26,788	30,695
1996–97	34,798	34,798
Increase over period	8,010	4,103
Average per year	1,602	821

Information on additional spending bureaucracy is not available.

Care Funding

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the bids for adult intensive and high dependency care funding for 1996–97. [10751]

Mr. Horam: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Fluoridation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he or his departmental officials last met representatives of (a) the British Dental Association and (b) the British Fluoridation Society; and what matters were discussed. [10656]

Mr. Malone: Meetings between Department of Health officials and the British Dental Association are held during the course of the year to discuss different aspects of dentistry, and with the British Fluoridation Society to discuss water fluoridation. The last meeting with the BFS was in March last year.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received since 1992 regarding artificial fluoridation; and if he will make a statement. [10657]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 2 December 1996, at columns 547–48.

Computers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when reimbursement from public funds was first given for computers in general practice. [10675]

Mr. Malone: The computer reimbursement scheme came into effect on 1 April 1990 but was retrospective to 1 April 1989. The first payments were made during the 1990–91 financial year.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when national requirements for the accreditation of general practice computer systems first came into force. [10676]

Mr. Horam: The requirements for accreditation were released in April 1993 for implementation in general practice computer systems from April 1994. Copies of the latest version have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount reimbursed to general practitioners from public funds for purchase of computer systems in each of the last six years. [10674]

Mr. Malone: The total amounts directly reimbursed to general practitioners from public funds for the purchase of computer systems in each of the last six years is as follows:

	£ million
1990–91	19
1991–92	34
1992–93	40
1993–94	39
1994–95	45
1995–96	64

Inter-country Adoption

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department disseminates about its procedures relating to the granting of health certificates for inter-country adoption home study reports. [10730]

Mr. Burns: Information on the provision of the Department's inter-country adoption certificate of approval has been disseminated to all statutory authorities and approved voluntary adoption agencies in the United Kingdom, to embassies, consulates and high commissions of appropriate countries appointed to the United Kingdom, to British posts abroad, to individual adopters and to individual social workers.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he is giving to providing section 64 grants for a help and advice service to people wishing to adopt children from other countries. [10732]

Mr. Burns: In the current financial year £50,000 has been set aside from the section 64 general grant scheme to fund the overseas adoption helpline which provides information on inter-country adoption requirements to those interested. Section 64 funding has also been awarded to other organisations which provide information on adoption matters.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the applications for section 64 grant to provide a help and advice service to people seeking to adopt children from other countries. [10731]

Mr. Burns: In the financial year 1996–97 funding was provided to the Bridge child care development service for the overseas adoption helpline which provided information on overseas adoption. No application was received for an exclusive overseas adoption information service for 1997–98.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for which inter-country adoption home study reports his Departments' certificates have been (a) granted and (b) withheld. [10729]

Mr. Burns: The Department of Health introduced certificates in July 1992 confirming that the application to which it was attached met the statutory requirements of both the United Kingdom and the country to which the application was made. Certificates are provided for applications which have been approved by the statutory authorities in the United Kingdom. Certificates are not provided for privately commissioned home study reports.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms exist for the disposal of dissecting instruments used in autopsies conducted at the CJD surveillance unit in Edinburgh. [10628]

Mr. Horam: Autopsies on patients with suspected Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease conducted in Edinburgh by surveillance unit staff are carried out in a dedicated high-risk autopsy suite in the Edinburgh royal infirmary. This autopsy suite has both disposable and non-disposable instruments which are not used for general autopsy purposes. After a CJD autopsy, the disposable instruments are handled according to guidelines published in 1994 by the Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens entitled, "Precautions for work with human and animal transmissible spongiform encephalopathies"—copies of which are available in the Library—and then incinerated. Non-disposable instruments are autoclaved in the high-risk autopsy suite at temperatures which are known to substantially inactivate the transmissible agents responsible for CJD. In the event of breakage, the non-disposable instruments would be disposed of according to the ACDP guidelines.

General Practitioners

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the average time general practitioners spent on administration for each year for which figures are available since 1979. [10671]

Mr. Malone: The Health Departments and the General Medical Services Committee of the British Medical Association have jointly conducted surveys of general practitioners' workload in 1985–86, 1989–90 and 1992–93. Copies of the results are in the Library.

Hepatitis B

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the estimated cost of treating hepatitis B in the NHS in the last year for which figures are available; and what is the estimated cost of universal hepatitis B immunisation per annum. [10679]

Mr. Horam: Information on the cost to the national health service of treating hepatitis B is not collected centrally. At manufacturers' current listed prices, the cost of hepatitis B vaccine for those born in any one year would be approximately £20 million. In addition, there would be vaccine administration costs which could vary depending upon the immunisation programme chosen.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what form, for what purpose, and with what public consultation he plans to review the working of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990; and if he will make a statement. [10523]

Mr. Horam: In the light of expressed concerns about whether the specific provision in schedule 3 of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 for consent to be in writing reflected current clinical and lay opinion, the Government announced on 5 December a review of that provision and the potential implications for the remainder of the 1990 Act. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health expects to announce shortly details of the review.

Hospitals

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals there are currently; and how many there were in 1979. [10689]

Mr. Horam: The number of national health service hospitals in England, as defined by section 128 of the NHS Act 1977, is not available centrally, nor has it ever been.

For the years 1979 to 1991, figures are available, based on a count of hospitals providing residential facilities. These were set out in the answer to a question from the hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 16 May 1995, Official Report, columns 173–76.

Challenge Funds

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the bids for 1996–97 challenge funds. [10733]

Mr. Burns: Details of the successful bids for the 1996–97 mental health challenge fund were given in the press release of 23 April 1996.

In addition the emergency pressures fund for 1996–97 received bids as listed.

Social Services Spending

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, further to his speech to the social services conference in Edinburgh on 18 October, if he will list the average annual compound growth rate of spending on social services, in real terms, for the period since 1970–71, indicating the basis of his calculation; if he will list the real terms annual percentage increase in funding for personal social services, for each year from 1992–93 to 1997–98—projected; and in which years since 1979 that increase has been lower than the projected 1997–98 increase in real terms. [10514]

Mr. Burns: Net expenditure by social services departments was £80.6 million in 1970–71 and is budgeted to be £7,903.1 million in 1996–97, an average real terms growth of 10 per cent. per annum. The figures used in the speech to the social services conference additionally included expenditure on Department of Social Security benefits paid to people in residential care and nursing homes.

The real terms percentage increase in funding provided for personal social services for each year from 1992–93 to 1997–98 is set out as:

Year	Real terms annual percentage increase
1993–94	11.9
1994–95	12.6
1995–96	6.1
1996–97	5.2
1997–98	2.4

Since 1979 the annual real terms increase in net expenditure on personal social services was less than 2.4 per cent. in 1981–82, 1984–85 and 1985–86.

Aldehydes

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the carcinogenic effects of aldehydes on humans. [10649]

Mr. Horam: None.

Staff Train Travel

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has issued to health authorities and trusts on the subject of first class train travel by staff when on business. [10672]

Mr. Malone: Section 23 of the General Whitley Council handbook deals with the reimbursement of travelling expenses including first class travel. Copies of this have been placed in the Library.

Contraception

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the average cost of a vasectomy and (b) the average yearly cost of providing contraceptive care to a patient. [10680]

Mr. Horam: Information on the cost of a vasectomy is not collected centrally. Provision of contraceptive care by the national health service costs an average of just over £40 per year per user of family planning services.

Health Authority Budgets

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the NHS budget by health authority for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97. [10688]

Mr. Horam: Comparison between 1996–97 and previous years is not meaningful as the abolition of regional health authorities on 31 March 1996 and the reorganisation of health authorities on 1 April 1996 have resulted in changes to health authority responsibilities, boundaries and funding.

Details of district health authorities' final cash limits for 1994–95 and 1995–96 were set out in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Dulwich (Ms Jowell) on 11 November 1996, Official Report, column 39.

For details of health authorities' 1996–97 cash limits I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Normanton (Mr O'Brien) on 3 December 1996, Official Report, column 638.

General Allocations

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funds have been returned to the general allocations for 1997–98 as a result of the death before 1 April 1996 of patients with (a) mental illness and (b) learning disabilities admitted before June 1970, in both hospital-based and community-based accommodation. [10735]

Mr. Horam: The 1997–98 general allocations to health authorities have been enhanced by £20 million as a result of the net reduction in the special allocation which funds the care of patients with mental illness admitted before 1 January 1971 and patients with learning disabilities admitted before 1 January 1970. Patient deaths is one of the factors in this net reduction but this element is not separately identified in the information held centrally.

NHS Supplies Management

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response his Department has made to the Audit Commission's report, "Improving Supplies Management in National Health Service trusts"; and what decisions have been made by Her Majesty's Government in relation to potential savings outlined in the report. [10754]

Mr Horam: It will be for national health service trusts to respond to the specific recommendations made by their external auditors, who are appointed and regulated by the Audit Commission, following local audits based on the good practice recommendations in the report. The Department fully supports the report's emphasis on the importance of good supplies management and its relevance to quality patient care, and we particularly welcome the Audit Commission's call for senior trust management to take a more active interest in this area.

The potential savings quoted in the report were derived from a small sample of trusts. The examples quoted were historic and the figures therefore do not take account of improvements since made in this area.

Computer Records

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who owns the (a) written and (b) computer records that general practitioners hold on patients. [10686]

Mr. Malone: Ownership of records on patients maintained by general practitioners in accordance with their terms of service, is vested in the health authority.

Continuing Care

Cancer Treatments

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on cancer treatments in each year since 1992 (a) nationally and (b) in the west midlands; and what was the percentage change from the previous year in each case. [10246]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally. It is estimated that the care and treatment for cancer patients forms a substantial part of national health service work in primary and secondary care sectors of around 7 per cent. of NHS resources.

Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his planned budget for the next three years to advertise the potential dangers of (a) aspirin, (b) coproxamol, (c) dothiepin and (d) paracetamol. [9846]

Mr. Malone: Aspirin, coproxamol, dothiepin and paracetamol are effective medicines, the indications and side-effects of which are documented in the authorised product information and publications such as the "British National Formulary". The main system for providing regular information to health professionals about important drug safety issues arising with medicines is a bulletin called "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance", which is produced by the Committee on Safety of Medicines and the Medicines Control Agency. It is sent to all doctors, dentists, pharmacists, and coroners, by post approximately quarterly and is available on the Internet. The current annual budget for this bulletin is £260,240.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to assess the level of use of anti-psychotic drugs and drugs containing morphine in residential homes for the elderly. [9847]

Mr. Burns: None. The prescribing of any drug as part of the medical treatment received by a person living in residential care is the responsibility of that person's general practitioner. Medical and pharmaceutical advisers are available to help doctors prescribe most effectively for their patients.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the drugs that were available only on prescription in 1979 that are now available without prescription. [9848]

Mr. Malone: Since 1979 exemptions to prescription control have been made for the substances in the table, subject, in some cases, to conditions such as indication, maximum dose or route of administration.

Certain medicinal products now available containing these substances may not have been authorised in 1979.

Public Bodies

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10090]

(2) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Public Health Laboratory Service; from which budget these sums were paid. [10082]

Mr. Horam: Work on this and similar reviews has principally involved staff in the Department of Health and several other Government Departments, and it is not possible to quantify the related costs. Expenditure on consultancy costs was £7,000.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the National Radiological Protection Board; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10086]

Mr. Horam: Work on this and similar reviews has principally involved staff in the Department of Health and several other Government Departments, and it is not possible to quantify the related costs. Expenditure on consultancy costs was £26,614.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control as representative of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10092]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control. [10093]

Mr. Horam: Employees of the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control serve as the chair or vice-chair of the United Kingdom committee, three European committees and three international committees; serve as United Kingdom representatives on four European committees and one international committee; and lead a United Kingdom team on one European and one international committee.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Public Health Laboratory Service as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10084]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Public Health Laboratory Service. [10085]

Mr. Horam: No employees of the Public Health Laboratory service chair, or serve on United Kingdom, European or international committees as representatives of United Kingdom interests, or as leaders of a United Kingdom team.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the National Radiological Protection Board as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10088]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the National Radiological Protection Board. [10089]

Mr. Horam: Employees of the National Radiological Protection Board serve as the chair of four United Kingdom committees, one European committee and six international committees; serve as United Kingdom representatives on one European committee and four international committees; and lead a United Kingdom team on one European committee.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10091]

(2) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Public Health Laboratory Service; and from which budget these sums will be paid; [10083]

(3) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the National Radiological Protection Board; and from which budget these will be paid. [10087]

Mr. Horam: The reviews were completed on 31 December 1996. Any implementation costs will depend on decisions which have not yet been taken.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will estimate how much will be spent on accident and emergency departments in the financial year 1997–98 (a) nationally and (b) in the west midlands; and what will be the percentage change from the previous year; [10248]

(2) how much the Government plan to spend on intensive treatment units in the financial year 1997–98 (a) nationally and (b) in the west midlands; and what will be the percentage change from the previous year; [10249]

(3) what estimate he has made of expenditure on (i) non-surgical and (ii) surgical departments in financial year 1997–98 (a) nationally and (b) in the west midlands (1) in cash terms and (2) as a percentage change on the previous year; [10311]

(4) what estimate he has made of expenditure on (i) geriatric care and (ii) cancer treatments in financial year 1997–98 (a) nationally and (b) in the west midlands; (1) in cash terms and (2) as a percentage change on the previous year. [10312]

Mr. Horam: It is not possible to provide precise estimates of expenditure on specific services for future years. Health authorities' general allocations are not hypothecated and it is for individual health authorities and general practitioner fundholders to use their funds to respond to the health needs of their local populations; spending on specific services can be determined accurately only in retrospect once health authority and trust accounts have been completed.

Geriatric Care

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on geriatric care in each year since 1992 (a) nationally and (b) in the west midlands; and what was the percentage change from the previous year in each case. [10247]

Mr. Burns: The figures given are for the money spent on the specialty of geriatric care within the national health service—the definition of which is care which is led by a consultant geriatrician. The figures reflect the shift in expenditure from acute-based care which is defined under the term geriatric care towards care provided in community-based settings.

Total NHS expenditure on persons 65 and over is far higher than the expenditure on the narrow geriatric care definition and includes significant proportions of expenditure for the elderly mentally ill and other community services. In 1992–93 we estimate that spending on persons over 65 accounted for some £8,530 million rising to £9,190 million in 1994–95. This accounts for some 42 per cent. of hospital and community health services expenditure, even though people over 65 account for only 16 per cent. of the population.

NHS trust expenditure on geriatric care in England and west midlands region in each year since 1992 is as follows:

	England		West Midlands
Financial year	Spend £000	Percentage change from previous year	Spend £000	Percentage change from previous year
1992–93	1,531,258	3.8	149,423	13.8
1993–94	1,493,311	–2.5	150,537	0.8
1994–95	1,422,867	–4.7	135,994	–9.7
1995–96	1,365,688	–4.0	122,564	–9.9

Notes:
1. 1995–96 information is provisional.
2. Expenditure on geriatric care is for the consultant specialty of geriatrics (in and out patient) and geriatric day care only.

"The House Party"

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much public money has been invested in the game "The House Party"; and what assessment he has made of the appropriateness of his Department funding such a project. [9883]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health has neither seen nor funded "The House Party", nor had any involvement in its production.

Stroke

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information her Department (a) collates centrally, (b) seeks from the regional offices, (c) seeks from health authorities and (d) seeks from each national health service trust in order to determine performance in relation to "The Health of the Nation" targets concerning (i) the incidence of stroke and (ii) acute treatment for those who have had strokes. [10250]

Mr. Horam: The relevant "Health of the Nation" targets concern mortality. This is monitored by death registration data from the Office for National Statistics at national, regional and health authority level and by the number of deaths from stroke in hospital at health authority level from the Department's common information core.

There is no single measure of the incidence of stroke.

Incidence of stroke can be estimated from the patient consultations with general practitioners for stroke, measured through the morbidity statistics from general practice and the weekly returns of the Royal College of General Practitioners. These estimates are collected from a sample of GPs in England and Wales and are present as total figures for England and Wales.

Hospital episodes where stroke is diagnosed can be identified from the department's hospital episode statistics system. The information can be aggregated to trust, health authority, regional and national level. However not all patients with stroke will be admitted to hospital.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report on the Government's use of external consultants. [10161]

Mr. Horam: The Department's response to the Cabinet Office report on the use of external consultants is set out in the detailed action plan sent to the Cabinet Office in 1994. Copies will be placed in the Library.

All the actions stated in this plan have now been implemented.

Electroconvulsive Therapy

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those hospitals in which ECT treatment has been given to patients aged over 18 years without their specific consent since 1 April 1994 and the number of patients so treated in each hospital listed. [10254]

Mr. Burns: Information on the number of electroconvulsive therapy treatments given without specific consent is not available centrally.

Wheelchair Initiatives

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress towards the implementation of the wheelchair initiatives announced by his Department in February 1996. [9989]

Mr. Burns: Both initiatives are now under way. Wheelchair services are supplying, or are about to supply, a powered indoor/outdoor wheelchair to severely disabled people who meet their local eligibility criteria. We have recently issued guidance to the national health service on the detailed arrangements for the phased introduction of the voucher scheme.

Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham Health Authority

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the effect of the projected reduction in the purchasing budget of the Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority on the number of (a) patient treatments and (b) operations in the current financial year; and if he will list them by category and hospital; [10433]

(2) what resources he plans to transfer to Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority in the current financial year. [10434]

Mr. Horam: The hospital and community health services general revenue allocation for Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority in 1996–97 is £390 million which represents a real terms increase of £2.5 million, and a cash increase of £12.8 million.

In addition, the health authority has received £4 million in short-term funding to support it during a period of major structural and strategic change and £1.4 million from the mental health challenge fund.

There has been no reduction to the purchasing budget of Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority. The integrated hospital and community health services revenue allocation for 1997–98 is £441 million, which represents a real terms increase of £9.4 million, and a cash increase of £18 million. This includes a general revenue allocation of £420.6 million which represents a real terms increase of £7.6 million, and a cash increase of £15.9 million.

Correspondence

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date he received a letter from the forums of general practitioners of Hackney, Tower Hamlets and Newham and their local medical committee dated 5 November concerning local health provision; when he (a) acknowledged and (b) replied to it; and if he will place copies of the correspondence in the Library. [10709]

Mr. Malone: An advance copy of the forums' letter was received by the Department of Health on 6 November 1996, and the text of the open letter as signed by local general practitioners was received on 15 November. A copy of the letter was received from the hon. Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch (Mr. Sedgemore) on 26 November and acknowledged the same day. The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health replied to the hon. Member on 23 December. Copies of the correspondence will be placed in the Library.

Prostate Cancer

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the work of his Department's standing group on health technology in respect of carcinoma of the prostate in relation to health technology assessment. [10760]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health's standing group on health technology commissioned research on the detection, management and screening for carcinoma of the prostate which was recently reported. The findings have been referred to the Department's national screening committee for advice. I will consider the findings following receipt of this advice.

Hospital Staff

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the national health services's policy towards staffing levels in hospitals with casualty and emergency departments over the Christmas and new year holiday periods. [10762]

Mr. Horam: National health service trusts should ensure that appropriate staff cover is maintained over holiday periods.

Primary Care

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the increase in NHS research and development spending related to primary care announced in his White Paper, "Primary Care: Delivering the Future" will be new funding. [10793]

Mr. Malone: Our aim is to double the existing proportion of national health service research and development directly related to primary care. The total level of NHS research and development spending is reviewed annually in the light of the needs and priorities of the NHS overall.

Health for All Targets

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a paper listing in relation to each of the World Health Organisation's health for all targets (a) Government actions to attain the target, (b) the current deadline for meeting the target, (c) indicators used by his Department to monitor progress towards meeting the target and (d) current performance and target performance in terms of those indicators. [10797]

Mr. Malone: The World Health Organisation carries out regular evaluation exercises on progress towards the achievement of its health for all targets. I will place in the Library copies of the United Kingdom report sent to WHO as part of the second evaluation exercise carried out in 1994. We are currently taking part in the third evaluation exercise which is expected to be completed later this year.

Nurse Prescribing

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the resources implications of nurse prescribing. [10792]

Mr. Malone: Indications from the evaluation suggest that the net revenue costs of nurse prescribing will be broadly neutral and that there will be clear benefits for patients.

Acute Beds

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the percentage of NHS beds in the acute sector used for private patients in each health authority area in (a) 1979, (b) 1983, (c) 1987, (d) 1992 and (e) 1996; and if he will make a statement. [9872]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available.

NHS Executive

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the NHS executive in each of the last three years on (a) conference registration fees, (b) lease cars for senior management, (c) air travel, (d) hospitality and (e) business travel within the United Kingdom. [8485]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 12 December 1996]: Available information is given in the table. Information on conference registration fees is not collected separately. The 1995–96 figures take account of the transfer into the national health service executive of responsibilities, and 292 people, from other parts of the Department of Health during 1995–96.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service Management Functions

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what delegations were made in 1996 under the Civil Service (Management Functions) Act 1992; to whom those delegations were made; and what were the main conditions attached to them. [11011]

Mr. Freeman: Since the last report to Parliament, Official Report, 11 January 1996, columns 285–86, Ministers and statutory office holders in charge of Departments' have been given delegated authority—from 1 April 1996—under the Civil Service (Management Functions) Act 1992 to:

(a) prescribe the qualifications (so far as they relate to age, knowledge, ability, professional attainment, aptitude and potential) for the appointment of home civil servants (with the exception of the Fast Stream Development Programme) in their respective departments; and

(b) determine in respect of home civil servants in their respective departments the number and grading of posts outside the Senior Civil Service and the terms and conditions of employment in so far as they relate to the following:

i. classification of staff, with the exception of the Senior Civil Service;

ii. remuneration and allowances, with the exception of the Senior Civil Service;

iii. allowances for the Senior Civil Service in respect of service overseas;

iv. expenses;

v. holidays, hours of work and attendance;

vi. part-time and other working arrangements;

vii. performance and promotion;

viii. retirement age and redundancy;

ix. re-deployment of staff within and between departments.

In some cases, for staff appointed by statutory office holders, the Minister for the Civil Service was statutorily required to give consent to terms and conditions of service. For such staff, delegation has been effected by waiving that requirement, subject to the conditions attached to delegation.

The delegation was subject to the condition that recipients comply with the provisions of the civil service management code as amended from time to time. Copies of the civil service management code are available in the Libraries of both Houses. All previous delegations and authorisations made under the Civil Service (Management Functions) Act 1992 were revoked with effect from 1 April 1996.

Similar authorisations were also made to the Health and Safety Executive and the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service (other than in respect of qualifications for the appointment of staff where they already had such powers). These came into effect on 1 June and 11 June 1996 respectively and were also subject to the condition that they comply with the provisions of the civil service management code as amended from time to time. These authorisations replaced all previous authorisations made to HSE and ACAS under the Civil Service (Management Functions) Act 1992, which were revoked with effect from 1 June and 11 June respectively.

Government Information

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made in the revision of the code of practice on access to Government information. [11012]

Mr. Freeman: The revised code of practice on access to Government information and its associated guidance on interpretation have today been published. The changes made to both documents include a number which result from recommendations made in recent reports by the Public Service Committee and the Select Committee on the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration. I am grateful to both Committees for their helpful contributions and believe that the revised code and guidance are improved as a result.

I have also today published the revised "Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees" which now includes the code of practice on access to Government information as the clear, recognised minimum standard for providing information to Parliament in evidence given to Select Committees.

In so far as the requirements of these documents differ from those in their earlier versions, Government Departments have been asked to ensure implementation from 1 February.

These revised documents represent a further development of this Government's policy of openness.

I am placing copies of all three documents in the Library of the House. In addition, I have already recently placed in the Library draft versions of all these documents highlighting the changes between the original and revised documents.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Pools Industry

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the consultation on further deregulation of the pools industry. [11055]

Mr. Kirkhope: On 16 August last, I issued a consultation paper with proposals for further deregulation of the pools industry. The consultation period ended on 31 October 1996.

I have carefully considered the views expressed in response to our consultation document and am now in a position to report our conclusions and the way forward.

As a first step, I laid yesterday the draft Deregulation (Football Pools) Order to facilitate midweek football pools competitions. The order removes the requirement that football pools competitions retailed through premises must be based on forecasts of matches played on weekends and public holidays. The draft order is now subject to the scrutiny of the Deregulation Committees in both Houses.

I also yesterday relaxed the rules on rollover of prizes in pool competitions. When rollover was first introduced in November 1994, rollover in the pools had to follow rollover in the national lottery. This restriction has now been removed. Rollover will now be subject only to the requirement that the top prize must not be rolled more than three weeks in succession and subject to an overall annual limit of nine rollovers in each series of pool competitions. I have placed a copy of the direction in the Library.

In addition, I am considering proposals to allow the payment of football pools winnings in retail outlets and plan to bring forward a further deregulation order as soon as possible.

I have also reached conclusions on the wider proposals contained in the consultation document. The following proposals were put forward for consideration:

- relaxation of the restrictions on the types of sporting events for which pools competitions can be retailed through shops and other premises; and, as a consequence, reduction of the minimum age for participation in all pools competitions from 18 to 16 (16 is already the minimum age for participation in football pools competitions);
- removal of the restrictions on the timing of those events;
- allow payment of small pools winning in all premises;
- remove the requirement for promoters to notify their weekly profits and expenses percentage in advance to the local authority accountant.

Concerns were expressed by the bookmakers, the racing bodies and a range of organisations at the impact of allowing unlimited competitions on horseracing and sporting events to be retailed through premises, particularly if this were to include payment of winnings in public houses. It was considered this could change the pools into a harder form of gambling with frequent opportunities to participate and chase losses.

I have taken careful account of these views in deciding the extent to which further deregulation is appropriate.

I have decided that it would not be appropriate to bring forward a measure to allow the retailing of pool competitions on horseraces in premises. In addition, competitions on events other than football should not be allowed in liquor licensed premises or clubs.

Any further proposals to allow retailing of competitions on other sporting events would require further consultation with interested parties.

I have discussed the way forward with the pools companies and interested parties and I am satisfied that this package of measures will help the industry to compete without undermining the regulatory framework or changing the nature of the pools as a soft form of gambling.

ENVIRONMENT

Holiday Caravan Parks

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce planning policy guidance notes to encourage the development of the holiday caravan park industry. [10468]

Sir Paul Beresford: PPG21 already provides guidance on the improvement and extension of holiday caravan parks, together with more general guidance about the location and development of tourist accommodation and facilities.

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which local authorities are (a) extending the season for holiday caravan parks and (b) removing the distinction between touring caravans and tents in response to planning policy guidance 21; [10467]

(2) what assessment he has made of the implementation of PPG21 by local authorities in respect of allowing improvements of, and extensions to, holiday caravan parks. [10466]

Sir Paul Beresford: I am aware of concerns expressed by the British Holiday Homes and Parks Association, put to me in a recent meeting. I am currently considering these.

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will promote the provision of necessary staff residential accommodation within holiday caravan parks in planning policy guidance. [10469]

Sir Paul Beresford: Development proposals for on-site residential accommodation for site managers are considered within the framework of Government policy as set out in planning policy guidance notes. PPG7—"The Countryside and the Rural Economy"—restricts the provision of new dwellings in the open countryside in order to protect the rural landscapes and the character of the countryside but does provide scope for local planning authorities to grant permission for dwellings in exceptional circumstances for rural activities other than agriculture and forestry.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the transitional funding allocated to future unitary local authorities includes the cost of staff dedicated to supporting and researching PFI projects. [10408]

Sir Paul Beresford: Staff supporting and researching PFI are not unique to future unitary local authorities and all sensible authorities will be giving serious consideration to PFI possibilities. The cost of staff dedicated to supporting and researching PFI projects is treated as an on-going cost and not eligible for transitional funding under the local government reorganisation costs scheme. Through the scheme, resources are made available to meet the one-off indirect costs of reorganisation.

Wild Mushrooms

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the existing law on the picking of wild mushrooms for financial reward. [9116]

Mr. Clappison: Wild mushrooms are not currently shown to be adversely affected by picking. We are therefore content that the current level of legislative protection is adequate.

Road Signs (Corporate Logos)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the display of commercial corporate logos on road signs. [9117]

Sir Paul Beresford: Whether or not to allow advertising on street signs in their areas is a matter for individual local authorities to decide. For road traffic signs, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has no plans to allow corporate commercial logos.

Waste Water Treatment Directive

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the United Kingdom Government will meet the deadlines set by the EU urban waste water treatment directive for actions to be taken by (a) 1998, (b) 2000 and (c) 2005. [9118]

Mr. Clappison: The article 17 report to the European Commission on the implementation programme for the urban waste water treatment directive prepared in November 1994 gave no reason to think that the deadlines in the directive will not be met. An updated report is to be prepared shortly. The directive provides for the Commission to grant a limited extension of time in certain circumstances, but no application has yet been made by the UK.

Algal Bloom

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the areas designated as high natural dispersion areas to take account of recent reports of algal bloom problems off the United Kingdom coast. [9119]

Mr. Clappison: The Environment Agency is currently reviewing the areas designated as high natural dispersion areas under the Urban Waste Water Treatment (England and Wales) Regulations 1994 (SI 1994 No. 2841) and is expected to make recommendations to the Secretary of State in the summer.

Town and Country Planning

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to improve the town and country planning system. [11190]

Mr. Gummer: I am publishing today two consultation papers setting out proposals for changes to existing procedures to make the planning system more efficient and effective. Copies have been placed in the Library. First, I propose to restructure the procedures under which local authorities prepare and adopt district-wide local and unitary development plans including:

- the adoption of more statutory time limits;
- revised consultation and deposit arrangements;
- the replacement of the right for objections to be heard at an inquiry with a right for objections to be considered (initially by written representation);
- replacing the inquiry, in whole or in part, with an examination in public process;
- reducing the scope for the authority to ignore the Inspector's recommendations; and simplified adoption procedures.

Secondly, with regard to appeals against the refusal of planning permission and call-in by the Secretary of State, I propose:

- that the Secretary of State should decide the method by which appeals are determined, instead of the parties;
- to streamline the written representations procedure;
- to introduce a negotiation/mediation process to resolve disputes;
- a new procedure for cases to be called in for a particular aspect of a development to be considered, without having to examine the entire proposal; and
- the costs regime to be refined to deter tactical delays.

It is taking too long for local authorities to get district-wide local plans and UDPs in place. Last March, consultation papers were issued on minor improvements to the procedures. These changes are now being implemented. However, I also indicated that I was prepared to consider further changes if these were wanted by users of the system. Discussions were held with a broad range of organisations—representative of developers, conservation groups, local authorities and professional bodies. The consensus was in support of the plan-led system, which is delivering greater certainty for developers and local people. However, most felt that further changes are required to improve efficiency. A report, which summarises the ideas put forward, is also being published today, alongside the consultation paper.

The need for reform of the procedures is underlined by the most recent figures for progress in the adoption of plans. When the preparation of these plans was made mandatory in 1991 it was agreed with the local authorities to adopt a target to achieve "substantially complete" coverage by the end of 1996. The monitoring return of the position in September indicates that only 43 per cent. of plans will have achieved the target, although it is anticipated that the bulk of the rest will be completed in the next two years. Figures for the overall position and a list of all local authorities, showing the stage reached in their plan preparation, are being made available today. Copies have been placed in the Library. In some cases there are legitimate reasons why plan preparation has been delayed. However, it is for the individual authorities to explain their position.

Some of the changes proposed in the consultation paper would require primary legislation. In the meantime, I urge local authorities whose plans are not yet in place to give this matter a higher priority. I am also considering whether further measures might be taken to encourage the more rapid adoption of plans. These include the revocation of out of date plans and clarification, in the forthcoming revised planning policy guidance 1, that there are only very limited circumstances in which it is appropriate to refuse planing permission on grounds of prematurity in relation to the emerging plan.

I am also concerned about the time it is taking to deal with appeals against the refusal of planning permission. While a number of improvements have been made to the planning appeals procedures, with 80 per cent. of cases now being dealt with by written representations and a further 12 per cent. by informal hearing, there are a number of other options for change which deserve the fullest consideration. The consultation paper sets out proposals which seek to increase the effectiveness of the system whilst maintaining the balance between the rights of the individual and the wider interests of the community. Meanwhile, more planning inspector—PINS—resources will be made available for handling appeals. At present, PINS aim to provide an inspector for local plans inquiries within 26 weeks in 100 per cent. of cases. However, some local authorities withdraw at a late stage. In future, the PINS target will be 80 per cent. to allow for slippage. This will release experienced staff to handle appeals without inhibiting progress on local plans.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Historic Royal Palaces Agency

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what meetings her Department has held regarding proposals to privatise the Historic Royal Palaces agency. [10532]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None. The royal palaces are owned by the sovereign in right of the Crown. The Government have no plans to change this position. Discussions have been held, and will continue, on whether there are options, other than agency status, which could offer improvements for the management of the historic royal palaces.

Sportsmark

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on progress on the Government's sportsmark and sportsmark gold award scheme. [10961]

Mr. Sproat: The sportsmark and sportsmark gold award scheme was launched in secondary schools in October 1996. The scheme recognises schools which provide a quality physical education and sports programme. It is a key element of the Government's strategy, as set out in the sports policy statement, "Sport: Raising the Game", to put sport back at the heart of weekly life in all schools. The sportsmark gold award recognises those schools which show exceptional achievement, highly innovative schemes or outstanding progress in meeting their sporting aims.

The closing date for applications for the sportsmark and sportsmark gold awards was 13 December 1996 and 604 applications have been received by the English Sports Council. Of that number, 471 are for the sportsmark award and 133 for the sportsmark gold award. The assessment of these applications is now underway, and the first awards will be announced in April.

Primary schools are currently being consulted on a similar scheme which we aim to launch in October with the first awards being made in April 1998.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EU Fisheries Council

Mr. Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Fisheries Council held in Brussels on 19 and 20 December. [11025]

Mr. Baldry: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Fisheries Council in Brussels on 19 and 20 December, together with my hon Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland and my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

The Council agreed by qualified majority, with Belgium and Sweden voting against, the total allowable catches and quotas to apply in 1997 in Community waters.The agreement fulfilled the Government's objective of securing the best possible deal for British fishermen consistent with the scientific advice and the conservation of stocks for the future. In the final package the total UK quotas agreed for the stocks of most importance to our fishermen were some 23,000 tonnes higher in cod equivalent terms than the quotas being discussed at the start of the negotiations. This increase is worth approximately £16 million to the industry and leaves our total quotas in cod equivalent terms for these stocks just one half of 1 per cent. below the 1996 level.

I invoked the Hague preference on all the stocks where it was necessary to do so. Quota swaps were agreed immediately after the Council to mitigate the impact arising from use of the Hague preference by the Republic of Ireland, in particular on stocks of importance to the Northern Ireland industry.

The Council agreed unanimously to access and quota arrangements for 1997 with neighbouring non-member states. The United Kingdom has large cod and haddock quotas at north Norway and these were increased by 16 per cent. and 13 per cent. respectively. We have retained our quotas in Faroese, Greenland and Iceland waters at the same levels as in 1996. The Council also agreed unanimously to the allocation of the Community's 1997 quotas in the waters covered by the North-West

Atlantic Fisheries Organisation, together with technical conservation and control measures applicable to those waters, and to the allocation of the Community's 1979 redfish quota in the waters covered by the North Atlantic Fisheries Commission, together with management measures for those waters.

The Council continued its discussion of objectives for the next series of multi-annual guidance programmes—MAGP IV. I reiterated the need for the quota hopper problem to be resolved before I could contemplate any further reductions in the capacity or effort of the UK fleet. Other member states continued to have substantive concerns on various aspects of the proposals, though there was a broad consensus that the Presidency compromise tabled in November remained the most promising basis for progress. The Council concluded that further work should be pursued as a matter of urgency with a view to reaching decisions by 30 April 1997.

The Council agreed by qualified majority, with Denmark, Netherlands, Spain and Sweden voting against, a presidency compromise on the introduction of satellite monitoring arrangements. These will apply from 30 June 1998 for particularly sensitive fisheries, for example industrial fisheries, and from 1 January 2000 for other vessels of over 24 m overall length. All vessels which operate exclusively within 12 miles of the coast and those which never spend more than 24 hours at sea will be exempt. Where there is a reciprocal access agreement with third countries, satellite monitoring will apply only to Community vessels fishing in those third country waters if the third countries' vessels carry satellite monitoring equipment in Community waters. There was also agreement that concerns about skippers' liability in the event of genuine equipment failures will be addressed in the detailed implementing rules and that the Council and Commission will explore ways of reducing the regulatory burden on the fishing industry, with a Commission report to be submitted by 31 March 1997. The compromise met all the UK's main negotiating objectives and will usefully reinforce existing control measures to ensure compliance with rules intended to conserve fish stocks.

The Council welcomed the progress that had been made in removing many of the problems from the Commission's proposal for new technical conservation measures but noted that further detailed work was necessary before the proposal would be ready for agreement. So far as industrial fisheries are concerned, I called for the introduction of a precautionary TAC for sandeels in the North sea and I proposed that a new research programme into the effects of the sandeel fishery off the east coast of Scotland be used to monitor the effects of the fishery on sandeels and other fauna so that any necessary remedial action can be considered urgently.

The Commission introduced its report on the operation of the CFP over the last three years and issues to be addressed for the future. The Council welcomed the report as contributing to the debate leading up to the review of the Common fisheries policy in 2002.

The Council agreed by qualified majority, with Denmark voting against, a 10,000 tonne increase in the 1996 autonomous tariff quota for cod imported for salting and drying.

My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland reminded the Council of the problems of the salmon market, including the extended period of low prices, the prospects for continuing weakness in the early months of 1997 and the loss of jobs now being experienced. He pressed the Commissioner to reconsider her earlier decision not to introduce a further set of minimum import prices for salmon. The Commissioner, however, said that she still saw no case for minimum import prices, on the basis that the continental market showed no sign of instability, that minimum import prices had proved effective earlier in 1996 and that she was unwilling to intervene while investigations were proceeding into the industry's complaints about dumping and unfair subsidies.

Live Animal Transport (West Sussex Meeting)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recommendations resulted from the meeting in March 1995 between Dr. Venturini, Ministry officials and officials from West Sussex county council. [8878]

Mrs Browning [holding answer 13 December 1966]: None. However, a meeting earlier in March between Ministry officials and the French authorities led to arrangements being put in hand to ensure that the number of calves on each voyage did not exceed the capacity of the lairage in the port of Dieppe.

Live Animal Imports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many consignments of sheep were imported into the United Kingdom (i) in November and (ii) in December to date; how many sheep were included in each consignment; what was the place of departure on the continent for each consignment; and what was the total time for each journey. [9661]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer on 17 December 1996]: No consignments of sheep were imported from the continent during November. In December two consignments were imported through Dover and 2 and 5 December. They originated from points of departure in south eastern France, and travelled via a lairage in Belgium. These consignments contained 299 and 285 animals respectively. We have no information on the total time for these journeys.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Public Interest Immunity

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his oral statement on 18 December, Official Report, columns 949–50, if he will indicate how the law relating to PII certificates in Great Britain will differ from that in Northern Ireland. [10821]

The Attorney-General: The law on public interest immunity has been developed by the courts in each of the jurisdictions of the United Kingdom. This will continue to be the case in both civil and criminal proceedings, including proceedings in coroners' courts. Practice differs as between the different jurisdictions but in all cases where public interest immunity is claimed, the final decision on disclosure is taken by the court, which will order documents to be disclosed where the public interest in the administration of justice in the proceedings requires it.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 14 January. [9230]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 14 January. [9228]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is returning from an official visit to India, Pakistan and Bangladesh.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9631]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Details of the numbers of permanent and casual staff employed by the Department and its agencies are available from the staff numbers table, pages 120 and 121, of the Department's expenditure plans report, Cm 3205, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The staff numbers for the Insolvency Service executive agency are not shown separately in the report but are included with the numbers for the gross control area of the Department.

The information for the Insolvency Service is as follows:

Year	CS FTEs	Casuals
1990–91	1,439	25
1991–92	1,509	79
1992–93	1,551	160
1993–94	1,614	229
1994–95	1,573	289
1995–96	1,413	176

Mid-Kent Water

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to make a decision on the proposed takeover of Mid Kent Water by General Utilities and SAUR Water Services. [9952]

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans to make a decision on the takeover proposal for Mid Kent Water by General Utilities and SAUR Water Services. [10344]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is currently considering the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report. It will be published as quickly as practicable.

Child Labour

Mr. Parry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the recent meeting of the World Trade Organisation with particular reference to child labour. [10302]

Mr. Nelson: The recent World Trade Organisation ministerial conference in Singapore agreed that the International Labour Organisation was the competent body set up to deal with internationally recognised core labour standards, including those related to child labour. Ministers agreed that economic growth and development fostered by trade and further trade liberalisation contributed to the promotion of these standards.

Research Councils (Equal Initiative)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the impact of the equal initiative on the overall research council budgets. [9888]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The equal initiative has had no impact on the overall Research Council budgets, but it is influencing councils' prioritisation. Government funding for research is to support excellence and to refocus and reorientate effort into areas relevant to the well-being of the nation in order to get the best value for every pound invested. Foresight is an important input into the councils' priority setting and equal is an excellent example of Foresight in action. Examples of projects supported that are relevant to equal include: research into ways of detecting and preventing Alzheimer's disease, the influence of diet on health, medical engineering, robotics, and research into the design and utility of technologies for maintaining personal independence.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library copies of the instructions from the Office of Science and Technology to the research councils on the implementation of the equal initiative. [9887]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 13 January 1996]: No specific instructions have been issued to the research councils on the implementation of the equal initiative. However, equal is an integration of a very large number of individual priorities identified by the technology foresight sector panels. Research councils already support a number of activities relevant to the equal initiative and we are in the process of developing a more well-defined research agenda involving the research councils, other Government Departments, charities and industry. I addressed a seminar on 25 November 1996 which contributed to refining this process.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much energy was consumed in generating each unit of gross domestic product, on a standard basis, in 1980, 1990 and 1996 in (a) the UK, (b) Germany, (c) France, (d) Italy, (e) the United States of America, (f) Japan and (g) Sweden. [10759]

Mr. Page [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The available figures for total primary energy supply per unit of gross domestic product are as follows:

Total primary energy supply/gross domestic product[1]
(tonnes oil equivalent/thousand 1990 US dollars)

	1980	1990	1995
UK	0.27	0.22	0.21
Germany	0.27	0.22	0.19
France	0.20	0.19	0.19
Italy	0.16	0.14	0.14
USA	0.43	0.35	0.33
Japan	0.18	0.15	0.16
Sweden	0.22	0.21	0.22

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report "The Government's Use of External Consultants". [10183]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 13 January 1997]: My Department has implemented 28 of the 34 recommendations in the Cabinet Office report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants".

Recommendations 14 and 15 were rejected on the grounds that business opportunities for small and medium-sized enterprises would be reduced.

It was not possible to implement recommendation 10, 21 and 34 due to a decision to replace the proposed national consultancy database with regional lists serving the needs of local industry.

Action on recommendation 19 was for the Treasury.

I have asked the chief executives of the Patent Office and the Radiocommunications Agency to reply separately to the question, as they have produced independent action plans.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 14 January 1997:

I am writing to you in response to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about actions taken on the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report. The Government's Use of External Consultants. This letter relates to the action taken by the Radiocommunications Agency.

The Agency has implemented most of the recommendations of this report (where they were not already part of RA policy) in line with its policy of shadowing DTI policy on procurement, including the use of consultants. Two recommendations were rejected, numbers 14 and 15, which related to limiting the numbers of firms invited to tender, on the grounds that these would reduce effective competition, possibly excluding small and medium enterprises, and introducing excessive bureaucratic procedures. In addition a number of the action points stemming from the recommendations were for Treasury or DTI to take forward.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 14 January 1997:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about the Cabinet Office's recommendations on the use of consultants.

The Patent Office reconsidered its approach to the use of external consultants in response to the Cabinet Office report. It found that in practice it already followed the recommendations either through its close observation of the guidance in the Department of Trade and Industry Procurement Manual or through the mechanisms it had in place for the preparation of its Corporate Plan and Estimates. To reinforce the message of the Report the main recommendations were incorporated in a statement of the Patent Office's strategic approach to the use of external consultants which was circulated to senior managers across the Office. The Patent Office has its own Procurement Section which is staffed by trained officers and which oversees and advises on all procurement activities including the use of external consultants.

Trade and the Environment

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the discussions at the World Trade Organisation meeting in Singapore on the relationship between trade and the environment. [10796]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 13 January 1997]: There was no substantive discussion at the World Trade Organisation ministerial conference in Singapore on the relationship between trade and the environment. In the conference declaration, Ministers reaffirmed the importance of the work of the Trade and Environment Committee and confirmed that it should be established on a permanent basis to carry that work forward.

Arms Sales

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the procedures followed by his Department to ensure that the subsequent use of defence equipment is consistent with the Government's policy on arms sales and with export licences. [9988]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 13 January 1997]: My Department does not operate as a matter of routine any procedures to check the actual end use of defence equipment exported from the UK under licence. Any information received by my Department that gave reason to believe that exported goods had gone to an end-use for which a licence would not have been issued, would be passed to the commissioners of HM Customs and Excise, who are responsible for enforcement of export controls. It would then be for the Commissioners of HM Customs and Excise to determine on the basis of the information available what, if any, further investigation was appropriate.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chartered Aircraft

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aircraft he has chartered in each of the last 12 months; which airlines he has chartered them from; and what was the (a) purpose, (b) destination and (c) cost in each case. [9869]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The following aircraft have been chartered in the last 12 months by the Department on the Secretary of State's behalf.

Date	Destination/Purpose	Airline company	Cost £
28 May to 2 June	Bilateral visit to USA (Washington) Canada (Ottawa, Toronto) and Iceland (Reykjavik) and attendance at NAC/NACC Meeting Germany (Berlin)	Air London Falcon 900B Intercontinental Executive Jet LHR/Edinburgh Washington/Ottawa/ Toronto/Reykjavik/RAF Northolt/Berlin LHR	98,860
1 to 3 July	Bilateral visit to Saudi Arabia (Riyadh, Jeddah) Jordan (Amman)	Air London Boeing 727 100 series LHR/Jeddah/Aquaba/LHR	109,570

Hong Kong

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements have been made for the transfer of outstanding business from the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council to the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Court of Final Appeal on 1 July 1997. [11006]

Mr. Hanley: The jurisdiction of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will automatically lapse with Britain's administration of Hong Kong as from 1 July 1997.

The Judicial Committee will make every effort to ensure that outstanding Hong Kong business is dealt with before 1 July. It is nevertheless clear that there will come a point after which it will become unlikely for practical purposes that the committee will be able to accept new business with a reasonable expectation of being able to dispose of it before the handover. That point is likely to be 1 March. Hong Kong's court of final appeal ordinance provides that any appeal in respect of which the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council or the Hong Kong Court of Appeal has granted conditional, final or special leave to appeal to the committee and the appeal has not finally been disposed of on or before 30 June 1997 shall proceed in the court of final appeal.

TREASURY

Publicity

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what promotional and public information campaigns his Department is (a) currently running and (b) planning to run during the next six months; and for each campaign (i) how much it will cost (1) in total and (2) to his Department, (ii) what agencies or bodies are undertaking the work and (iii) what is its planned duration. [7417]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury is not currently running, or planning to run, any such promotional and public information campaigns.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department has spent on promotional or public information campaigns in each of the last five years; and how much he estimates will be spent on these campaigns during the (i) current and (ii) next financial year. [7546]

Mrs. Knight: The Treasury has not run promotional or public information campaigns in the last five years except in the sale of shares of BT2, BT3 and GENCO2. The costs of these campaigns are as follows: BT2 (1991) £14.7 million, BT3 (1993) £12 million and GENCO2 (1995) £8 million. These campaigns have now concluded.

Manufactured Imports

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for each year since 1979 what proportion of United Kingdom demand for manufactured goods was met through imports. [7828]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 6 December 1996]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 14 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on what proportion of United Kingdom demand for manufactured goods was met through imports, for each year since 1979.

The table below shows the import penetration ratios for the years 1979 to 1995, with the exception of the years 1989 to 1992 where figures are not available. Latest revised data are shown together with the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) on which data are based. From 1993 data were collected according to a SIC 1992 classification which changed the definition of manufacturing. The 1993–1995 data have been grouped to a SIC(80) basis to produce a series which is broadly comparable over the period.

Year	SIC	Percentage
1979	1980	26.9
1980	1980	26.2
1981	1980	27.8
1982	1980	29.0
1983	1980	31.1
1984	1980	33.4
1985	1980	34.3
1986	1980	34.3
1987	1980	35.2
1988	1980	35.6
1993	1992	43.0
1994	1992	47.0

Staff

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) permanent and (b) non-permanent staff there have been in (i) his Department and (ii) executive agencies of his Department in each year since 1992. [9628]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 18 December 1996]: The information requested is contained in civil service staff in post summary tables, copies of which are available in the Library.

Unemployment

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for

Dagenham (Ms Church) of 25 November, Official Report, column 72, on the number of people in Great Britain who have experienced at least one spell of unemployment since 1992, if he will list (a) how many have had more than one spell of unemployment, (b) how many are still unemployed and (c) how many are currently in work. [9667]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 18th December 1996]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr Frank Field, dated 14 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many claimants have experienced at least one spell of unemployment in Great Britain since 1992, and of these claimants how many have experienced more than one spell of unemployment, how many are still unemployed and how many have found work.

Since 1 January 1992, an estimated 10,451,600 claimants in Great Britain have experienced at least one spell of claimant unemployment and of these claimants 5,090,260 have experienced more than one spell. As at 14 November 1996, 1,775,250 claimants in Great Britain were claiming unemployment-related benefits although only about a half of these would have been unemployed for more than three months. These figures exclude clerically operated claims which numbered 23,000 in November 1996.

Information on the destinations of leavers from the claimant count is only available from January 1995 and is therefore not available for the period requested. However, in November 1996 an estimated 68 per cent. of claimants with a known destination left the claimant count because they had found work.

Tax Evasion

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many full-time equivalents staff were employed by (a) Inland Revenue and (b) HM Customs and Excise on tax evasion investigations in each year from 1990–91. [9984]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Approximate figures as shown in the table.

Year	Inland Revenue	Customs and Excise
1990–91	3,200	560
1991–92	3,400	570
1992–93	3,500	590
1993–94	3,800	630
1994–95	4,400	730
1995–96	4,300	730

The basis on which the Inland Revenue figures were compiled changed from 1994–95 so as to include staff engaged on all employer compliance work.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of evasion of payments of taxes administered by HM Customs and Excise have been discovered in each year since 1990; and what has been the yield. [9985]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The following table shows the number of cases involving evasion of value added tax in each year since 1990. The figures represent the number of criminal cases reported to headquarters for consideration of criminal proceedings, plus the number of cases in which civil evasion penalties were imposed, together with the estimated tax evaded.

Fiscal year	Total number of criminal and civil cases	Tax arrears £ million
1991–92	1,178	34.2
1992–93	1,135	40.2
1993–94	1,048	55.6
1994–95	931	92.8
1995–96	989	51.0

In addition to the tax arrears, penalties in excess of £10 million were levied each year.

There have been no reported cases of evasion of insurance premium tax or the new landfill tax.

Value Added Tax

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the increase in tax revenue resulting from the increase in the standard rate of value added tax from 15 per cent. to 17.5 per cent. in each year from 1991–92 to 1999–2000. [10700]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The estimated increase in net VAT receipts in each year is as follows:

1991–92	4.3
1992–93	5.3
1993–94	5.6
1994–95	5.9
1995–96	6.0
1996–97	6.6
1997–98	7.1
1999–2000	8

These estimates derive from an arithmetical calculation of the relevant share of VAT receipts and make no allowance for any changes in spending patterns resulting from the change in the standard rate of VAT.

Information Technology

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements have been made in the United Kingdom to appoint a national supervisory authority to monitor the data protection provisions of the convention concerning the use of information technology for customs purposes that was agreed at the Cannes European Council in June 1995. [11024]

Mr. Oppenheim: With her agreement, the Government are appointing the Data Protection Registrar to be the designated national supervisory authority within the United Kingdom for the purposes of the convention concerning the use of information technology for customs purposes.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will place in the Library the legal advice referred to in paragraph 31, page 9 of the National Audit Office report, "Aid to Indonesia", which satisfied the Government that all the projects referred to were within the terms of the Overseas Development and Co-operation Act 1980; [10716]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the legal advice received by his Department in relation to the regional physical planning programme for transmigration, the national overview of land resources and the regional physical map improvement and training projects in Indonesia to the effect that (a) the projects were not unlawful under the terms of the Overseas Development and Co-operation Act 1980 and (b) the projects were not unlawful under international law. [10720]

Dr. Liam Fox: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what United Kingdom goods were purchased by the Indonesian authorities in relation to the national police management training project. [10705]

Dr. Fox: Goods purchased in connection with the project were limited to training materials, such as books, and were funded by the ODA from the project budget.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to paragraph 36 of the National Audit Office report, "Aid to Indonesia", if he will place in the Library the legal advice to the effect that he does not recognise the primacy of international law. [10713]

Dr. Fox: The reference in paragraph 36 of the report to non-recognition of the primacy of international law was incorrectly attributed to legal advice given to the Overseas Development Administration. No such advice was given. Unfortunately, this was overlooked when the draft text was checked for factual accuracy.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of (a) the project completion reports in relation to (i) the radio studios rehabilitation project and (ii) the regional physical map improvement and training project in Indonesia and (b) the project monitoring reports in relation to the regional physical map improvement and training project in Indonesia. [10710]

Dr. Fox: Copies of the project completion reports for the radio studios rehabilitation and regional physical map improvement projects were placed in the Libraries of both Houses in November and October 1995 respectively. I will write to the hon. Member about the request for disclosure of internal project monitoring reports.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the developmental benefits of the radio studios rehabilitation project in Indonesia; what assessment he has made of the independence of Radio Republic Indonesia from the Indonesian Government; and what proportion of the output of Radio Republic Indonesia is educational. [10718]

Dr. Fox: The developmental benefits of the project were seen to be the improvement of broadcasting standards and the enhancement of a primary means of communication and education, particularly for rural communities, in a country whose population is very widely dispersed.

The benefits of the project were not considered to be dependent upon the status of Radio Republic Indonesia, which is a state-owned corporation reporting to the directorate general of radio, television and film in the Ministry of Information.

The most recent data—March 1996—indicate that educational programmes account for 17 per cent. of broadcasting time, with news and information and culture and entertainment account for 25 and 43 per cent. respectively. Specific target groups include schools, farmers and women. There is also an open university service.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of the project monitoring reports in relation to the police management training projects in Indonesia. [10704]

Dr. Fox: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library (a) the evidence available to his Department on the observance of human rights in Indonesia, referred to in the National Audit Office report, "Aid to Indonesia," which prompted his Department to decide to continue to provide aid to Indonesia, (b) the advice given by the embassy in Jakarta, referred to in the report, relating to the human rights situation in Indonesia and (c) a copy of the project memorandum agreed with Indonesia. [10714]

Dr. Fox: The Overseas Development Administration receives continuing information and advice from the embassy in Jakarta, from the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and from external sources about the human rights situation in Indonesia. I will write to the hon. Member about the request for disclosure of internal correspondence.

Subject to the agreement of the Indonesian Government, which is being sought, I will place in the Library copies of the project memoranda relating to the national police management training project.

Mr. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons his Department excluded (a) references to human rights from the project memorandum agreed with Indonesia regarding the national police management training project and

(b) human rights issues in the proposed training programme; and at what level within his Department that decision was taken. [10753]

Dr. Fox: Although human rights issues were not referred to specifically in the project memorandum or included in the training programme, one of the wider objectives of the project was to promote the concept of a community-based approach to policing, as practised in the United Kingdom, which emphasises the need for police and community to work together and respect for the rights of the individual.

Approval for the project was given by the head of the Overseas Development Administration's eastern Asia department, prior approval in principle having been obtained from Ministers.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons his Department decided not to support the third phase of the national police management training project in Indonesia. [10712]

Dr. Fox: When the case for a further phase of assistance was considered in mid-1994, the view was taken, in view of the substantial assistance already provided to the police, that a one-year extension of the second phase, to 31 March 1996, would be sufficient to consolidate the assistance already provided and to secure the anticipated benefits of the project.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of the audience surveys used by his Department to appraise and evaluate the shortwave radio transmitters project and the radio studios rehabilitation project in Indonesia. [10721]

Dr. Fox: None was conducted. The appraisals concentrated on technical competencies, broadcasting standards, programme content and the likely size and types of audience. Given the diverse and widely-dispersed nature of radio audiences, it is unlikely that worthwhile audience surveys could have been conducted in the time available for appraisal.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates his Department decided to (a) change the emphasis of phase 1 of the national police management training project in Indonesia from the training at Bramshill police college to in-country training in Indonesia, (b) let the contract for in-country training to a consultancy firm comprising former Bramshill staff; and what was the name of the consultancy firm. [10706]

Dr. Fox: The change of approach to delivery of police management training was explored at a meeting of officials in November 1985. The decision to proceed with a programme of in-country training was taken in August 1986 and a contract was awarded, initially to Bramshill staff college, in June 1987. A new contract was awarded in 1989 to consultants Johnston and Ladd International when one of the two consultants, both of whom had been closely involved in the development of the Bramshill programme, retired from the police service.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the National Audit Office report, "Aid to Indonesia", what are the strategic plans produced by the Indonesian police forces internal consultancy unit developed under the national police management training project; and if the 45 regional commanders expected to implement the plans include the regional commander for East Timor. [10711]

Dr. Fox: The strategic plans have been produced by the Indonesian police authorities on the basis of training provided under the national police management training project. The plans deal with levels of service to the public and with development of standards required to achieve them. It is not certain whether plans have yet been produced for all of the 45 regional commands, including the command covering East Timor, but we understand that the intention is to do so.

Crown Agents

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will name each person seconded to the Crown Agents in each year since 1979 indicating the company involved. [10669]

Dr. Liam Fox: For particular projects, Crown Agents make use of staff seconded from Government Departments such as HM Customs and Excise and, less often, from firms in the private sector. However, I am advised by the Crown Agents that information is not available in a form to answer the hon. Lady's general question. If there is a specific question about particular projects or firms, the Crown Agents will do their best to answer it.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which performance targets the managing director of the Crown Agents met in 1995; what performance related bonus he received; and what factors underlay the payment or non-payment of performance-related pay. [10668]

Dr. Fox: In 1995, the managing director of the Crown Agents was eligible for a performance-related salary bonus based on criteria related to levels of profitability, cost control and the ratio of costs to fee income for the year. In the event, no bonus was payable for 1995; the main factor underlying this was a lower than budgeted profit.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who represents the Crown Agents in (a) Iran, (b) the Gulf States and (c) Oman; what criteria were used in their selection; and what services they offer. [10670]

Dr. Fox: The Crown Agents' local agents in the countries named are listed in its report and accounts for 1995, copies of which are in the Library. The Crown Agents have since also appointed Transgulf Shipping as an agent in the United Arab Emirates. The representative services provided include inspection, shipping, freight forwarding, cargo handling and courier services in relation to Crown Agents' services in the region. The firms concerned were selected by Crown Agents on the basis of their capabilities in the relevant services.

Street Children

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give a progress report on actions taken since the oral answer of the then Minister, the right hon. Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry), 27 February 1995, Official Report, column 689, on financial support over a five-year period to the consortium of non-governmental organisations working on behalf of street children in developing countries. [10500]

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in implementing the plans announced on 27 February 1995, to provide Government funding over a period of five years for the non-governmental organisations' consortium on street children. [10701]

Dr. Liam Fox: The statement to which the hon. Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson) refers was an unfortunate error. The director of the Consortium for Street Children UK has already been informed of this. We cannot make multi-year commitments, nor can we provide the consortium with core support. However, we remain happy to consider specific project proposals. Since February 1995 we have provided a total of £46,700.

TRANSPORT

Bus Subsidies

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the total subsidy provided by passenger transport authorities to private bus operators in (a) England and (b) West Yorkshire in the last year for which figures are available. [10258]

Mr. Watts: The provisional estimate for 1995–96 of subsidy of local bus services by passenger transport authorities in England, excluding the cost of concessionary fares schemes, is £105 million. The statistics collected do not distinguish between support given to services run by private operators and those run by the relatively small number of operators which remain in the public sector. The figures for 1995–96 for West Yorkshire is approximately £22 million.

SCOTLAND

Skye Bridge Toll

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the advantages of using Portree sheriff court for the purposes of hearing Skye bridge toll non-payment cases; and if he will make a statement. [10840]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The prosecution of offences is a matter for my noble and learned friend the Lord Advocate. Persons charged with the non-payment of tolls on the Skye bridge commit an offence within the jurisdiction of Dingwall sheriff court. These offences are therefore prosecuted in that court. Section 4 of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1995 provides that where an offence is alleged to have been committed in one district in a sheriffdom, it is competent to try that offence in a sheriff court in any other district in that sheriffdom.

The Lord Advocate informs me that there are no plans to try non-payment offences in Portree sheriff court or any other sheriff court in the sheriffdom of Grampian, Highland and Islands other than Dingwall sheriff court. The procurator fiscal at Dingwall and regional procurator fiscal at Aberdeen are keeping the matter under review, and, if it were considered that the efficient administration of justice would be better served by prosecuting some of these cases in any other court or courts in the sheriffdom in addition to Dingwall sheriff court then the regional procurator fiscal would discuss this possibility with the procurators fiscal in the other districts and with the sheriff principal.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will estimate the additional cost per week of extending sitting days at Dingwall sheriff court from three to five for the purposes of accommodating the extra demands of Skye bridge toll non-payment cases; and if he will make a statement; [10842]

(2) what estimate he has made of the impact upon progress on other court cases of the Skye bridge toll non-payment hearings at Dingwall sheriff court; and if he will make a statement. [10843]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The marginal cost of providing additional sitting days at Dingwall sheriff court is expenditure on temporary shrieval assistance, amounting to some £600 for two additional sitting days. At present, there has been no appreciable impact on progress of other business at the court. The position will be kept under review by the regional procurator fiscal and regional sheriff clerk in consultation with the sheriff principal.

Scottish Office Pensions Agency

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the forthcoming prior options review of the Scottish Office Pensions Agency [11026]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In accordance with the Government's policy on periodic reviews of executive agencies my Department will commence this month a thorough review of the Scottish Office Pensions Agency. The remit for this review will be as follows:

To carry out prior options review of the Scottish Office Pensions Agency in accordance with Cabinet Office—OPS—guidance and the agreed timetable, by

(a) re-examining the status options considered before the agency was created, in the light of experience and of any changes in internal or external circumstances;

(b) testing rigorously whether the agency function is required at all, and the scope for privatising, contracting out (which could include market testing), transferring functions to another body, continuation of agency status or returning the functions to the Scottish Office;

(c) consulting widely amongst the key players in the agency (management and staff), the Scottish Office, HM Treasury and the Cabinet Office, as well as customers and other interested bodies and other suppliers of similar services;

(d) assessing each option in terms of practicability and value for money; and

(e) making recommendations accordingly to the Secretary of State for Scotland.

In order to help ensure that all options are considered fully, comments from interested parties will be welcome. Comments should be sent by 17 February 1997 to the following address. The results of the review will be published in the early summer.

Judicial Training

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the organisation of training for the judiciary. [11027]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have decided to establish a judicial studies committee to promote training for the judiciary both in the supreme court and in the sheriff court. The right hon. Lord Ross, who has recently retired as Lord Justice Clerk, has agreed to chair this committee which will comprise members from:

The supreme courts

sheriffs principal

Sheriffs' Association

Temporary Sheriffs' Association

Scottish courts administration together with a lay person or persons with experience in training techniques.

The committee will be supported by a director of judicial studies who will be a serving sheriff undertaking this work on a part-time basis. The remit of the director will be to initiate and promote appropriate developments under the supervision of the judicial studies committee.

The committee will be able to build on the foundation of induction and other training already provided by the Sheriffs' Association. But the speed and scale of change in many areas of the law in recent years, the increasing impact of information technology, and the greater emphasis across the professions on continuing development for their members all point to the need for more sustained and co-ordinated effort in the training field. In the past, there has been little or no formal training for supreme court judges, and the new committee will also consider their needs, which in some respect will be the same as those of the shrieval bench.

I believe that, by focusing effort in this way, the knowledge base and practical skills of the Scottish judiciary will, over time, be significantly enhanced, in ways which will both benefit court users and enhance public confidence in the justice system.

These proposals derive in part from work undertaken by a group established in 1994 under the chairmanship of the right hon. Lord Cameron of Lochbroom, for whose contribution I am most grateful.

I am consulting the Lord Advocate, the Lord President of the Court of Session, the sheriffs principal and the sheriffs' associations about the membership of the committee with a view to it starting work as soon as possible.

Research Institutes

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Scottish Crop Research Institute; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10010]

(2) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Macaulay Land Use Research Institute; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10018]

(3) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Rowett Research Institute; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10078]

(4) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Hannah Research Institute; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10114]

(5) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10014]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Work on the prior options reviews of the five Scottish agricultural and biological research institutes and of the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency was undertaken mainly by Scottish Office staff. The cost to my Department of each review was approximately £20,000. This excludes the cost of other Government Department and research council input on the interdepartmental steering committees which oversaw the reviews of the institutes and of other public sector research establishments in the same groupings.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Scottish Crop Research Institute as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10012]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Macaulay Land Use Research Institute as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10020]

(3) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Hannah Research Agency as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee; [10116]

(5) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Moredun Research Agency as representatives of United Kingdom interests; and how many of these employees are leading the United Kingdom team on their committee. [10120]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Based on records provided by the Scottish agricultural and biological research institutes—SABRIs—the number of committees on which employees of the SABRIs represent UK interests is set out in the table. The records do not identify which employees are leading the respective UK teams.

(6) what estimate he has made of the future costs of the prior options review of the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [10015]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Prior options reviews of the five Scottish agricultural and biological research institutes and of the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency have been completed. The Government are considering the follow-up to the reviews, but at this stage no future costs have been identified.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10186]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 January 1997]: I have made no such estimate; this is a matter for the bodies themselves.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants". [10187]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The Scottish Office has implemented an action plan to meet all the recommendations in the report. A copy is available on request.

Yester House and Yester Chapel

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what grants have been made from public funds for the repair and maintenance of Yester house and Yester chapel; what public access conditions apply to those grants; and what steps he is taking to ensure that those conditions are fulfilled. [10299]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Between 1977 and 1982 grant of £203,690 was awarded under the historic buildings repair grant scheme in respect of Yester house. The condition of grant giving a public right of access to Yester house ceased to have effect following a change of ownership in 1986.

Between 1990 and 1995 grant of £161,700 under the same scheme was awarded for repairs to Yester chapel. This building, although in the grounds of Yester house, is in entirely separate ownership. A condition of the grant to the chapel's trustees was that there should be public access by appointment. It is for the chapel's trustees in the first instance to ensure that all conditions under which they accepted grant are fulfilled.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for the Royal Victoria Infirmary NHS trust staffing levels on (a) 1 April 1993, (b) 1 April 1994, (c) 1 April 1995, (d) 1 April 1996 and (e) 30 November 1996 for (i) building engineering and maintenance, (ii) ground maintenance, (iii) capital project management, (iv) catering, (v) cleaning, (vi) fire detection and control equipment, (vii) laundry, (viii) medical and industrial gases, (ix) portering, (x) telecommunications management, (xi) transport and (xii) waste management. [10703]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The information requested is not available centrally. I have asked the chief executive of Victoria Infirmary NHS Trust in Glasgow, who is in a position to provide the detailed figures requested, to reply to the hon. Gentleman direct.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information on the savings accruing to public funds from his Department's anti-fraud measures was collected between his predecessor's statement of 6 May 1981, Official Report, column 79, and 1986–87. [8085]

Mr. Heald: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the number of new benefits claimants in each month since April 1992. [9031]

Mr. Burt: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Disability Living Allowance

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate the cost to his Department's budget of awarding the mobility component of the disability living allowance to those aged over 65 years; [9600]

(2) how many people he estimates would be able to claim the mobility component of the disability living allowance if it were awarded to those over 65 years. [9597]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: It is estimated that an extra 2.3 million people would receive the mobility component of disability living allowance if it were to be awarded to disabled people over the age of 65, at an estimated additional cost of £3.9 billion for 1996–97.

Notes:

1. Estimates are for the full year 1996–97 and are in 1996–97 prices.

2. Figures are based on disability living allowance (DLA) caseload statistics and the disability survey 1985 and are rounded to the nearest 100,000 people and £0.1 billion.

3. All figures are subject to error.

4. Estimates do not take into account changes to the payment of the DLA mobility component to people in hospital which took effect in July 1996, or the effect on other social security benefits.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants there are in the current year and there were in each of the previous four years for (a) disability living allowance and (b) attendance allowance. [9598]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is in the table:

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost to his Department in awarding the mobility component of the disability living allowance for (a) last year and (b) each of the previous years since its introduction. [9596]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is set out in the table:

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9388]

Mr. Burt: The information is set out in the table:

	Number of domestic ministerial visits	Number of ministerial visits abroad
Peter Lilley	13	2
Alistair Burt	84	1
The Lord MacKay of Ardbrecknish	15	1

Housing Benefit

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what methodology his Department is using to monitor the effects of the housing benefit changes for single people implemented on 7 October; what initial report he has received; and if he will make a statement. [9417]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Department has asked a representative sample of local authorities to provide it with data specifically related to claims made by single claimants under the age of 25 years, on a quarterly basis. Information relating to the October to December quarter will be processed and analysed when received, and will be published in the usual way. This data together with data from other sources, for example, the rent officers statistics, will be used to assess the impact of the changes.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will meet the chief executive of the Benefits Agency to discuss the time taken to assess the incapacity benefit claim by Mrs. Jean Cavanagh of 71 Thorns road, Astley Bridge, Bolton; and if he will make a statement. [9750]

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to meet the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He is aware of the delays that have occurred in this case and the chief executive will write to the hon. Gentleman separately.

I can now confirm that a decision has been made and that Mrs. Cavanagh has been advised of that decision.

Child Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the target time for handling departure applications from the time of the initial inquiry to the revised maintenance level being implemented; and what proportion of departure applications he estimates will meet this target in 1997. [9953]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Consideration is being given to the nature and value of target times for activity on departures in the light of live running of the new scheme.

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will extend the provision enabling child support liability orders to be entered on the register of county court judgments. [10960]

Mr. Mitchell: Since 20 May 1996, the Child Support Agency has had the power to enter liability orders made in magistrates courts in the register of county court judgments. To date, only new orders have been entered. From today however, the agency will also be able to enter liability orders made before 20 May. Those absent parents affected by the change will be given an opportunity to reach an agreement to repay arrears of child support before the liability order is registered.

Overseas Pensions

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances his Department acts on behalf of those individuals living in the United Kingdom who are known to have served in Nazi armies in respect of overseas pensions; and if he will make a statement. [9954]

Mr. Heald: The Department of Social Security will act for any citizen from any member state of the European economic area in accordance with the law. This includes application of EC regulations on social security for migrant workers—regulations 1408/71 and 572/72—where the person concerned has been insured in two or more states of the European economic area. The scope of these regulations includes contributory old-age, survivors and invalidity pensions. It does not, however, extend to war pensions.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if a person unable to claim incapacity benefit as a result of the all-work test will be able to claim the jobseeker's allowance for the first 13 weeks without pursuing employment opportunities away from their recognised past employment; and if he will make a statement. [10257]

Mr. Roger Evans: A person claiming jobseeker's allowance after being found capable of work under the all-work test is subject to the same conditions of entitlement as other jobseekers. A person may restrict his availability to his usual occupation for a "permitted period" of up to 13 weeks. Whether he has a usual occupation is a question of fact which may have to be determined by an independent adjudication officer. If he is no longer capable of carrying out that previous occupation, this is likely to have a bearing on whether he is regarded as having a usual occupation for jobseeker's allowance.

Someone who has physical or mental difficulties can restrict his availability in any way, provided that his restrictions are reasonable in the light of those difficulties.

HEALTH

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, columns 820–21, on the largest annual NHS payments to dentists, in which town is the dental practice listed in each of the years given. [9075]

Mr. Malone: In 1995–96 the highest earning dentist practices were listed in Norfolk and Essex. In 1991–92, 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95 the highest earning dentists' practices were listed in London.

Practice Nurses

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general medical services practice nurses there were (a) in each family health services authority and (b) in each region in each year from 1985 to 1996. [9767]

Mr. Malone: The available information will be placed in the Library.

I regret that my previous reply on 15 July 1996 at column 391 for Bolton family health services authority in 1995 was incorrect in respect of practice nurse data. I am placing the correct information in the Library.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 25 November, Official Report, column 114, how many and what percentage of national health service trusts in England failed at the end of the 1995–96 financial year (a) to break even, (b) to achieve their target rate of return on relevant net assets, (c) to stay within their external financing limit and (d) to meet one or more of these targets. [10805]

Mr. Horam: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to introduce measures to phase out the use of CFCs in aerosols for medical use. [10410]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

CFCs may continue to be produced for use in the manufacture of metered dose inhalers—MDIs—under essential use exemption under the Montreal protocol, and EC regulation 3093/94 by which the protocol is implemented in the EU. Decision VIII/8 bis of the eighth meeting of the parties to the Montreal protocol in November 1996 noted that a transition is occurring from the use of CFC-based MDIs to non-CFC treatments for asthma and chronic obstructive pulmonary diseases, and encouraged developed countries to take measures to ensure a smooth and efficient transition, and protect the health and safety of patients. The Government have accordingly begun to prepare a transition strategy which will assist the orderly phase-out of CFCs in the application as suitable non-CFC-based treatments become available.

DEFENCE

Equipment Contracts (Gloucestershire)

2. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the impact on jobs in Gloucestershire as a consequence of defence contracts awarded in each of the past five years. [8971]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We do not maintain estimates of defence-related jobs on a county basis. However, the south-west as a whole is one of the two regions with the highest proportion of those in work whose jobs are directly related to my Department's equipment contracts.

Cadet Forces

13. Sir Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the services cadet forces. [8983]

Mr. Soames: The cadet forces continue to play a vital role in the nation's voluntary youth movement.

Helicopters (Unauthorised Use)

14. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to prevent the unauthorised use of helicopters by naval personnel. [8984]

Mr. Soames: I am not aware of any cases of unauthorised use of helicopters by naval personnel. All flights by Royal Navy aircraft are governed by strict authorising procedures.

Departmental Land Disposal (Hampshire)

15. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has recently (a) received from and (b) made to Hampshire county council regarding the disposal of land in Hampshire that is surplus to his Department's requirements. [8985]

Mr. Soames: My Department maintains close liaison with Hampshire county council and other local authorities in the county on matters concerning the defence estate. Regular meetings are held, at which both general and particular issues, including the disposal of surplus sites, are discussed.

Anglo-American Defence Arrangements

16. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met the US Secretary for Defence to discuss Anglo-American defence arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [8986]

Mr. Portillo: I meet Dr. Perry on a regular basis; we last met during the meetings of NATO Defence Ministers in Brussels on 17 and 18 December. I look forward to working closely with his successor, Senator Cohen, when he takes up his appointment.

Departmental Budget

17. Mr. Brian David Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will calculate the change in his Department's budget as a percentage of gross domestic product between April 1990 and April 1997 under current plans. [8987]

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the change in his Department's budget as a percentage of gross domestic product between April 1990 and April 1997 under current plans. [8974]

Mr. Soames: Under our latest spending plans and forecasts of GDP, the defence budget will account for approximately 2.8 per cent. in 1997–98, compared with 4 per cent. in 1990–91.

Eurofighter

18. Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had on progress on Eurofighter with his German counterpart. [8988]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence met his German opposite number in November, when Herr Rühe confirmed that Germany expected to make a decision on the production investment and production phases of Eurofighter early in 1997. I met my German opposite number most recently on 5 December 1996, when he reaffirmed Germany's commitment to the programme.

Racial Harassment

19. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases of racial harassment have been reported in each of the armed services; and of these how many have resulted in disciplinary action being taken in the last year for which figures are available. [8989]

Mr. Soames: A total of 38 cases of alleged racial harassment in the Army were reported between 1992 and 6 December 1996, the last date for which figures are available. Of these, 25 were found to be unsubstantiated, and seven are still under investigation. Of the six cases substantiated, four have resulted in disciplinary action being taken.

In the corresponding period, the Royal Air Force has dealt with seven cases of alleged racial harassment. Of these, four were found to be unsubstantiated and one was withdrawn. Disciplinary action was taken in the other two cases.

The naval service has kept records of such cases for the last 12 months. In this time, five cases have been raised. Of these, one has been found to be unsubstantiated, another is under investigation and one involved disciplinary action. A further case was resolved without resort to disciplinary action. The remaining case relates to incidents in 1991–92, and is subject to a claim for damages at the High Court.

Racial abuse or discrimination is not tolerated in the armed forces. All complaints about racial discrimination are investigated and, where appropriate, action is taken against the offenders.

West Indies Guard Ship

20. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what tasks are performed by the West Indies guard ship and its accompanying Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessel; and if he will make a statement. [8990]

Mr. Soames: The West Indies guard ship and her accompanying Royal Fleet Auxiliary tanker provide support to our dependent territories and other UK interests in the region. They carry out a broad range of tasks, including disaster relief, support for international operations, goodwill visits, and training for Caribbean forces. They also make a significant contribution to the international fight against drug trafficking.

Overseas Service

21. Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in how many countries overseas United Kingdom armed forces are currently serving; and if he will make a statement on the global role of the United Kingdom armed forces. [8991]

Mr. Soames: British service personnel are currently providing a UK military presence either on operations or at permanent bases in 18 countries outside the United Kingdom.

Our armed forces are deployed around the globe to protect the interests of the United Kingdom and our dependent territories; to contribute to operations under international auspices, in particular those of NATO, the United Nations and the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe; and to promote and sustain international peace and stability.

Royal Navy (Upgrades)

22. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what upgrades are planned in Royal Navy fighting capabilities. [8992]

Mr. Arbuthnot: To maintain the Royal Navy as one of the world's most modern, able fighting forces, the capabilities afforded by its equipment are kept under regular review. A number of key projects are planned to enter service during the next decade, including six further type 23 frigates; two further Trident class SSBNs—strategic submarine ballistic nuclear; seven further single role minehunters; the landing platform helicopter, HMS Ocean; the two landing platform docks (replacement), HMS Albion and HMS Bulwark; the EH101 Merlin anti-submarine warfare helicopter; the batch 2 Trafalgar class submarine to succeed the Swiftsure class; the Tomahawk land attack missile; and the common new generation frigate, which will replace the air defence capabilities of our type 42 destroyers. In addition, improvements are planned to a range of weapons and equipment fitted to RN submarines and surface ships to ensure that they maintain their operational capability into the next century.

Organophosphate Pesticides

23. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the current instructions given to Her Majesty's forces about the care of organophosphate pesticides have changed since January 1991; and if he will make a statement. [8993]

Mr. Soames: Instructions regarding the storage and use of organophosphate pesticides are included on the safety data sheets for pesticides which accompany every delivery of service stock. The instructions have therefore changed since 1991 in line with changes in the inventory of the UK armed forces.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each of the toxic delousing powders or sprays used by British forces during Operation Granby indicating in each case (a) on whom and in what form it was used and (b) if it was licensed for use in the United Kingdom. [10641]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 13 January 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.C.8 and 3.E.10 to 3.E.17 of the report of the organophosphate pesticide investigation team D/OPPIT/3 dated 6 December 1996, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Ex-Service Affairs Unit

24. Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in connection with the Royal British Legion campaign to establish an ex-service affairs unit. [8994]

Mr. Soames: My Department has recently received a number of letters expressing support for the Royal British Legion's campaign for the establishment of an ex-service affairs unit. Replies have been sent to all these letters, explaining that the Government continue to believe that provision for former service men and women is best integrated with that for the population as a whole.

Hong Kong

25. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the impact of the withdrawal from Hong Kong on the role of the Royal Navy. [8995]

Mr. Soames: The UK's wider interest in security in the region will not diminish when the sovereignty of Hong Kong is transferred to China on 30 June. The Royal Navy will continue to deploy to the far east, as it has done traditionally. In addition to our continuing commitment to the five powers defence arrangements, we shall continue our programme of bilateral defence contracts with our friends in the region.

Defence Industry (Employment)

26. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's estimate of the number of (a) direct and (b) indirect jobs in the United Kingdom defence industry; and what was this number in 1990. [8996]

29. Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's estimate of the number of (a) direct and (b) indirect jobs in the United Kingdom defence industry; and what was the number in 1990. [8999]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Estimates of UK employment dependent both directly and indirectly on defence expenditure and equipment exports in recent years appear in table 1.10 of "UK Defence Statistics 1996", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Peacekeeping

27. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the advantages of earmarking troops solely for peacekeeping tasks. [8997]

Mr. Soames: Requests for British personnel to participate in peacekeeping are considered case by case in the light of other commitments. Contributions to peacekeeping operations can potentially be drawn from any part of the armed forces, subject to availability. We believe that this approach is preferable to earmarking personnel or formations. The inherent uncertainty of where and how operations will arise makes it very difficult to determine in advance which capabilities will be required. This results in the risk of a mismatch between requirements and earmarked forces. The United Nation's standby force arrangements, which identify capabilities in a large number of member states, provide a more practical and flexible method of identifying forces.

Ministerial Responsibilities

28. Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Minister is responsible for recruitment to the armed forces. [8998]

Mr. Soames: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has overall responsibility for all defence matters.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to encourage senior service personnel to co-operate fully with Government executive agencies. [8979]

Mr. Soames: Senior officers in Her Majesty's forces are expected at all times to co-operate fully with Government executive agencies.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter sent to invite Gulf war veterans who believe themselves to be suffering from illness originating from their service in the Gulf to present themselves for examination. [9673]

Mr. Soames: Gulf veterans who inquire about attending the medical assessment programme are sent a factsheet giving information about the programme, how to register, and travel and accommodation arrangements. In addition, since the wider use of organophosphate pesticides came to light, we have written to a number of veterans who have previously attended the programme, and who exhibit a range of symptoms which may relate to OP pesticide exposure, inviting them to return for further assessment. Copies of this letter and the factsheet have been placed in the Library of the House.

Relocation Assistance

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, by name, the companies that provide domestic furniture and personal effects removal services for armed forces personnel and the areas to which their contracts apply, including overseas moves, family moves under the service contract system and moves of single personnel. [9783]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. G. R. Hodson to Mr. Robert Key, dated 14 January 1997:

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total value of current contracts, by area, in respect of assistance to Army personnel who are posted from one location to another, broken down into overseas moves, family moves and single personnel moves. [9781]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive . I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. G. R. Hodson to Mr. Robert Key, dated 14 January 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, which asks for the value in respect of assistance to army personnel who are posted, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive Agency.

The management information that is produced does not enable me to provide you with the details in exactly the categories you require. I have, therefore, broken down what information we do have, as far as is possible, but we are limited in what detail we can provide.

For overseas moves of army personnel, both families and single, between the UK and some 80 countries worldwide, the total value of the current contracts is approximately £17 million per annum.

For families moves for army personnel within the UK, the total value of the contracts is some £7 million per annum.

For internal UK, the movement of the personal effects of single personnel takes place outside the main Unaccompanied Baggage arrangements. Their effects are moved by both in-house Service transport and commercial transportation as if they were normal Army freight. The management information is not available to distinguish such moves or their cost from the movement of other types of freight.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements he makes to assist Royal Navy and Royal Air Force personnel with removal costs when they are posted from one location to another. [9782]

Mr. Soames: When married RN and RAF personnel—and in the UK only, single personnel who meet certain conditions—are posted in the UK or to/from specified countries in north-west Europe, arrangements can be made to remove their furniture and effects at public expense where the circumstances of the move qualify. The removals are effected by a service which is based on the efficient use of removals companies contractually engaged by MOD via competitive tender. Service personnel should not need to meet any of the costs.

Range Facilities

Dr. John Cunnighnam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been (a) the income and (b) the operating costs of the Eskmeals range in each of the last five financial years. [10155]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 14 January 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the income and operating costs of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) range at Eskmeals in each of the last five financial years, since as Chief Executive of DERA this is a matter for which I am responsible.

The income and operating costs of the Eskmeals range in 1995/96, together with the latest forecast for the current year is given in the Table below. Information on a comparable basis prior to the inclusion of Eskmeals in the Trading Agency in 1995 is not available.

Income	5,365	4,355
Operating costs	(8,450)	(5,504)
Over/(under) recovery	(3,085)	(1,149)

1. Operating costs for 1995–96 include exceptional costs of £987,000.
2. Eskmeals budgeted for a loss of £1.329 million in 1995–96.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for how many days in each of the last five years the ranges at (a) Eskmeals and (b) Shoeburyness have been used for testing purposes. [10154]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 14 January 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the number of days in each of the last five years the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Shoeburyness and Eskmeals have been used for testing, since as Chief Executive of DERA this is a matter for which I am responsible.

The ranges at both Eskmeals and Shoeburyness have been in continuous use for testing purposes over the last five years. Each has a number of firing points or batteries and other test facilities and trials typically involve several days of preparation. The number of days in which firing took place somewhere on the ranges is as follows:

	Days
Eskmeals
1992	237
1993	241
1994	206
1995	215
1996	228
Shoeburyness
1992	240
1993	243
1994	245
1995	246
1996	225

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the projected income of the Eskmeals range in the current year and for the next three years; [10156]

(2) what is the projected income of the Shoeburyness range in (a) the current year and (b) the next three years. [10157]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 14 January 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about the projected income of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Eskmeals and Shoeburyness, since as Chief Executive of DERA this is a matter for which I am responsible. I will reply to both questions in this letter.

The projected income of the Eskmeals range for the current financial year is £4.4 million and that of the Shoeburyness range is £18.4 million. The budget for 1997/98 has still to be finalised and projections by range for future years are not available. The latest planning figure for total income across all of the DTEO Land Ranges (including Eskmeals, Kirkcudbright, Pendine and Shoeburyness) for each of the next three years is as follows:

1997/98: £29 million

1998/99: £27 million

1999/00: £22 million.

The equivalent figure for the current year is £32 million (against a budget of £44 million).

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was (a) the income and (b) the operating costs of the Shoeburyness range in each of the last five financial years. [10144]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

	1995–96	1996–97 forecast

Operating costs	(26,108)	(22,582)
Over/under recovery	(505)	(4,135)

I hope this is helpful.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the arrangements for decommissioning nuclear submarines; and if he will make a statement. [9866]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Ships Support Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. V. Babington to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 14 January 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the arrangements for decommissiong nuclear submarines as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency.

When a nuclear powered submarine is decommissioned it is defuelled and any non-essential or re-usable equipment is removed. This leaves only a residual amount of intermediate and low level waste within the vessel. The hull is then stored afloat at the location where it was decommissioned pending final disposal of the low level waste to BNFL Drigg, and the intermediate level waste to the deep repository to be developed by NIREX.

Ex-service Personnel

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies his Department has conducted into the time taken for service men and women leaving the armed forces to obtain employment; and if he will make a statement. [10452]

Mr. Soames: My Department has conducted a post-exit survey of service leavers since 1992 designed to evaluate the effectiveness of its resettlement services. The survey includes data on the employment status of respondents three months after discharge. Previously a copy of the then current survey was placed in the Library of the House, 12 May 1994, Official Report, column 200. Three thousand five hundred returns to date indicate that 81 per cent. of service leavers are employed or otherwise engaged in their chosen activity within three months of leaving. Other service studies support these statistics. In the longer term, York university's centre for defence economics study into the "Transition from Service to Civilian Employment", financed in part by my Department, is providing a research base tracking service leavers through initial returns upon discharge and subsequently at the six months and two year points.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what help his Department offers to ex-service men and women looking for employment after leaving the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [10443]

Mr. Soames: Resettlement advice is available to all service personnel throughout their service. A comprehensive programme of career and specialist briefings, training courses and elements of outplacement is also available to eligible personnel during their final two years. Training may be undertaken either in-house—two main resettlement centres and nine regional centres—or externally. External training, for which a grant is available, may be through commercial providers or educational/training institutions. Service leavers may also undertake familiarisation attachments or spend time with companies to gain work experience or on-the-job training. A separate marketing campaign promotes the personal qualities and skills of service leavers who, in their last six months of service, may register with the services employment network which provides practical help with job finding; and, after discharge, can remain on the register for 12 months. The two service charities, the Officers Association and the Regular Forces Employment Association, which are grant funded by my Department, also play a major role in job finding support for service leavers up to normal retirement age.

Meniere's Disease (Compensation)

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of payment of compensation to ex-service men who are identified as suffering from Meniere's disease; how many claims have been made in the last 12 months; and how many were successful. [10145]

Mr. Soames: My Department's policy on paying compensation to ex-service men who have Meniere's disease is no different from that which applies if a claim is received in respect of any other illness. Former Ministry of Defence employees are entitled to, and receive, compensation if the Ministry of Defence is legally liable for their illness or vicariously liable for any medical negligence. Information on the number of claims for hearing loss specifically relating to Meniere's disease made in the last 12 months, and how many were successful, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Naval Vessel Tendering

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Government's policy in respect of ensuring competition in tendering for large naval vessels among United Kingdom shipyards. [10647]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Government remain committed to their policy of achieving best value for money for the defence budget, and aims to meet UK requirements through competition and open procurement from the UK shipbuilding industry. We believe that scope for competition exists for large naval vessels.

Project Horizon

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on current progress on Project Horizon. [10872]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The next major milestone will be the start of the detailed design and construction of one first-of-class ship for each of the three nations involved in its production. This is currently planned to start in mid-1998, with agreed in-service dates of 2004. These dates do, however, depend on concluding a number of international contractual negotiations, including those on the ships' principal anti-air missile system.

Royal Navy (Alcohol)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the occasions on which (a) rum and (b) other alcohol is provided free to members of the Royal Navy. [9229]

Mr. Soames: The issue of alcohol at public expense to members of the Royal Navy is governed by regulations and occurs when:

(1) the order 'Splice the Main Brace' is given by Her Majesty The Queen or members of the Royal Family, or by the Admiralty Board, on special occasions of celebration or national rejoicing; or

(2) in very exceptional circumstances such as occasions of particularly arduous service or exposure, with the approval of a senior commander and, usually, of a Medical Officer.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10168]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Over the last five years, the total amount spent on external consultants by my Department's non-departmental public bodies, as listed in "Public Bodies", was as follows:

Financial year	Total amount spent £
1991–92	9,000
1992–93	1,200
1993–94	29,340
1994–95	33,120
1995–96	34,706

RAF Stanmore Park

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his latest estimates of (a) civilian redundancies and (b) military early retirement numbers at RAF Stanmore Park. [10533]

Mr. Soames: The majority of MOD civilian staff affected by the closure of RAF Stanmore Park on 1 April 1997 have been found alternative employment and every effort is being made to find posts for the remainder. It is possible that one civilian may have to leave on redundancy terms by April 1997. There are a further three civilian posts which are required until October 1998. Negotiations are proceeding to see if the occupants of these three posts can be transferred to service posts which are being civilianised. By April 1997, a total of 13 Royal Air Force personnel serving at RAF Stanmore Park are expected to have left the service on premature voluntary retirement during the current financial year.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cancer Services

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he has taken to recruit additional consultant oncologists and support staff. [9752]

Mr. Moss: It is for health and social services boards, working closely with trusts, to identify and recruit the additional consultant oncologists and support staff needed to improve cancer services.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to provide additional funding for the recruitment of additional consultant oncologists. [9753]

Mr. Moss: It is for helath and social services boards, working closely with trusts, to identify the funding required for the recruitment of additional consultant oncologists. I will consider sympathetically any proposals from the boards for additional funds to pump-prime the development of cancer services.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the planned time scale for the option appraisal exercise which is to examine future delivery of cancer services. [9754]

Mr. Moss: The option appraisal is expected to get under way shortly and is likely to take at least six months.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who will represent Green Park Healthcare trust on the option appraisal exercise for the future delivery of cancer services. [9755]

Mr. Moss: The Green Park Healthcare trust will determine the two people whom it wishes to represent it on the project board that will be established to control the option appraisal process.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the terms of reference of the group conducting the option appraisal exercise for the future delivery of cancer services. [9756]

Mr. Moss: The terms of reference for the option appraisal exercise have not yet been finalised.

Zoonotic Diseases

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many zoonotic disease conditions were reported in each of the past five years at the veterinary laboratories at (a) Omagh and (b) Stormont. [10837]

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is provided in the table, which lists the zoonotic disease conditions reported at the veterinary sciences division's Omagh and Stormont laboratories in each of the years requested.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Nurseries

Mr. Allen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which Ministers of the Crown currently make use of the departmental nursery for their children. [10806]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 4 November 1996, Official Report, column 333.

Information on the parents who use departmental nurseries is not held centrally.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Research Institutes

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Roslin Institute; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10106]

(2) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10138]

(3) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Institute of Arable Crops Research; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10042]

(4) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Silsoe Research Institute; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10130]

(5) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Babraham Institute; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10110]

(6) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Institute of Food Research; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10046]

(7) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Institute for Animal Health; and from which budget these sums were paid; [10102]

(8) how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the John Innes Centre; and from which budget these sums were paid. [10134]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Work on these reviews has principally involved existing staff in the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council which is funded from the science budget. BBSRC estimates the total staff and other incidental costs as £240,000. It is not possible to quantify the costs incurred by the several Government Departments involved in the prior options procedures without incurring disproportionate cost.

Fairtrade Foundation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received from the Fairtrade Foundation; and if he will take steps to introduce products marketed by the foundation into the cafeterias in his Department. [10892]

Mr. Nelson: I have not received any representations recently from the Fairtrade Foundation. The foundation is free to compete with other suppliers to Halliday Catering Services, who hold the contract to run my Department's catering facilities.

Science Budget

Dr. Twinn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the allocation of the science budget. [11469]

Mr. Lang: I have discussed the allocations with the director general of research councils and have decided that, subject to parliamentary approval of the supply estimates in due course, the science budget of £1,330.327 million should be allocated as follows:

Science budget allocations and planning assumptions

£ Million

	Allocation 1997–98	Planning figures 1998–99	1999–2000
BBSRC	183.300	185.445	184.193
ESRC	64.896	66.021	65.132
EPSRC	386.373	381.098	379.050
MRC	289.070	288.949	287.618
NERC	165.116	169.131	168.295
PPARC	191.850	194.289	194.094
International Sub.Reserve	8.800	13.000	13.000
CCLRC	1.450	1.450	1.000
Pensions	11.530	9.547	9.547
Royal Society	22.271	22.621	22.871
Royal Academy	3.370	3.436	3.486
OST Initiatives	2.302	2.381	2.381
Foresight Challenge	—	1.000	2.000
Total	1,330.327	1,338.367	1,332.667

These allocations will enable the research councils and other funded bodies to maintain the momentum in the key areas identified for national research and to carry forward the policies set out in the 1993 White Paper, "Realising Our Potential". An additional £17 million over three years has been allocated for urgent additional research into transmissible spongiform encephalopathies.

Further details are available in the paper, "Allocation of the Science Budget 1997–98", which I have placed in the Library of the House.

Telecommunications Council

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Telecommunications Council on 18 December 1996. [11408]

Mr. Page: I represented the UK at the Telecommunications Council held in Brussels on 18 December, arranged at short notice to discuss the postal services directive.

The Council reached political agreement on the further liberalisation of postal services. The UK supported the final compromise on the directive's further liberalisation proposals after successfully invoking the Ioannina agreement to secure improvements. Netherlands, Sweden and Finland voted against the agreement.

Under the agreement direct mail and cross-border mail will stay in the reserved area for the time being. The Commission will come forward with a proposal for further liberalisation by end 1998. The Council and the European Parliament will decide by 1.1.2000 on further liberalisation measures, in particular with a view to liberalisation of cross-border and direct mail as well as a further review of the price and weight limits, with effect from 1 January 2003. The directive will end in 2004 if no decisions have been made.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Pupil Costs

Mr. Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) the actual unit cost per full-time equivalent student, (b) the equivalent figure at constant 1996–97 prices and (c) the consequent efficiency improvement for each of the years from 1989–90 to 1996–97 and the projected figures for the years 1997–98 to 1999–2000 assumed in the Budget for (i) higher education institutions, (ii) further education colleges, (iii) maintained secondary schools and (iv) assisted places in independent secondary schools. [8844]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 19 December 1996]: The relevant information is set out in the following text and tables. Figures for each education sector are, however, not directly comparable.

Participation in higher education has risen substantially. One in three young people now attend university full time, compared with only one in eight in 1979. The expansion in student numbers has been accompanied by substantial improvements in efficiency and continuing high quality as demonstrated by the Higher Education Funding Council for England's quality assessments. Participation is planned to continue at record levels in the future and planned expenditure on higher education will increase by £200 million over the next two years.

Higher education institutions

Financial year	(a) public funding per full-time equivalent student (£)	(b) public funding per full-time equivalent student at 1996–97 prices (£)	(c) efficiency improvement Per cent.
1989–90	5,350	7,050	—
1990–91	5,310	6,480	8.1
1991–92	5,350	6,130	5.4
1992–93	5,110	5,620	8.4
1993–94	5,010	5,360	4.5
1994–95	4,970	5,230	2.6
1995–96	4,970	5,100	2.4
1996–97	4,800	4,800	5.8
1997–98	4,860	4,760	0.8
1998–99	4,840	4,650	2.4
1999–00	4,720	4,450	4.3

Since the transfer of responsibility for the further education sector from local education authorities to the Further Education Funding Council on 1 April 1993, both expenditure on further education and the number of full-time equivalent student numbers have increased. Colleges have also made significant improvements in their efficiency. The Government will make available an extra £80 million over the next two years.

Further education colleges

Financial year	(a) public funding per full-time equivalent student (£)	(b) public funding per full-time equivalent student at 1996–97 prices (£)	(c) efficiency improvement Per cent.
1993–94	2,820	3,020	—
1994–95	2,810	2,950	2.4
1995–96	2,750	2,810	4.8
1996–97	2,650	2,650	6.2
1997–98	2,560	2,510	5.6
1998–99	2,490	2,390	4.9

Comparable figures before 1993–94 are not available because of the transfer of responsibility for funding the further education sector from local education authorities to the FEFC from 1 April 1993.

LEAs are responsible for the allocation of resources to pre-primary, primary and secondary schools which they maintain. Since 1979 spending per pupil has increased in real terms by 48 per cent. For 1996–97 and 1997–98 total additional funds of £1.7 billion have been provided for maintained schools. Since spending depends upon decisions made by individual LEAs, the Government do not make projections for future years and does not set targets for efficiency gains.

LEA-maintained schools

Financial year	(a) LEA-maintained NIE[1] per pupil (£)	(b) LEA-maintained NIE[1] per pupil at 1996–97 prices (£)
1989–90	1,490	1,960
1990–91	1,620	1,980
1991–92	1,750	2,010
1992–93	1,860	2,040
1993–94	1,870	1,990
1994–95	1,890	1,990

[1] NIE—net institutional expenditure—represents the direct costs in schools of salaries and wages, premises and certain supplies and services, and from 1990–91 includes unspent balances held by schools under local management schemes.

LEA-maintained schools include pre-primary, primary and secondary schools. The figures have not been adjusted for any changes in the functions of LEAs, such as, for example, the transfer of sixth-form colleges to the new further education sector on 1 April 1993.

Spending on the assisted places scheme has increased since 1989–90. The amount of spending per assisted pupil depends upon a number of factors, including changes in approved fees and in parental incomes and contributions. Net expenditure per place has risen in real terms as the scheme has included an increasing proportion of lower income families whose contributions are smaller. Forecasting the relevant factors is subject to a range of uncertainty, and the Department does not publish projections of spending per pupil. Similarly, for these reasons it is not possible to calculate efficiency changes.

Assisted places scheme

Financial year	(a) spending per pupil (£)	(b) spending per pupil at 1996–97 prices (£)
1989–90	2,280	3,000
1990–91	2,580	3,140
1991–92	2,960	3,390
1992–93	3,300	3,630

Hampstead Garden Suburb Institute

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she received the report by the inspector into the proposed compulsory purchase order in respect of the institute, London NW11, and when she expects to make a decision. [10807]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department received the inspector's report on 4 November 1996. A decision on the inspector's recommendations will be made as soon as possible.

Assaults on Teachers

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what information she has collated concerning the number of assaults on teachers (a) by children and (b) by parents in the last five years. [10832]

Mr. Forth: This information is not collected centrally.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Spearing: To ask the secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will name those schools to which she has made official visits in 1996, and to date in 1997, in which standards of space, heating and sanitary provisions (a) were represented to her as inadequate and (b) did not meet statutory standards; and what action she has taken or intends to take in each case. [10899]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State visits a large number of schools each year in the course of her official duties. Any matters of concern raised during such a visit, including standards of accommodation, are noted at the time and dealt with on an individual basis, usually through correspondence between officials in the Department and the school or local education authority involved.

The responsibility for ensuring that school premises comply with the standards laid down in the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1996 falls to the LEA for LEA-maintained schools, and the governing bodies of grant-maintained schools.

Teachers (Wiltshire)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers in Wiltshire local education authority schools in the year 1995–96 were granted early retirement (a) with and (b) without enhancement; and under which budget head the financial consequences for each school are recorded. [10334]

Mrs. Gillan: The number of teachers granted premature retirement in Wiltshire LEA schools in 1995–96 was 26 without enhancement and 36 with enhancement. Payments in respect of premature retirement compensation cannot normally be treated by LEAs as a charge on the budgets of individual schools. Nor, where they are so charged, need they be separately identified in the LEAs' statutory local management of schools financial statements or in any other statement or return collected by the Department.

Schools (Wiltshire)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for (a) Ridgeway school, Swindon, (b) Greendown school, Swindon, (c) Westwood St. Thomas school, Salisbury and (d) Malmesbury school, the (i) numbers on the roll, (ii) social needs budget, (iii) grants for education support and training, (iv) flat rate allowance, (v) age weighted pupil unit, (vi) devolved total 1 budget, (vii) amount retained by the local education authority from devolved 1 budget, (viii) devolved 2 budget total and (ix) total budget for each school for years April 1996 to March 1997. [10335]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information in the following table is taken from the local management of schools budget statement for 1996–97 published by Wiltshire local education authority under section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988, now section 122 of the Education Act 1996. This statement does not contain, nor is it required to contain, the information requested at items (iii) and (vi) to (viii) of the question. The figures in the last line of the table represent the delegated budgets allocated to the schools and do not include GEST—grants for education, support and training—or other devolved funding.

Office for Standards in Education Inspections

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools have been inspected by Ofsted; and how many teachers have been graded in each of categories one to seven since 1 April 1996. [10911]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Investors in People

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of organisations with 200 or more employees are (a) recognised as and (b) committed to investors in people in each English region and in Wales. [11249]

Mr. Paice: The latest available data for Government Office regions in England are provided in the following table. Responsibility for Investors in People in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

The percentages of organisations with 200 or more employees recognised as and committed to Investors in People, by Government Office region and nationally, are given against agreed baselines of organisations with 200 or more employees.

Region	Percentage of employers recognised	Percentage of employers committed	Total percentage of employers covered
North-east	18	40	58
North-west	14	59	73
Yorkshire and Humberside	13	48	61
Merseyside	24	50	74
West Midlands	18	55	73
East Midlands	15	62	77
Eastern Counties	12	58	70
South-west	23	53	76
South-east	18	71	89
London	9	50	59
Total England	15	55	70

The agreed baselines are the numbers of organisations of the relevant size eligible for separate Investors in People recognition as counted by English training and enterprise councils in spring 1996.

TRANSPORT

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the road damage calculations quoted in the recent consultation document, "Lorry Weights", are based upon static conditions on a level surface; and what estimates have been made of road damage characteristics associated with typical dynamic conditions taking account of speed, uneven road surfaces and the variable quality of vehicle suspensions. [10906]

Mr. Watts: The dynamic effect of a given axle weight is dependent upon a number of factors including road surface, axle spacing, tyre and suspension type. The fourth power rule was derived from a series of dynamic tests in which different types of lorries were run repetitively over sections of road surface. The best approximation between road wear and lorry weight was found to be the fourth power of the static axle load.

Further work has been carried out in Germany and at the Transport Research Laboratory to take greater account of vehicle suspension and road types. But these effects are relatively small and static axle load remains the dominant factor. The TRL is currently participating in a European programme to determine the road wear effects of different tyre types.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions there are to seek an extension of the derogation from EC directive 96/53 admitting 40-tonne lorries to Britain; and what plans he has to do so. [10904]

Mr. Watts: None. Under the terms of the original directive, 85/3/EEC now consolidated as 96/53/EEC, the United Kingdom would have been obliged to accept 40-tonne lorries on international journeys from July 1986. The Government negotiated a derogation from this requirement which expires on 1 January 1999.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has had made of how much greater damage will be caused by the drive axles of 40-tonne lorries to road pavements when fully laden than is caused by 38-tonne lorries. [10905]

Mr. Watts: The 11.5 tonne axle weight of 40-tonne lorries would cause about 45 per cent. more road wear than the 10.5 tonne drive axle weight of 38-tonne vehicles, assuming in both cases that the axles are fully laden.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the estimated overall capital cost of the Jubilee line extension (a) at the time of Royal Assent to the Bill, (b) updated following the indexation of prices adopted by his Department for (i) 1996, (ii) 1997 and (iii) 1998; and if he will list the estimated deficit against the original estimate at 1997 prices, indicating from what source he expects this sum to be defrayed. [10877]

Mr. Bowis: At the time of Royal Assent the estimated overall cost of the Jubilee line extension was £2.1 billion in cash terms. The 1996 estimated outturn cost of the project was £2.6 billion in cash. That remains the estimated outturn cost. The difference between the two figures will come from London Transport's total resources, which include substantial amounts of Government grant. Additional grant has been made available specifically in respect of cost overruns related to delays arising from the new Austrian tunnelling method collapse on the Heathrow express project.

ENVIRONMENT

Noise Act 1996

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities have indicated that they (a) will and (b) will not implement the Noise Act 1996 on 1 April 1997; how much expenditure will be incurred or saved in each case; and if he will make a statement. [10347]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not available centrally. However, my Department is commissioning research to establish the level and type of noise complaints service provided by local authorities in October 1996 and to track development of these services, including take-up of the new night noise offence in the Noise Act 1996.

Landfill

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will commission research into the biodegradation rates of domestic waste in landfill sites; and if he will make a statement. [10518]

Mr. Clappison: The Department's research programme into the management of solid wastes with particular emphasis on landfill disposal processes has now been largely transferred to the Environment Agency. The waste strategy policy on landfill set out in the White Paper, "Making Waste Work", is to promote landfill practices which will achieve stabilisation of landfill sites within one generation.

Current research is directed towards a bio-chemical—bio-reactor—engineering approach to landfill to reduce the time taken for a site to become stable. Research results inform guidance set out in the revised series of waste management papers on landfill. WMP 26B, "Landfill Design, Construction and Operational Practice", published in 1995, describes the issues and indicates practices to achieve accelerated stabilisation.

Building Research Establishment Conservation Support Unit

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 304, for what reasons the recommendations and conclusions submitted by the consultant authors of the BRECSU reports 38 and 39 on ultra low energy homes were not published with the reports. [10659]

Mr. Clappison: Best practice publications, including reports 38 and 39 on low energy housing, take into account a range of inputs, including those from the participating consultants. They reflect generally accepted good practice taken from a number of sources and not just the recommendations and conclusions from individual consultant authors.

New Housing

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the findings of his Department's consultation to extend part M of the Building Regulations to improve access to new housing. [10795]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Given the very high response to the consultation, work on the analysis of the responses is just being completed. In the light of comments made further work is to be undertaken on the compliance cost assessment, and action on this is in hand. The findings will be considered by the Building Regulations Advisory Committee, along with the analysis of the responses to the consultation, prior to officials making recommendations to Ministers. Given the uncertainty of the timing of the outstanding work, it is difficult to give a firm commitment, but I hope that it will be possible to make a statement in the early summer.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of his officials are currently working on his Department's consultation to extend part M of the Building Regulations to improve access to new housing. [10794]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: There is currently one official working directly on the analysis of the consultation.

Rented Housing

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has for improving (a) services to tenants and (b) quality of management of rented housing in 1997. [10767]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: In the private rented sector, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has approved two management codes for residential property to be published by the Royal Institution of Charted Surveyors. These cover service charge and rent only properties respectively and will come into force on 17 March. Copies are available in the Library.

The Government will shortly also be implementing most of its package on houses in multiple occupation, which is contained in the Housing Act 1996. These will significantly strengthen the existing powers available to local housing authorities to control standards in houses in multiple occupation. Later in 1997 we intend to publish a code of practice for landlords and local authorities, to be followed by the introduction of a duty on landlords to ensure that their properties are safe.

Later in the year the Housing Corporation will be producing a new social housing standard. This will require registered social landlords to meet certain key standards, including a number related to housing management and services to tenants. In addition, it is further developing the performance indicator system, under which information about RSLs' management and services is made available. It is also updating its tenants' guarantees to reflect these and other developments.

We expect compulsory competitive tendering of local authority housing management and increased involvement of tenants to improve the quality of services by making them more responsive and efficient. Provisions in the Housing Act 1996 will enable landlords in the social rented and private sectors to respond more effectively to the problem of anti-social behaviour.

Planning Application (Wallsend)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will call in the decision taken by North Tyneside council to grant approval to planning application 96/02804/REM for the construction of 103 dwellings at the Victor Products site, Wallsend. [10910]

Sir Paul Beresford: No. Outline planning permission was granted by North Tyneside borough council for this development on 20 May 1996, and the current application—96/02804/REM—is for approval of reserved matters. The original application was advertised as a departure from the development plan, but the council considered that it should not be referred to the Secretary of State.

I am aware that there are local concerns about the proposal, particularly the density and character of the proposed housing, its impact on traffic and the need for local play facilities. I understand that council officers met local residents in November 1996 and are confident that the residents' concerns can be satisfactorily resolved.

Manchester Airport

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if planning permission will be granted for the proposed second runway at Manchester airport; and if he will make a statement. [11505]

Mr. Gummer: Together with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, I have decided to grant planning permission for a second runway at Manchester airport.

It is important to build on Manchester airport's success. It is already the 18th busiest airport in the world in terms of international traffic, with more passengers than Chicago. The second runway will cater for long-term customer demand. It will also create thousands more jobs and bring benefits for the whole of the north-west. This decision will be a boost for Manchester and the whole of the north-west.

A development of this scale will inevitably have impacts on the local environment, but the applicants have put together an impressive package of proposals to reduce these impacts and to seek the balance implicit in the concept of sustainable development.

Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution Report

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government response to the 19th report of the royal commission on environmental pollution on the sustainable use of soil will be published. [11506]

Mr. Gummer: We have today published the Government response to the 19th report of the royal commission on environmental pollution, on the sustainable use of soil. Soil is a vital resource, and different activities can constrain its future use. It is necessary to seek to understand these effects more clearly in order to avoid causing unwitting damage. The commission's report provides a valuable contribution to this process.

We have accepted their main recommendations that we should produce a more explicit strategy for soil protection. We intend to publish this for public consultation in the spring. This will allow us to build on the many policies and action which are already contributing to the effective stewardship of soil. The soil strategy will draw together existing work, clarify our goals and identify clear commitments for future action. It will also address the overall monitoring framework for soils, including the issues of access to soil data and the better integration of existing data.

Our detailed responses to the 90 other recommendations, made by the royal commission, which cover all aspects of soil use, are also set out in the Government response. Among the most important recommendations accepted by the Government are:

implementing the new contaminated land regime as soon as is practicable—recommendation 2. The Department of the Environment is currently evaluation the responses to its consultation on statutory guidance.

reviewing legislation relating to the Environment Agencies once they have had time to establish themselves—recommendation 4. A study of existing legislation is planned in order to identify the scope for rationalisation.

considering further ways to encourage farmers to seek advice on erosion control—recommendation 18. The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, for example, is planning to issue an advisory booklet to complement the soil code in 1997.

pursuing action to reduce nitrogen oxide emissions—recommendation 41.

Among other measures, the Government are contributing to the European Union acidification strategy planned for mid-1997.

Copies of the Government response are being placed in the Library of the House.

Water Directives

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the costs in each of the next five years to the water companies of the proposed revision to European Union directives on (a) bathing water and (b) drinking water; and if he will take steps to ensure that these costs are not passed on to customers. [10202]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The capital cost of implementing the European Commission's proposals for a revision of the bathing water and drinking water directives in the UK has been estimated to be in the range of £1.6 billion to £4.2 billion and £2.2 billion to £3.5 billion respectively, with the majority of the expenditure in the case of the proposed drinking water directive being spread over 15 years from its adoption. Estimates for the next five years would depend on the precise terms of what is adopted and when.

The effect of new quality obligations on customers' bills is a matter for the director general of Water Services in regulating charges. Under section 2 (2) (b) of the Water Industry Act 1991 the director general has a duty to ensure that companies can finance their functions. When new quality obligations are placed on companies, the director general will need to make sufficient allowance in price limits for companies to comply.

Housing (Newcastle)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many houses were (a) started, (b) under construction and (c) completed in the city of Newcastle upon Tyne in the half-years commencing in April and October from 1993 to 1996; [10290]

(2) how many houses were completed in the city of Newcastle upon Tyne from 1 January 1988 to the latest available quarter. [10291]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The table shows figures as reported to the Department by Newcastle upon Tyne borough council and the National House Building Council.

Anglian Water (Pollution)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (i) the location, (ii) the number of fish killed and (iii) the loss of amenity value for each category 1 and category 2 pollution incident caused by Anglian Water in 1995–96. [10199]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Details of category 1 and 2 water pollution incidents attributed by the Environment Agency to sewers, pumping stations, water treatment works or sewage treatment works operated by Anglian Water Services Ltd. in 1995 are available in the Libraries of the House. Pollution incident data for 1996 is still being compiled. Information on any loss of amenity value is not recorded.

Water Company Returns

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the items in the water companies' July returns to Office of Water Services which are not being made publicly available. [10203]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: A list of the information excluded from the July returns public documentation is given in appendix B of Ofwat's "A guide to the 1996 July returns for the water industry in England and Wales", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Pollution Incident Categories

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the National River Authority's and the Environment Agency's definitions of pollution incident categories for categories 1, 2, 3 and 4. [10198]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The Environment Agency's definition of pollution incidents is as follows:

Category 1

A major incident involving one or more of the following:

(a) potential or actual persistent effect on water quality or aquatic life;

(b) closure of potable water; industrial or agricultural abstraction necessary;

(c) extensive fish kill;

(d) excessive breaches of consent conditions;

(e) instigation of extensive remedial measures;

(f) significant adverse effect on amenity value;

(g) significant adverse effect on site of conservation importance.

Category 2

A significant incident which involves one or more of the following:

(a) notification of abstractor necessary;

(b) significant fish kill;

(c) readily observable effect on invertebrate life;

(d) water unfit for stock watering;

(e) bed of watercourse contaminated;

(f) amenity value to downstream users reduced by odour or appearance.

Category 3

A minor incident resulting in localised environmental impact only. Some of the following may apply:

(a) notification of abstractors not necessary;

(b) fish kill of fewer than 10 fish (species of no particular importance to the affected water);

(c) no readily observable effect on invertebrate life;

(d) water not unfit for stock watering;

(e) bed of watercourse only locally contaminated;

(f) minimal environmental impact and amenity value only marginally affected.

Category 4

A reported pollution incident which on investigation proves to be unsubstantiated in that no evidence can be found of a pollution incident having occurred.

Water Pressure

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in how many households the water pressure in the communication pipe fell below 7m static head for more than one hour on two occasions in any period of 28 days in (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93, (c) 1993–94, (d) 1994–95 and (e) 1995–96; and in how many households this occurred more than once in (i) 1991–92, (ii) 1992–93, (iii) 1993–94, (iv) 1994–95 and (v) 1995–96. [10201]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The information requested is not available. Information on inadequate water pressure for the years 1991–92 to 1995–96, measured against the Director General of Water Services' service indicator, DG2, is available for each year for which information is requested in Ofwat's annual "Report on levels of service for the water industry in England and Wales", copies of which are in the Library. DG2 uses a reference level of 10m static head with a flow of 9 litres per minute to measure the adequacy of pressure. This should be sufficient to fill a one gallon—4.5 litre—container in 30 seconds from a ground floor kitchen tap.

Minke Whales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has made to the Norwegian Government expressing the United Kingdom's opposition to Norway's draft proposal to downlist the north-east and central Atlantic minke whales at the next convention on international trade in endangered species meeting. [10465]

Mr. Clappison: The position of the UK and other EU member states in such matters requires a collective decision. Following a letter to Norway from the then Irish Presidency, my Department wrote to the Norwegian Government last month confirming that the UK would oppose the transfer of any species of cetaceans to appendix II of the convention on international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora while the moratorium on commercial whaling agreed by the International Whaling Commission remains.

Endangered Species (Import and Export Act 1976)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what special training and qualifications in the identification of threatened animals and plants are required for those persons responsible for policing the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976; [10412]

(2) how many successful prosecutions have been brought under the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976. [10411]

Mr. Clappison: The Act originally implemented the convention on international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora in the UK. In 1984 it was largely superseded by EC legislation, which implemented the convention throughout the Community.

There is no comprehensive record of convictions for CITES offences. However, we are aware that since 1990, 40 successful cases have been brought under the CITES enforcement regulations, 13 people have been successfully prosecuted under Customs legislation and a further six people have been prosecuted under the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act.

Training is primarily a matter for the enforcement authorities. HM Customs and Excise include CITES in their basic training and the police advise their forces that wildlife issues should be included in their initial training. Customs officers at ports and airports have access to comprehensive written guidance on CITES and the species it covers. Each of the 14 Customs zones has designated a CITES liaison and intelligence officer, and every police force now has at least one designated police wildlife liaison officer. These officers are a source of information and advice.

Both Customs and the police can call upon experts for assistance in species identification and other specialist matters, including from my Department's wildlife inspectorate, non-governmental organisations and universities.

Industrial Pollution

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate how many (a) sites and (b) hectares are currently contaminated by industrial pollution; and if he will make a statement. [10427]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The basis for an adequate estimate of the extent of land affected by industrial pollution does not exist. We are preparing to bring into force part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990—inserted into that Act by section 57 of the Environment Act 1995—which will give local authorities a specific duty to cause their areas to be inspected to identify land which meets the statutory definition of contaminated land.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many members of staff were taken on as (a) full-time, (b) short-contract, (c) part-time, (d) casual employees and (e) outside contractors by the CSA during the period 31 October 1995 to 31 October 1996. [9559]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for its chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. James Pawsey, dated 14 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about staff taken on by the Child Support Agency.

During the period from 31 October 1995 to 31 October 1996, the Agency employed a total of 229 fixed term contract staff; of this number 198 were recruited as full time staff and 31 as part time staff. During the same period, 780 casual staff were recruited, of whom 735 were full time and 45 were part time.

The Agency does not directly employ any outside contractors.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many members of the CSA's staff are (a) full-time, (b) short-contract, (c) part-time, (d) casual employees and (e) outside contractors; and how many ceased working for, or being contracted to, the CSA during the period 31 October 1995 to 31 October 1996. [9560]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. James Pawsey, dated 14 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency staffing.

At the 31 October 1996, the Agency employed a total of 6986 full time staff, of whom 178 were fixed term contracts and 510 were casual employees. The number of part time staff was 1395, of whom 22 were fixed term contracts and 36 casual employees.

The number of permanently employed staff who ceased working for the Agency for any reason in the 12 months to 31 October 1996 was 434. The number of fixed term contract staff and casual staff who's contract came to an end during this period was 834.

The Agency does not directly employ any outside contractors.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many members of the staff of the CSA were dismissed or had their contracts terminated for disciplinary infringements during the period 31 October 1995 to 31 October 1996. [9558]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for its chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. James Pawsey, dated 14 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency staffing.

The number of Child Support Agency staff dismissed for disciplinary infringements during the period 31 October 1995 to 31 October 1996 is 17.

This does not include any staff dismissed within the Belfast Child Support Agency Centre, as staffing issues at this Centre are the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many letters of inquiry or complaint from hon. Members were received by the Child Support Agency during each month between January and October. [9557]

Partners' Working Hours Rule

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his current estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers gaining from the abolition of the hours rule for partners of income support and jobseeker's allowance claimants. [10213]

Mr. Roger Evans: The cost of abolishing the hours rule for partners of income support and income-based jobseekers' allowance claimants is estimated to be in the range of £200 million to £300 million per annum, with between 70,000 and 90,000 gainers. This is at 1997–98 levels of benefits and incomes, assumes families claim the benefit which is of most reward to them, and takes no account of possible behavioural changes.

Child Care Disregard

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of extending the child care disregard to those on maximum family credit and disability working allowance by allowing the amount which would have been disregarded subject to a (a) 70 per cent. taper and (b) 50 per cent. taper. [10214]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Estimated cost of extending the child care disregard to those on maximum family credit subject to different tapers (1996 prices)

	Family credit cost (per annum) £ million
70 per cent. taper	10
50 per cent. taper	5

1. Figures are based on the May 1996 family credit statistics, and use actual weekly child care expenditure reported at that time, subject to the appropriate limit. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £5 million.
2. Figures do not include any offsetting savings in housing benefit or council tax benefit.
3. A number of maximum family credit cases gain from the childcare disregard, but by less than the full amount as it is the help with child care that brings them to the maximum. Estimates include allowing these cases to gain by the full amount subject to a 70 per cent. taper or a 50 per cent. taper.
4. Estimates do not include behavioural effects.
5. Estimates do not include disability working allowance as the sample size would be too small to support a reliable estimate.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To as the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas Adjournment; [9813]

(2) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and Summer Adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9812]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 13 January, Official Report, columns 12–13.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many asylum seekers have been refused benefits in the last year; and if he will make a statement. [9871]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows: from 20 November 1995 up to 17 December 1996 the number of income support claims terminated because a decision had been made on their asylum application was 7,564.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his current estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers gaining if a full disregard of spouse earnings were to be introduced into disability working allowance. [10211]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 9 December, Official Report, column 67.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many times the temperatures at (a) Loch Glascarnoch and (b) Aultbea monitoring stations have indicated levels entailing cold weather payments; and how many recipients have received such payments as a result. [10841]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Charles Kennedy, dated 14 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many times the temperatures at (a) Loch Glascarnoch and (b) Aultbea monitoring stations have indicated levels entailing Cold Weather Payments; and how many recipients have received such payments as a result.

The weather station at Loch Glascarnoch has identified five periods of cold weather. No periods of cold weather have been identified by Aultbea Weather Station.

Figures are not kept on how many people actually receive payments per weather station.

However data on the estimated number of people who would qualify (qualifiers) is available, for each time a weather station identifies a period of cold weather. For Aultbea weather station the estimated number of qualifiers is 238 and for Loch Glascarnoch the estimated number of qualifiers is 1,880. Therefore, an estimated 9,400 payments have been issued to those customers covered by Loch Glascarnoch Weather Station.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefits Agency (Doctors)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many doctors the Benefits Agency has trained in the operation of the all-work test; how many of those doctors (a) were found unsuitable and (b) left of their own accord after training; and how many have worked with the Benefits Agency medical services for a time but since left. [10219]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter for Peter Mathison to Mr. Frank Field, dated 14 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question about how many doctors the Benefits Agency have trained in the operation of the All Work Test; how many of those doctors (a) were found unsuitable and (b) left of their own accord after training; and how many have worked with the Benefits Agency Medical Services for a time but since left.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the enclosed table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Notes: [1] The table shows information from 1 February 1995 to 30 November 1996.

[2] Fee-paid doctors are not employees, but independent contractors.

[3] Doctors who have repeatedly failed to achieve a satisfactory standard at various stages of the approval process.

[4] Figures include those who left for personal reasons, retirement, etc., and fee-paid doctors whose contracts were terminated after approval, for failure to maintain a satisfactory quality standard.

[5] Separate figures are not available to show the number who left immediately after training of their own accord.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 286, how many (a) single pensioners and (b) pensioner couples there were in which three quarters or more of the total income was derived from national insurance retirement and similar pensions and other state benefits in each of the last five financial years. [10844]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

Year	Number of single pensioners	Number of pensioner couples
1989 calendar	2,750,000	950,000
1990 calendar	2,550,000	950,000
1992 calendar	2,550,000	1,000,000
1993 calendar	2,600,000	1,000,000
1994–95 financial	2,650,000	1,000,000

Notes:

1. The pensioners' incomes series gives estimates for pensioner units. A pensioner unit is defined as being either a single person over state pension age (SPA) or a couple where the man is over SPA.

2. Income from state benefits has been calculated as income form national insurance benefits and all other benefits that may be received above SPA, such as income related benefits and disability benefits.

3. The figures given are for the last five years for which pensioners' incomes series data is available, and rounded to the nearest 50,000. Due to this rounding, the totals may not necessarily sum to the totals given in my answer of 11 December Official Report, column 286.

Source:

Pensioners' incomes series. This is based mainly on data from the family expenditure survey carried out over calendar years up to and including 1993, and carried out over financial years from 1994–95 onwards, covering the whole of the United Kingdom.

McVeigh.

The area continues to receive police attention.

DEFENCE

Radioactivity (Greenham Common)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the findings of the study, "An Assessment of Radioactive Levels around the Former Air Base at Greenham Common, Berkshire, NRPB–M752, published on 19 December 1996; what was the cost to his Department of this study; and what follow-up studies are planned. [10893]

Mr. Soames: We are pleased to note the conclusions of this independent study by the NRPB which my Department has funded at a cost in the region of £50,000. The study has provided definitive reassurance that, on the basis of the measurement data, the doses received from artificial radionuclides by people living in the area around Newbury and Greenham Common are no different to those received in similar areas elsewhere in the country. The findings of the study are entirely consistent with my Department's assurances that there is no basis to the allegations made last year about a nuclear weapon accident at the base. There are no plans to commission any further such studies.

Sandhurst

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement regarding the outsourcing of the operation of Sandhurst. [10875]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Army Individual Training Organisation. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. L. Elliott to Mr. John Spellar, dated 15 January 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the outsourcing of the operation at Sandhurst as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Individual Training Organisation (AITO).

A feasibility study was undertaken at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst (RMAS) to identify the scope for involving the Private Sector in delivering activities undertaken there. The study reported at the end of April 1996 and concluded that a range of activities could usefully be exposed to competitive tendering. There were:

Domestic Services/Management

Equipment Support/Management

Estate Services/Management

Personnel Services/Management

Sports Facilities/Management

Stores Services/Management

Transport and Distribution/Management.

The total annual net cash value of these services is £7.9M (which includes current contracts valued at £3.03M) with some 227 civilians and 92 military personnel affected.

The study concluded that best value for money would be achieved by market testing the services within the scope of the competition; as such an in-house bid team has been formed to mount a bid for the services.

A detailed Statement of User Requirement is currently being developed and the aim is to issue an invitation to tender in March 1997 and to award a Service Level Agreement (to a successful in-house bid) or a contract to a winning contractor, in March 1998.

You may also be aware of activities concerned with the running of the Joint Services Command and Staff College which is also located at Sandhurst. The College is not part of the AITO and I cannot therefore comment on this.

Royal Marines

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many individuals have left the Royal Marines in each of the last five years. [10868]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Naval Manning Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from F. M. Mabon to Mr. John Spellar, dated 15 January 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of Royal Marines leaving Her Majesty's Service in each of the last five years, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Naval Manning Agency.

The figures for RM discharges from the trained strength in financial years 1991–92—1995–96 are as shown below:

Year	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Officers	50	32	29	44	51
Other ranks	621	420	358	262	557
Total	671	452	387	306	608

I hope this is helpful

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to complete the sale of DERA's support services division; and if he will make a statement. [11471]

Mr. Soames: Following competition, we have assessed the bid put forward by the venture capital group, Apax Partners and Co., who propose working with the existing DSSD management team, as offering the best value for money. Consequently, Apax have been granted a period of exclusivity to allow them to carry out the due diligence process and to conclude a contract with DERA on the basis of their offer. Subject to the satisfactory completion of both of these processes, it is intended that a sale should be completed by mid-February.

Paedophiles

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the average weekly costs of accommodation and what are the subsequent recidivism rates for paedophile offenders (a) in prison and (b) in the Wolvercote clinic. [9601]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Hugh Taylor to Mr. Peter Thurnham, dated 15 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the average weekly cost of accommodation and the subsequent recidivist rates for paedophile offenders (a) in prison and (b) in the Wolvercote Clinic.

Cost per place figures relating specifically to paedophile offenders are not available. The average cost per prisoner for the financial year 1995–96 was £466 per week. The weekly charge for the Wolvercote Clinic is £550.

A 10 year follow-up study on reconviction rates for a sample of paedophiles released from prison in 1980 showed that 36 per cent of paedophiles committed further sexual offences. For serious offences, which included sex or violent offences, the rate of reoffending increased to 45 per cent. This information may appear to be dated but follow-up studies must be for a substantial period of time. Social and legal changes may also affect reconviction rates. A 10 year reconviction study is currently in progress on the Sex Offender Treatment Programme but it is too early for results.

To date, only three offenders have completed the full programme at the Wolvercote Clinic which opened in August 1995. No information is available yet on recidivists.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Government Departments and other public bodies maintain lists of (a) convicted and (b) alleged paedophile offenders; what guidance has been issued to local authorities concerning that information on such offenders; what co-ordination there is between the different bodies concerned; and if he will make a statement. [10683]

Mr. Maclean: Information about convicted and alleged paedophiles is held by the following Government Departments and public bodies.

The police hold information about those convicted of sexual offences against children on the Phoenix database of the police national computer and on microfiche records held by the national identification service. They may also retain information locally about alleged paedophiles.

The national criminal intelligence service—NCIS—maintains a database of known or suspected paedophiles.

The Department for Education and Employment maintains a list of persons barred from working in education and in respect of whom the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has made a direction under the Education (Teachers) Regulations 1993, as amended—"List 99".

The Department of Health consultancy index holds information on those notified to it by the police who are or were employed in child care work and who have been convicted of an offence, including sexual offences against children; the information on "List 99", and notifications from employers of the names of persons who formerly worked with children and who have been dismissed or who have resigned in circumstances where the welfare of a child has been put at risk through physical, sexual or emotional abuse or a child has suffered or was likely to suffer harm arising from the action of a member of staff or volunteer engaged to work with children.

Guidance issued to local authorities includes the Department for Education and Employment circular 11/95, "Misconduct of Teachers and Workers with Children and Young Persons", and the joint circular from the Home Office (HOC 47/93), Department for Education (DfEE 9/93), Department of Health (LAC 93(17)), and the Welsh Office (WOC 54/93) on "Protection of Children: Disclosure of Criminal Record Background of those with Access to Children". This includes an explanation of the information available to local authorities from police records, the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Employment.

NCIS passes on information about paedophiles to the force in whose area the paedophile is working or living. In addition to this, the police notify the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Employment of convictions of those individuals working in child care posts or as teachers or workers with children or young persons.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each local authority in Scotland the actual capital receipts at the mid-point of 1996–97, indicating for each authority (a) receipts from right to buy, (b) receipts from stock transfer and (c) receipts from land sales; and if he will indicate for each authority and for each category of receipts the mid-year targets set out in the estimates at the start of the year. [10697]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The table which follows lists the actual capital receipts from the sale of housing stock and land reported by local authorities as having been achieved in the six months to 30 September 1996. The Scottish Office does not set mid-year targets for capital receipts.

Housing capital receipts achieved between 1 April and 30 September 1996

Farmers (Negative Equity)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of farmers with negative equity; and if he will make a statement. [10522]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: None. However, in each of the last three years for which results are available, around 1 per cent. of farm businesses in the farm accounts survey in Scotland had liabilities exceeding total business assets.

Strathclyde Police Force

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many police officers of ethnic minority origin there are in the Strathclyde force above the rank of constable; and what ranks they have reached. [10633]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In Strathclyde police there is one such officer, in the rank of sergeant.

TREASURY

Petrol and Diesel Duties

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total income to the Treasury, measured against an indexed base, resulting from an increase in petrol and diesel duties of (a) 3p per litre and (b) 4.5p per litre. [10204]

Mr. Oppenheim: Indexed base estimates strip out the effect of the pre-announced 5 per cent. real increase in road fuel duties. In the 1996 Budget, this accounts for £1.2 billion of the £1.4 billion total increase in revenue in 1997–98 referred to in my previous written answer to the hon. Member, Official Report, 11 December 1996, column 209. Accordingly, on an indexed base alone, a 3p per litre increase in petrol and diesel duties in the 1996 Budget would yield the remaining £0.2 billion in 1997–98. Similarly, on a purely indexed base, a 4.5p per litre increase in petrol and diesel duties would yield £0.9 billion, bringing the total yield to the £2.1 billion referred to in my previous answer.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10178]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The amount spent on external consultants by the Chancellor's non-departmental public bodies for the period in question is shown in the table:

Year	£
1991–92	761,703
1992–93	1,378,560
1993–94	1,858,776
1994–95	1,328,711
1995–96	932,640

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants". [10179]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The Treasury has taken, or is taking, all the actions necessary to comply with the report both as a central Department and as a user of consultants.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the level of United Kingdom gross domestic product for each year since 1970 at (a) current prices and (b) 1996–97 prices; and what was the percentage annual change each year at constant 1996–97 prices. [10758]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Michael Meacher, dated 15 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the level of United Kingdom gross domestic product.

The most recent estimates of gross domestic product (GDP) are published in table A1 of the ONS publication United Kingdom Economic Accounts, which has annual data from 1988 to 1995. Alteratively the data are available for a longer time series on the ONS CSDB database. Both are available through the House of Commons Library.

The ONS does not estimate at 1996–97 prices, however GDP data are available at 1990 constant prices. These are also available in the United Kingdom Economic Accounts publication or via the CSDB database.

[1] Estimates are given to the nearest £ million and in case of indices to one decimal place but cannot be regarded as accurate to this degree. Estimates at current market prices are affected by the abolition of domestic rates and the introduction of the community charge.
[2] Equals taxes on expenditure less subsidies.
[3] The factor cost estimate of GDP is obtained from the market price estimate by subtracting the factor cost adjustment.
[4] Gross national product equals Gross domestic product plus Net property income from abroad.
[5] Represents Taxes on expenditure less Subsidies both valued at 1990 prices.

EU Contributions

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Union for 1995–96; and what factors underlie the discrepancies between this figure and the estimate of the European Union Court of Auditors. [10234]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The Treasury estimates the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Community budget in the financial year 1995–96 to be £3,852 million. However, since this figure relates to a UK financial year while the European Court of Auditors' report provides calendar year data, the two are not directly comparable. The Treasury estimate of our net contribution to the European Community in the calendar year 1995 is £4,017 million. This compares with the figure of £3,866 million in the Court of Auditors report—assuming an exchange rate of £1=1.2211 ecu. One of the main reasons for the difference is that the Court of Auditors' figures include payments by the Community direct to the UK private sector which are not to be taken into account in the Treasury's estimate which relates to UK public sector transactions. There may also have been differences in the years to which particular public sector transactions near to year-end were scored. A fuller explanation of the differences between the two figures will be included in the Government's White Paper statement on the 1997 EC Budget.

Duty Free Allowance

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to maintain the duty free allowance. [10327]

Mr. Oppenheim: Duty free sales for intra-EU travel would have ceased on 1 January 1993 with the introduction of the single market. However, the decision to allow such sales to continue until 30 June 1999 was taken by the Council of Finance Ministers, including the then British Chancellor, towards the end of 1991. The UK supported this measure because additional time to remove an anomaly in the single market would permit the various trade interests time to make adjustments to their businesses. At this stage, there is no reason to change the underlying analysis.

Duty free sales for travel outside the EU will continue after 30 June 1999.

Pension Funds

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what sums were received by the Exchequer from the pension funds of each Government asset prior to privatisation of that asset. [10630]

Mr. Jack: No sums have been received prior to the privatisation of any public sector industry, but in three cases a pension fund surplus, or part of it, has been, or is being, paid to the Exchequer after privatisation. In the case of the National Bus Company, a £120 million surplus on its pension schemes was paid to HM Treasury in 1990, two to four years after the privatisation of the various NBC subsidiaries. In the case of the British Coal Corporation pension fund, a first payment of £39.5 million was received in 1996—more than a year after privatisation; in the case of Harland and Wolff, which was privatised in 1989, it was agreed that Harland and Wolff Holdings plc would repay to the Department of Economic Development a £6.5 million pension fund surplus: £1.15 million has been repaid to date.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle Cull

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans there are for the future disposal of cattle slaughtered to comply with the EC instructions. [10341]

Mr. Baldry: It is not clear to which specific EC instructions the question refers. However, in the context of the Government's BSE eradication programme, all BSE suspect animals are slaughtered on farm and sent for direct incineration in incineration plants contracted to the Ministry. Cattle purchased under the over-30-months scheme are slaughtered in compliance with Commission regulation 716/96 which requires the carcases to be disposed of by incineration or rendering and destruction.

The Government announced on 16 December 1996 that the selective cull would go ahead and the disposal of any animal slaughtered under this scheme will be in compliance with regulation 1484/96, which also requires incineration or rendering and destruction.

Ministerial Leave

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many days of leave he plans to take during the Christmas Adjournment; [9811]

(2) how many days leave he has taken in the Easter, Whitsun and summer Adjournments; and how many days leave he took during the time in which Parliament was prorogued this year. [9810]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 13 January 1997, Official Report, columns 12–13.

BSE

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's proposals in respect of the crates used for the storage and transportation of animal carcases in the BSE eradication programme. [9891]

Mr. Baldry: Crates are used only for the transportation and storage of over-30-months scheme carcases going into or out of cold storage.

When carcases are removed from cold stores the operators have been instructed to store the crates safely pending destruction.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what methods of incineration are currently being (a) used and (b) experimented with in connection with the BSE eradication programme. [9892]

Mrs. Browning: Current incineration methods include burning carcases in dedicated incinerators and meat and bonemeal in a high-temperature waste incinerator. Other possibilities under consideration include the burning of MBM and tallow for energy recovery in power stations.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what payments have been made to date to slaughterers in connection with the BSE eradication programme. [9895]

Mr. Baldry: As at 6 January, £57,753 million has been paid in slaughter fees to abattoirs participating in the over-30-months slaughter scheme.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what have been the total consultancy costs to date associated with the BSE eradication programme; and what are the projected costs. [9896]

Mr. Baldry: Consultancy costs associated with the current BSE eradication programme and incurred by MAFF have amounted to £3,386,693 to date in the current financial year. This includes work in respect of the rendering industry, slaughterhouses, cutting plants and unsaleable stocks. IBEA has incurred costs of £150,000 in respect of the over 30-month scheme.

At the present time, the projected future costs of MAFF and IBEA amount to £1,925,000. The above costs do not include the costs of implementing the cattle traceability system.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many grain stores have been converted for storage of animal by-products associated with the current BSE eradication programme; and what has been the cost to date. [9898]

Mr. Baldry: Three government-owned warehouses have been converted to cold stores at a cost of £3 million. When no longer required in connection with BSE-related schemes the stores will provide cost-effective storage for intervention beef and butter.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost to date of the storage of non-frozen beef as meat or bonemeal and tallow; and what quantities are currently in storage awaiting disposal under the BSE eradication programme. [9899]

Mr. Baldry: As at 5 January, storage payments amounting to £4,316 million had been made. As at 30 November 1996, the quantities of meat or bonemeal and tallow in store were 114,530 tonnes and 80,128 tonnes respectively.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total cost to date of long-term rental agreements for cold stores under the BSE eradication scheme; and how many cold stores are currently available to his Department. [9900]

Mr. Baldry: The total cost to date of long-term rental agreements for cold storage is £28.2 million. There are currently 41 cold stores available in the Department.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost to date of (a) thawing, (b) disposal of crates, (c) cleaning and sterilising of cold stores and (d) other on-costs not covered by storage charges in respect of carcase disposal under the BSE eradication scheme. [9901]

Mr. Baldry: There has been no expenditure to date on the items listed at (a), (b) and (c). Expenditure in respect of other on-costs not covered by storage charges was £75,700 as at 5 January.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total cost to date of the refrigerated transportation to cold stores of animals culled as part of the current BSE eradication programme. [9902]

Mr. Baldry: As at 5 January, £1.991 million had been paid for refrigerated transportation of cull carcases to cold stores.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost to public funds of carcase transportation to renderers under the BSE eradication scheme; and how many carcases are currently awaiting transportation. [9903]

Mr. Baldry: The cost of transport from the abattoir to the rendering plant is included in the fee paid to the rendering plant and is not separately identifiable. Carcases are transported either to cold stores or direct for rendering on the day that the animals are slaughtered so none are awaiting transportation from abattoirs.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the disposal of the (a) blood, (b) run-off from thawed-out carcases and (c) water used for cleaning and sterilising stores and vehicles, associated with the current BSE eradication programme. [9894]

Mr. Baldry: Under the over 30-month scheme blood must be destroyed or be controlled in such a way that it does not enter the human or animal food chains and cannot be used in cosmetic for pharmaceutical products. The Intervention Board has introduced arrangements for the collection and disposal of blood from OTMS cattle slaughtered in Great Britain and is making similar arrangements for Northern Ireland.

Limited trials have taken place on the rendering of frozen OTMS carcases. Most involved the crushing of material prior to immediate processing. The results of these trials are being evaluated.

There are various controlled disposal routes for water used for cleaning and sterilising stores and vehicles including sewerage treatment works, soil injection and mains drainage following on-site treatment.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what safety measures are currently available to those engaged in the handling and disposal of carcases associated with the BSE eradication process; and what safety monitoring is in place. [9897]

Mrs. Browning: General guidance for all occupational groups who may be exposed to the agent of BSE was published in August 1996 by the Health and Safety Commission, the Department of Health and the Ministry following a review of existing guidance material on BSE. This new guidance includes those involved in the handling and disposal of carcases under the Government's BSE eradication programme. the guidance, prepared by the independent Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens, recommended the maintenance of high standards of hygiene when working with cattle and advised on new methods of working to avoid or minimise exposure to tissues of cattle that may carry the BSE agent. These precautions are considered prudent although there is no evidence of any risk to those in occupations in which exposure to the BSE agent may occur. To date approximately 2,500 copies of the guidance have been distributed and copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

The Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974, and regulations made under it apply to abattoirs and rendering plants that are engaged in the handling and disposal of carcases. Health and Safety Executive inspectors visit such premises during normal preventative inspections; protection from exposure to BSE agent is considered along with other matters.

Quarantine Regulations

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has completed his review of the current quarantine regulations; and if he will make a statement. [9893]

Mrs. Browning: Our work is not yet complete.

Arable Area Payments

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of arable area aid payments in 1996 were made within the 31 December deadline. [11580]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am pleased to say that arable area payments were sent out to 99 per cent. of claimants in England by 31 December, covering around 98 per cent. of payments by value. This successful result bears testimony both to the prompt and accurate return of claims by farmers and to the efforts made by the Ministry's staff to process payments as required by EU rules.

WALES

Class Sizes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will collate and publish the figures provided in the Office of Her Majesty's chief inspector's school inspection reports of maintained primary schools on class size in each year. [9589]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Office of Her Majesty's chief inspector does not collect information on class size in each year group. Statistics on the average size of registered classes within maintained primary schools are published in "Statistics of Education and Training in Wales: Schools No. 4 1996".

Staff

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full time and (2) part time basis. [9485]

Mr. Hague: The information requested as at December 1996 is as follows:

	Full-time	Part-time	Total staff
Male	1,146	17	1,163
Female	970	273	1,243
Total	2,116	290	2,406

Figures shown include staff in the Executive Agency, Cadw.

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date the sections of the appropriation account for Wales concerning central Government expenditure on the NHS in Wales were published. [10280]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 16 December 1996, Official Report, column 446–47.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the principal areas to which the additional £30 million for the national health service provided for in the winter supplementary estimates will be applied. [9956]

Mr. Hague: Of the £30 million end-year flexibility entitlement take-up in the winter supplementary estimate, £18 million related to capital expenditure—£6 million for NHS trusts and £12 million for slippage on centrally funded schemes—mainly Wrexham Maelor phase 2, Ynys-y-Plwm, Princess of Wales phase 2 and Torfaen community hospital. The remaining £12 million was taken up for a number of revenue expenditure items including 2.5 million for GP fundholder carry-forward, £3 million for the dental initiative, £1 million for the clinical effectiveness initiative and £3 million for health authority liquidity.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) sanctions and (b) incentives he has to encourage ambulance trusts to meet the targets of 60 per cent. of ambulance staff trained as paramedics and one paramedic on each emergency call-out ambulance within his timetable; and if he will make a statement. [10268]

Mr. Hague: No sanctions have been introduced. Training funds are provided centrally to encourage the ambulance trusts to meet the set targets.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the Government response to the Third Report of the Welsh Affairs Committee, HC 91, Session 1996–97, what is his current estimate of the proportion of ambulance staff trained as paramedics in each ambulance trust; and what assessment he has made of the probability of their meeting the 60 per cent. target within his timetable. [10270]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 16 December 1996, Official Report, column 446.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the Government response to the Third Report of the Welsh Affairs Committee on the Training of Ambulance Paramedics, HC 91, Session 1996–97, if he will make a statement on (a) the proposed new patients charter standard in relation to life-threatening call-outs, (b) the pilot study on prioritisation of emergency calls and (c) the research project into the costs and benefits of calls prioritisation, with particular reference to sparsely populated areas. [10269]

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 448, if he will place in the Library a copy of the consultation letter and the responses on the future of the treatment centres. [10285]

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the funding arrangements and the numbers of cases to be dealt with in 1997–98 in each treatment centre indicating funding and numbers of cases in each health authority area; and what are the equivalent figures for 1995–96 and 1996–97. [10286]

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh acute hospitals have opened admission units; and what analysis he has made of the impact of admission units on (a) rapid admission and (b) treatment (i) generally and (ii) patients brought in on emergency ambulances. [10259]

Mr. Hague: I understand that the majority of Welsh hospitals have opened admission-assessment units; their individual operation is a matter for the respective trusts.

Clwydian Community Trust

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the headings and amounts of his subventions to the Clwydian Community Trust indicating the amounts for the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [9963]

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the annual operating costs of the Cardiff Bay barrage; and what proposals he has discussed with the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation and the two riparian local authorities concerning the sharing of those costs after the winding up of the corporation. [9957]

Mr. Hague: None. The corporation has not yet provided a detailed estimate of the operating costs of the barrage beyond December 1999; but will do so later this year, following completion of the wind-up consultation exercise and consideration of a management company option.

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated cost to public funds of (a) completing the construction of the Cardiff Bay barrage and (b) dismantling and removing the superstructure and foundations already in place and returning the site to the condition which obtained before construction commenced; and if he will make a statement. [10723]

Mr. Hague: The barrage contracts are operational matters for the corporation; I will ask the chief executive to write to the hon. Member and will arrange for a copy of his response to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what targets the Welsh Office has set for attracting inward investment and jobs to Cardiff by 2000; and what assessment he has made of the effect a failure to complete the construction of the Cardiff bay barrage would have on the ability of the region to meet those targets. [10722]

Mr. Hague: I have not set any specific inward investment or job creation targets for Cardiff or for Cardiff bay. I have noted that the targets set by the development corporation in its corporate plan are to provide by the year 2000 around £1 billion private sector investment and 15,000 new jobs. The barrage is a key component in the corporation's regeneration strategy and is expected to be completed in 1998.

(2) if he will publish for each of the county and county borough councils and for Wales as a whole in constant prices (a) total standard spending assessments, including provision for community care and police authorities, set after consultation with local authorities in January 1996 for 1996–97, (b) the equivalent provisional standard spending assessments following his statement to the House on 12 December 1996 for 1997–98 and (c) the percentage change between (a) and (b) in each case. [10719]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Specific costs such as teachers' pay are not identified separately within local authorities' standard spending assessments. The 1997 teachers' pay award will be announced by the School Teachers' Review Body in the near future. It has been directed to have regard to affordability in the light of the 1997–98 local government revenue settlements for England and Wales.

Provision in respect of care in the community is included within local authorities' standard spending assessments. Individual allocations for 1996–97 and 1997–98 at constant prices are shown in table 1. The remaining information requested for councils standard spending assessment at constant prices is given in tables 2 and 3.

Provision for police authorities is assessed separately and comprises SSA and police grant. These figures at constant prices are shown in table 4. The figures provided in the tables have not been adjusted to take account of changes in local authority functions between 1996–97 and 1997–98.

NATO, Western European Union and Partnership for Peace

31. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are Her Majesty's Government's strategic proposals relating to the expansion of NATO, the Western European Union and Partnership for Peace. [9263]

Mr. David Davis: A NATO summit will be held on 8 and 9 July in Madrid. It will take a number of landmark decisions, including:

- inviting one or more countries to begin accession negotiations;
- finalising the arrangements for the establishment of a European security and defence identity in NATO;
- strengthening partnership for peace and, we expect, launching the Atlantic Partnership Council as a new body for co-operation between NATO and other countries.

The Government's proposals for development of the Western European Union were made public in spring 1995.

Iraq

32. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken in the United Nations to address the situation of Iraqi citizens held hostage by the Government of President Saddam Hussein. [9264]

Mr. Hanley: We remain concerned about Iraqis detained in Iraq without trial. The UN Special Rapporteur, to whom Iraq denies access, has recorded the appalling human rights abuses of the Iraqi regime, including the absence of law. At the United Nations we regularly condemn Iraq's human rights record and will continue to do so.

Cyprus (European Union Accession)

33. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he plans to take to encourage Cyprus' accession to the EU. [9265]

Mr. David Davis: A comprehensive political settlement of the Cyprus problem in 1997 will help to ensure the success of negotiations on accession to the EU. We are working hard with our European partners, the United States and others in supporting UN-led efforts to that end.

Embassies and Consulates

34. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new steps he is taking to improve the services and advice offered by United Kingdom embassies and consulates to United Kingdom businesses wishing to export. [9266]

Mr. Hanley: This Department and the Department of Trade and Industry will jointly launch measures later this month to simplify access to, and raise awareness of, our services to exporters. We have already established a unit to monitor and help improve the quality standards of the chargeable services carried out for exporters by overseas posts. We have also launched an initiative to enhance the professionalism of officials engaged in trade promotion through a programme of secondments and externally accredited qualifications.

United Nations

35. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with other member states regarding the future of the United Nations. [9267]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We are in regular contact with other UN member states and in particular with our partners on the Security Council. We are working closely with the EU and other member states to revitalise the United Nations system and to ensure that we move towards a more modern and effective UN.

Indonesia and East Timor

36. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Portuguese Government regarding the future of East Timor. [9268]

Mr. Hanley: We regularly discuss East Timor with the Portuguese Government. It was discussed by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs during his meeting with the Portuguese Foreign Minister, Mr. Gama, in July last year. Her Majesty's Government continue to believe that dialogue between Portugal and Indonesia under the auspices of the UN Secretary General offers the best hope of finding a just, comprehensive and internationally acceptable settlement.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria his Department uses to determine whether defence equipment is likely to be used for internal repression in Indonesia and East Timor before granting export licences. [10717]

Mr. Hanley: In judging whether defence equipment is likely to be used for internal repression, we draw on all the information available to us, including as appropriate the nature of the equipment, the technical capability and legitimate requirements of the end user and the current situation in the recipient country. Ministers evaluate this information with the advice, where necessary, of technical experts in appropriate Government agencies and of our missions overseas.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the correspondence referred to in paragraph 40 of the National Audit Office report, "Aid to Indonesia", relating to aid proposals and defence sales. [10724]

Mr. Hanley: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly.

Centre for Racism and Xenophobia

37. Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the establishment of the proposed centre for racism and xenophobia with Her Majesty's Government's policy on subsidiarity. [9269]

Mr. David Davis: We believe that the problems raised by racism are best dealt with by national Governments, but there is a role for Europe to play in the exchange and dissemination of information in this area.

Zaire

38. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the current situation in Zaire. [9270]

Dr. Liam Fox: We remain concerned by the uncertain situation in Zaire. Rebellion in eastern Zaire continues, with much of Kivu province under rebel control. We welcome President Mobutu's stated commitment to continuing the democratic process and will continue to support efforts to bring about a negotiated settlement to the conflict in Zaire.

Anglo-Spanish Relations

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the current state of Anglo-Spanish relations. [9239]

Mr. David Davis: When my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister met the Spanish Prime Minister, Mr. Aznar, in London on 27 November, they agreed that the overall relationship with Spain was extremely good. Spain is also an important partner in the European Union, the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and the United Nations.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimates he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10162]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The information is in the table.

Expenditure on external consultants

The Westminster Foundation for Democracy spent approximately £50,000 on external consultants between 1993 and 1996. No year by year breakdown was available.

None of ODA's non-departmental public bodies has employed external consultants in the last five years.

Figures for the British Council could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Gulf Co-operation Council

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent Gulf Co-operation Council meeting in Qatar. [10300]

Mr. Hanley: We closely followed reporting of the discussions and decisions of the 17th Gulf Co-operation Council heads of state summit, which was held in Doha from 7 to 9 December 1996.

Ministers welcome the GCC's call upon Iraq to fulfil all its international obligations, particularly those relating to weapons of mass destruction and the release of detainees.

We share the GCC's concerns about continuing disputes in the region; the UK remains firmly committed to the peaceful resolution of them all.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will make a statement on the recent election of the Hong Kong chief executive designate. [10301]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary and I have all sent messages of congratulation to Mr. Tung, for whom we have great respect. British Ministers have every confidence that he will be a worthy first chief executive of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region. He will of course be most welcome to visit Britain at a time of his choosing. Ministers and the Governor are full committed to offering every assistance to the chief executive designate and his team to help in their preparations for a successful handover, in line with the Joint Declaration.

Immigration Appeals

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects Her Majesty's high commission, Lagos, to supply the Immigration Appeal Tribunal with the statement of appeal for the case of Mr. C. A. Ekeh, Ref. GV100/29129, referred to in the high commission's letter dated 15 January 1996, Ref. LAG/12567/95. [10470]

Dr. Liam Fox: It is policy on grounds of confidentiality for Ministers not to comment publicly on individual applications for entry clearance. I will therefore write separately to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his Department's letter Ref. GV100 /32380 of 11 September 1996 when he proposes to take action on the case of Mrs. Gertrude Mannai, Ref. 301220, relating to her husband and the entry clearance officer at Tunis. [10325]

Dr. Fox: Our policy is not to reveal details of individual entry clearance applications. I will therefore write to the hon. Member shortly.

Libya

Sir Cyril Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he proposes to take to assist the issuing of visas in Libya. [10521]

Dr. Liam Fox: We have decided in principle to expand the visa service at the British interests section in Tripoli, to include additionally a limited number of applications from business visitors. However, certain practical difficulties, such as remodelling the office accommodation, will have to be resolved before this can take place.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to seek to improve relations with Libya. [9232]

Mr. Hanley: Any improvement in relations with Libya is dependent on that country complying with UN sanctions.

Bahamas and Antigua (Chemical Weapons Tests)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received from the Governments of the Bahamas and Antigua about the implications of the chemical tests carried out in the Caribbean 50 years ago; and if he will make a statement. [10822]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: No formal representations have between received from either the Government of the Bahamas or the Government of Antigua and Barbuda. However, Foreign Commonwealth Office officials received two letters from the Antiguan High Commissioner to London on the subject of biological weapons testing in the Caribbean in 1948–49. The FCO replied having sought advice from the Ministry of Defence.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Pre-School Play Association

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the Scottish Pre-School Play Association concerning core grant funding; and when he expects to be able to respond. [10666]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The association has applied under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 for an increase in core funding from 1997–98. Its application is being carefully considered. We will shortly be advising it of the outcome at the same time as other grant applicants.

Dounreay

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make an environmental assessment of the beach adjoining the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority plant at Dounreay to take account of reports his Department has received of the presence of plutonium particles. [10800]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The Scottish Environment Protection Agency, as regulator, is responsible to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. It monitors the Dounreay site closely, including the environmental impact of discharges from the site and the strict independent assessment of routine beach surveys undertaken by UKAEA.

Water and Sewerage Charges

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost in 1996–97 to each water authority in Scotland of continuing the relief from water and sewerage charges given by former local authorities to (a) the premises of charitable organisations under the Water (Scotland) Act 1967 and (b) the premises of nursing and care homes under the Rating (Disabled Persons) Act 1978. [10451]

Mr. Kynoch: Water authorities cannot provide at reasonable cost accurate estimates of relief given to charitable organisations in 1996–97. Water authority estimates of the relief given for the premises of nursing and care homes are as follows:

North of Scotland Water authority £1.3 million

East of Scotland Water authority £1.6 million

West of Scotland Water authority £1.9 million

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which local water and sewerage authorities gave discretionary relief under the Water (Scotland) Act 1967 to charitable organisations in 1995–96. [10440]

Mr. Kynoch: All former regional and islands councils gave discretionary relief to charitable organisations in 1995–96. The Water (Scotland) Act 1980 gave the relevant statutory power.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the value in 1995–96 of the rebate in respect of relief for water and sewerage charges granted under the Rating (Disabled Persons) Act 1978 in the area now covered by (a) North of Scotland Water Authority, (b) East of Scotland Water and (c) West of Scotland Water; [10442]

(2) what was the value in 1995–96 of rebate to each regional and islands council in respect of relief for water and sewerage charges under the Rating (Disabled Persons) Act. 1978 [10441]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is shown in the table.

Cornton Vale Prison

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are being taken to prevent further suicides at Cornton Vale prison; what is being done to deal with the drug problems among the prisoners there; and if he will make a statement. [11854]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The care of prisoners and the prevention of suicide in prisoners are operational matters for the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service, and I have had full discussions with him about the recent cluster of suicides at Cornton Vale.

The chief executive shares my concern at the number of suicides at the prison and joins me in offering condolences to the families of those who have died. I have reviewed with the chief executive the steps being taken to address the problem of suicide at the prison, in the light in particular of the recent recommendations from Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons. The vast majority of those recommendations are already being implemented.

As indicated in my response to the chief inspector when his report was published last year, the governor had already put in place new arrangements for the induction of remand prisoners, for extra time out of cell, and for increased access to education, physical training and other regime opportunities. A number of outside agencies are also now working in the prison, including the Samaritans, Rape Crisis, Cruse and Women's Aid, and a listeners scheme has been put in place. All remand prisoners now share a cell, to encourage mutual support.

In addition to the extra staffing provided last year, more money is being provided to address the drug-related problems experienced by a very large proportion of the prisoner population. A further addictions worker post has been approved, together with additional psychiatric sessions; and the increased resources I have provided to the Scottish Prison Service for the forthcoming financial year will enable the governor to fund five additional posts to assist with drug reduction work and to expand the programme already in operation. The purpose of these changes is to ensure that all prisoners at Cornton Vale who have been identified as having a drug problem have the opportunity to address their addiction either on an individual basis or through organised group work as appropriate.

If work on drug reduction undertaken in the prison is to be effective, it is important that there is adequate throughcare on release, and my officials are discussing with local authorities and voluntary agencies what steps may be taken to ensure that this is available. In particular, discussions are in hand with the City of Glasgow council on the provision of further drug rehabilitation facilities for Glasgow and what was before local government reorganisation the wider Strathclyde area.

I have offered to provide through the 100 per cent. funding mechanism two additional posts to the council related to the delivery of addiction programmes. One post would be aimed at providing links between drug misusers, particularly those released from custody, and community-based programmes. The other post would be located in the stipendiary/sheriff court with a view to identifying and making arrangements for those for whom a non-custodial disposal might be appropriate. I also propose to extend bail information and supervision services to the stipendiary court in Glasgow.

I have also offered £50,000 to convert properties operated by the Church of Scotland and Sacro for use as bail accommodation, and my officials are discussing with the City of Glasgow council financial support for the addition to existing provision of a further 15 bail bed spaces.

An independent researcher is currently undertaking a six-month study to obtain detailed information on the extent and type of drug and alcohol misuse among women prisoners at Cornton Vale, both before and after conviction, and this will provide information in targeting resources for the future.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Deaf-blind People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many deaf-blind people are supported in employment through the placement advisory council team scheme. [9474]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Alfred Morris, daied 16 January 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about "the number of deaf-blind people who are supported in employment through the Placement Advisory Council Team Scheme". This is something which falls within the responsibilities delated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The Employment Service, through is local Placing, Assessment and Counselling Teams (PACTs) provides a wide range of specialist services for people with health problems and disabilities through its network of Disability Employment Advisers (DEAs), who are mostly based in Jobcentres.

The Employment Service does not however hold figures for placements of people into work broken down into types of disability, and thus figures are not available specifically relating to deaf/blind people.

The Employment Services does, however, record the total numbers of people with disabilities placed into jobs by its PACTs. The PACT placings for the period April 1995 to March 1996 total 17,474. The latest figures available are for April to October 1996 during which period 11,961 disabled people were placed into employment by PACTs.

I hope this has been helpful.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the final date on which teachers can apply for early retirement under the existing regulations. [11036]

Mrs. Gillan: Teachers do not apply for premature retirement under the regulations. Premature retirement is at employer's discretion. Arrangements whereby teachers express a wish to be granted premature retirement by their employers are for local determination. Under my right hon. Friend's proposals, employers would pay part of the pension to teachers under 60 to whom they granted premature retirement, for all those teachers whose date of retirement is 1 April 1997 or later.

Education Funding (Lancashire)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the funding, per pupil, of school children in Lancashire, allocated by Government, for 1994–95, 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98 for (a) under five-year-olds, (b) five to 11-year-olds and (c) 11 to 16-year-olds. [11227]

Mr. Robin Squire: The table sets out the education standard spending assessment per pupil in Lancashire for 1994–95, 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98 for (a) under five-years-olds (b) five to 10-year-olds and (c) 11 to 16-year-olds.

Education SSAs do not determine the level of school spending. It is up to local authorities to decide how much they spend on schools and other services within the resources at their disposal.

Lancashire Education SSA Per Pupil

	Under five years £	Five to 10 years £	11 to 16 years £
1994–95	267	1,867	2,611
1995–96	277	1,877	2,502

1997–98[1]	[2]140	2,046	2,689

[1]1997–98 figures are provisional.
[2]This figure is lower than in previous years because of the SSA deduction for the nursery voucher scheme.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what provision the House currently makes for the child care needs of hon. Members. [11352]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The Members' Families Room, off the Lower Waiting Hall, is available for use by hon. Members and their spouses on sitting days from 10 am until the Rising of the House, and on non-sitting days from 10 am until 6 pm. A colour television set is available. If space permits, it may also be used by the children, parents, brothers and sisters of hon. Members, but not by other guests.

The Library maintains a small collection of books in the room for the use of hon. Members' children, and welcomes any suggestions about this collection from hon. Members.

There is also a small changing room, with washing facilities, off the Families Room. A nappy changing table is available in the disabled persons' lavatory off the Lower Waiting Hall.

Children of any age, accompanied by an adult, are admitted to the Galleries, provided they do not interrupt the business of the House.

Serjeant at Arms Department (Survey)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee when the survey of the Serjeant at Arms Department is expected to be completed; and when it will be made available to hon. Members. [11328]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The Administration Committee was not directly involved in the Serjeant at Arms survey, which was completed in March 1996. I understand that all those who completed the questionnaire were sent a management summary of the results, and I have asked the Serjeant at Arms to send a copy to my hon. Friend.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Custody Services

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the progress of the sale of custody services. [11693]

Mr. Freeman: I have decided that Apax Partners and Co., the proposed acquire of the support services division of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, should be granted exclusive access to further information about custody services, with a view to its supporting a final bid for the business. Three other indicative offers were submitted, but I considered these to be unacceptable as they did not meet the objectives for sale. The bid for custody services will be compared with the option of retaining the business in the public sector.

DEFENCE

Terrorism

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned into the terrorist threat posed by non-state sub-groups threatening to use crude nuclear weapons. [10886]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department keeps the possibility of such a threat under constant review. It would not be appropriate, for reasons of national security and defence, to provide more specific details of any studies in this area and the information is therefore withheld under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to Government information.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations were made to his Department at the seminar held in London on 27 November 1996 on the terrorist threat posed by crude nuclear weapons; and what plans he has to take any action following the information disclosed at the seminar. [10887]

Mr. Soames: A member of my Department attended this seminar. Conversations on a range of topics took place but no specific representations were made to the Ministry of Defence. Contingency plans exist for responding to terrorist threats which involve the threatened or actual use of nuclear material. In the interests of national security, and for the protection of the public, these plans are regularly reviewed, tested and updated in the light of changing circumstances.

Gulf War

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current location of the tents used in Operation Granby in the Gulf war; how many were returned form the Gulf after hostilities ended; and how many were (a) burned and (b) buried in the Gulf area. [10897]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the anti-malarial agents administered to troops and medical support personnel during Operation Granby in the Gulf war. [10895]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if all vaccinations and injections administered to service personnel during the Gulf war were recorded on their medical records; and if he will make a statement. [11222]

Mr. Soames: Details of the vaccinations administered to personnel during the Gulf conflict should have been entered on to individual medical records—form FMed4—by transcription from nominal rolls compiled in theatre. Details should also have been recorded on personal medical records—form BMed27—if available. Unfortunately, in many cases transcription of the relevant details has not taken place. Some nominal rolls have also been lost or destroyed since the conflict. A search has now been initiated for any surviving nominal rolls, and medical records of Gulf veterans which are currently incomplete will be updated to a more acceptable standard wherever possible.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Gulf war veterans are being charged a fee to obtain a copy of their service medical records; and if he will make a statement. [11225]

Mr. Soames: No charge is made to general practitioners who request copies of service medical records to assist their treatment of ex-service personnel. Under the Access to Health Records Act 1990, a charge to cover the cost of retrieval, plus a photocopying charge per sheet may be made to individuals who themselves request their medical notes. The Ministry of Defence normally levies a charge of £10 plus 10p per sheet, as does the national health service.

Harrier Pilots (Redundancies)

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Harrier pilots have applied for premature volunteer redundancy in each of the past 12 months; how many of these were turned down in each month and for what reason; and if he will make a statement. [11224]

Mr. Soames: In February 1996, one RAF Harrier pilot applied for premature voluntary release, and his application was accepted. Applications under the RAF's redundancy scheme were required to be submitted by November 1995.

Ex-service Personnel (Falklands War)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ex-service people who served in the Falklands conflict have (a) committed suicide and (b) been found guilty of criminal acts since 1982. [11038]

Mr. Soames: Statistics held by the Defence Analytical Services Agency indicate a total of 329 confirmed suicides by serving personnel, from January 1982 to the present time. The information requested in respect of ex-service personnel who served in the Falklands is not, however, available, as my Department does not keep records pertaining to ex-Service personnel, nor specifically to those who served in the Falklands conflict.

Statistics on disciplinary convictions, are contained in "Tri-Service Personnel Statistics 16", copies of which are held in the Library of the House. The latest available are those for 1994. Such statistics have only been kept since 1986. Until 1991 they were contained in "Tri-Service Manpower Statistics 32".

Correspondence

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Ashford sent to his Department on 4 October, 15 November and 30 December 1996, about the withdrawal of NATO medals when a WEU medal is awarded. [11040]

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence has replied to my hon. Friend.

Ty Gwyn Centre

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future of the Ty Gwyn centre in respect of his Department's support for ex-service people. [11221]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member.

Anti-ballistic Missiles

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the use of lasers to develop a British anti-ballistic missile capability. [11223]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In our work to evaluate the options for active ballistic missile defence systems, we have studied a number of land, air and sea-based systems which, individually or combined, might provide a BMD capability. These included systems, at various stages of research and development, which employ laser technology.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Authority Structure Plans

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he plans to give to local planning authorities concerning their structure plans currently being considered to 2011 in the light of his intention stated in paragraphs 8.2 and 8.7 of "Household Growth: Where shall We Live?", Cm 3471, to revise planning policy guidance and to start to consider options immediately. [10845]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Local planning authorities should continue to prepare or update structure plans with reference to the current planning policy framework. Any policy changes that the Government consider necessary as a result of the current consultation on the Green Paper will need to be taken into account by local authorities when they are issued.

Contaminated Land

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish statutory guidance on contaminated land. [11173]

Mr. Clappison: A total of 299 responses have been received to the consultation on draft statutory guidance on contaminated land, to be issued under part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, inserted by section 57 of the Environment Act 1995. We are examining these responses, as well as the second report on the Environment Committee of this House, to see what changes are needed to the draft statutory guidance and my right hon. Friend will consider when to lay the final draft guidance once we have completed this.

Broadmoor Farm Business Park

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to notify Caradon district council of his response to the two planning applications, 94/1331/0 and 95/282/0, about the proposed Broadmoor farm business park which were sent to the Government office of the south-west on 2 December 1996; and if he will make a statement. [11095]

Sir Paul Beresford: As soon as the Secretary of State has completed his consideration of the issues raised; I regret that I cannot comment further on these applications.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are for the present Governor of Hong Kong to be involved in handover ceremonies on the return of Hong Kong to China; and if he will make a statement. [10888]

Mr. Hanley: Mr. Patten will be in Hong Kong as Governor of Hong Kong until midnight on 30 June. We will naturally be a full member of the British team at the handover ceremonies.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to reply to the letter of 3 December from the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding the mother of a constituent. [10998]

Dr. Liam Fox: I shall be replying to the hon. Member's letter by 20 January.

Japan (War Reparations)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the amount of reparations made by the Japanese Government to British prisoners of war since 1966. [11176]

Mr. Hanley: None. The question of reparations to the British Government was settled by the 1951 San Francisco peace treaty.

TRANSPORT

Roads Programme (Property Purchases)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what income was obtained in each year since 1988 from the disposal of (a) houses, (b) other properties and (c) land which had been acquired for roads schemes but was no longer required. [10850]

Mr. Watts: The information is not available in the form requested. Total income from the sale of land in each of the years 1988–89 to 1995–96 was:

1988–89: £9.6m
1989–90: £17.5m
1990–91: £8.5m
1991–92: £15.3m
1992–93: £11.2m
1993–94: £21.4m
1994–95: £29.3m
1995–96: £43.1m

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what expenditure was incurred in each year since 1988 in acquiring (a) houses, (b) other properties and (c) land for road schemes. [10849]

Mr. Watts: The information is not available in the form requested. Total land and compensation expenditure in each of the years 1988–89 to 1995–96 was:

1988–89: £66.3m
1989–90: £95.2m
1990–91: £157.3m
1991–92: £179.9m
1992–93: £259.7m
1993–94: £273m
1995–96: £185.7m

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much of the property purchased for the purposes of the roads programme is no longer required following the removal of schemes from the programme; and if he will list (a) the number of houses, (b) the number of other properties and (c) the extent of the land holdings involved. [10847]

Mr. Watts: The information is not available in the form requested. The number of properties and separately identified land holdings on schemes withdrawn from the roads programme in November 1996 is 1,055.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total purchase price of property purchased for the purposes of the roads programme and now surplus to requirements; and what estimate he has made of the present value of this property. [10848]

Mr. Watts: We are still to complete the identification of all the surplus following the November 1996 budget. To date, on all schemes, we have declared surplus property and land which we purchased for £138.2 million. The purchase price excludes compensation payable for disturbance, home loss removal expenses and fees, and so on. The resale value of these properties will depend on the state of the property market at the time of sale.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each road scheme in the main and longer-term pre-1995 roads programme, the quantity and value of property (a) held, (b) acquired, (c) disposed of and (d) held but now surplus to requirements, incorporating the effects of the revisions to the programme in November 1995 and November 1996. [10851]

Mr. Watts: I have placed in the Library four lists showing every scheme for which the Highways Agency holds property, including withdrawn schemes, schemes under construction and completed schemes. The lists cover: (a) all property held, (b) all property acquired, (c) all property recorded as disposed of, (d) all property held but now surplus. Acquisitions and disposals do not record properties acquired under discretionary powers but immediately sold.

Deaf-blind People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what training providers of public transport services and their employees receive in communicating and making contact with deaf-blind people. [9470]

Mr. Bowis: We do not have details of the training programmes provided by individual transport operators. Many run disability awareness training covering many issues, including the particular needs of deaf-blind people.

The Department has worked with Bus and Coach Training Ltd., the training arm of the Confederation of Passenger Transport, on a disability awareness training programme for bus drivers. It is intended that this will form part of the national vocational qualification training programme for the bus industry. The programme covers a wide range of disability issues, including those relevant to deaf-blind people.

Airbags

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many injuries have been caused by airbags in cars inflating too slowly on collision. [11015]

Mr. Bowis: The Department has not heard of any injuries caused by airbags inflating too slowly.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safety checks are required by his Department on airbags in cars. [11014]

Mr. Bowis: Airbags are not compulsory and there are no performance standards governing their performance. The vehicle manufacturer is considered to be best placed to specify the airbag characteristics to complement the vehicle's other crash protection systems.

Marine Safety Agency (Fees)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if Marine Safety Agency fees are to be increased. [11799]

Mr. Bowis: Some of the Marine Safety Agency's fees will change on 1 February 1997. The most significant change is an increase in the hourly rate for merchant ship and fishing vessel surveys from £45 to £60. This increase is required to comply with our aim of full cost recovery for services provided by the Government. We believe that the new fee is still competitive when compared with private sector rates for similar work, and this is the first significant increase for some years.

Air Traffic Control Services

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he accepts the Civil Aviation Authority's recommendations on the future provision of air traffic control services, following the review of its two-centre strategy; and if he will make a statement. [11897]

Sir George Young: The Civil Aviation Authority reported to me shortly before Christmas that its review had validated the strategy of providing air traffic control services through two centres based respectively at Fareham in Hampshire and Prestwick in Scotland. The Government are minded to accept this recommendation, but would wish the airlines and other interested parties to be consulted before a final decision is taken. I am now asking the chairman of the CAA to initiate this consultation and hope that it will be possible to announce the outcome in March.

National Bus Company

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a dated copy of his response to the pensions ombudsman's provisional determination in respect of the former National Bus Company. [10880]

Mr. Watts: My Department made no comments to the pensions ombudsman on his provisional determination. The pensions ombudsman has not carried out any investigation or made any determination with respect to the Department or the former National Bus Company.

Heathrow–Plymouth Flights

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Airways regarding the slots into Heathrow from Plymouth. [8781]

Sir George Young [pursuant to his oral answer of 13 January, Official Report, c. 6]: I have now received a reply to my letter to the chief executive of British Airways in which he informs me that, as from 30 March, Brymon Airways will switch its London to Plymouth and Newquay service from Heathrow to Gatwick. At the same time, flights will be increased to five daily on weekdays and four daily at weekends, in both directions. I have placed a copy of the letter in the Library.

Visits to Pensioners

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister what visits he made to pensioners on low incomes during the recent cold weather. [11093]

The Prime Minister: I meet pensioners throughout the year. Our commitment to help during periods of cold weather is underlined by the fact that over 5 million cold weather payments worth more than £43 million have been made this winter.

In addition to cold weather payments, the total extra help above normal upratings made available to pensioners on income-related benefits since 1988 is worth around £1.2 billion a year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Prohibited Weapons (Exports)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many weapons prohibited under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill have been exported since the publication of the Bill. [11217]

Mr. Nelson: The information requested is not available from the United Kingdom overseas trade statistics because the system of classification under which trade is recorded does not separately identify the relevant categories of weapons. Export licencing procedures cannot provide the information since the Department does not hold details of deliveries against licences.

Gallaher Ltd.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what Government assistance will be made available to alleviate the effects of the loss of jobs resulting from the relocation of the Gallaher Ltd. factory from Hyde, Tameside. [11161]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government office for the north-west will first assess with local partners the type and level of needs to be met arising from Gallaher's recent announcement, and will then consider the appropriate resources to meet those needs.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when (a) he and (b) officials from his Department last met representatives of Gallaher Ltd., what was discussed; and if he will make a statement. [11163]

Mr. Taylor: I have not met with representatives of Gallaher Ltd. nor have officials from my Department.

Postal Services Directive

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress was made on the draft directive on postal services at the European Council of Ministers meeting on 18 December; and if he will make a statement. [10996]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given yesterday to my hon. Friend the Member for Somerton and Frome (Mr. Robinson), Official Report, column 238.

Co-operatives

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make an assessment of the (a) number, (b) distribution and (c) benefits of (i) food co-operatives, (ii) co-operatively owned wind farms and (iii) community land trusts in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [10535]

Mr. Page: To my knowledge there is one wind co-operative in the UK, Baywind Energy Co-operative, which has recently raised £620,000 to buy one of the five wind turbines of the Harlock Hill wind farm near Ulverston, in Cumbria. The aim of the co-operative is gradually to buy further wind turbines as money becomes available. About 650 people subscribed to its first share offer, spending an average of over £1,000. The majority of the subscribers come from the surrounding district.

Developing co-operatively owned wind farms encourages a community to accept responsibility for providing its energy requirements in an environmentally acceptable way.

It is for the market to decide which forms of ownership are the most successful.

My right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has responsibility for food co-operatives but it is not clear what the hon. Member means by community land trusts.

Fireworks

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if a school is permitted as a component part of a local authority to purchase serial shells, aerial maroons, shell-in-mortar, maroon-in-mortar and combinations for the purposes of a firework display. [11043]

Mr. John M. Taylor: In the view of my Department, the reference to local authorities in the regulations refers to the elected members of a council and officers of the council acting in their official capacity. It does not extend to establishments such as schools under the control of local authorities.

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the competence of armed forces establishments to safely operate aerial shells, aerial maroons, shells-in-mortar, maroons-in-mortar and combinations; and if such establishments will be authorised under the Firework Safety Regulations 1996 to acquire such fireworks. [11042]

Mr. Taylor: No assessment of the ability of the armed forces establishments to operate such fireworks safely has been undertaken. However, in the view of my Department such establishments would come within the exemption in regulation 4 (a) because of the exceptionally high level of skill and expertise in handling similar devices possessed by those who will be responsible for operating displays at such establishments, and have the formal management structures which enable displays to be operated safely and professionally.

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what mechanisms he intends to introduce to ensure that regulation 4 (b) of the Firework Safety Regulations 1996 applies only to those who have the skills and experience to assess compliance safely to operate aerial shells, aerial maroons, shells-in-mortar, maroons-in-mortar and combinations. [11044]

Mr. Taylor: The exemption for any person whose trade or business, or part of whose trade or business, is the supply of fireworks has been included in the regulations to allow those in the distribution chain—such as manufacturers and importers—to supply other persons in the supply chain who may not themselves be in the business of operating firework displays. All those in the business of supplying fireworks are subject to separate legislation covering the safety and storage of fireworks. No other mechanisms are therefore necessary.

Channel 5

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many homes will be able to receive Channel 5 through the extra frequency Channel 35; what assessment he has made of the length of time for which the service will be available under the present arrangement; and if he will make a statement. [10431]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Channel 5 Broadcasting estimates that access to channel 35 could mean that an extra 1.8 million homes an estimated 4 million people will be able to receive the service.

Channel 5 Broadcasting will have access to the frequency for a period of five years. Towards the end of this period, the Government will review the position on the development of more spectrum efficient digital services and will make a judgment whether, and if so for what period of time, Channel 5 may continue to use the channel.

Channel 5 is responsible for notifying viewers affected that these arrangements exist, and for investigating means of migrating services to other methods of delivery.

Dounreay

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the reliability of the data set incorporated into the computerised records of the radioactive and toxic wastes contained in (a) the shaft and (b) the intermediate level waste silo at the Nuclear Power Development Establishment at Dounreay; and what recent meetings he has held with (i) the director of Dounreay and (ii) the chairman of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority over waste management at the plant. [10799]

Mr. Page [holding answer 13 January 1997]: As this is a management matter for the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority I have made no assessment of these records.

I have held no meetings with the UKAEA to discuss waste management at the plant.

HEALTH

Organophosphate Poisoning

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many cases in each of the last 10 years organophosphate poisoning has been listed on death certificates as (a) the main cause of death and (b) a contributory cause of death. [10531]

Mr. Horam: Between 1986 and 1995 there was one death in England and Wales certified as due to accidental poisoning by organophosphates, in 1986. There were, however, the following deaths certified as due to non-accidental poisoning by organophosphates which were either due to suicide or where there was an open verdict, (undetermined):

Year	Suicide	Undetermined

It would involve disproportionate cost to obtain figures for the number of deaths where poisoning by organophosphates was mentioned on the death certificate but was not the underlying cause of death for the period 1986 to 1992. However, this information is available for the period 1993–95 and is nil for each of the three years.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paramedics were employed by the London ambulance service during each of the last five years; and how many are currently employed. [10763]

Mr. Horam: The number of paramedics currently employed by the London ambulance service is 775. The historical figures are:

Date	Paramedic numbers
December 1991	228
December 1992	303
December 1993	351
December 1994	474
December 1995	641

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the trend in response rates by the London ambulance service in the London borough of Barnet during the last three years. [10775]

Mr. Horam: The number of emergency calls answered by the London ambulance service in the London borough of Barnet within 14 minutes, rose from 66 per cent. in June 1995 to 89 per cent. in December 1996. Demand rose from 1,495 in June 1995 to over 2,000 in December 1996. Information on earlier years is not available.

Alcohol Concern

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has given to Alcohol Concern in each of the last five years. [10869]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is shown in the table:

	Core grant £	Grants programme £	Local councils on alcohol £
1992–93	412,000	2,065,000	200,000
1993–94	412,000	1,930,000	200,000
1994–95	370,800	968,000	200,000
1995–96	370,800	555,000	—
1996–97	370,800	1,055,000	—

Dental Caries

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on trends in the incidence of dental caries among schoolchildren in Barnet since 1979. [10776]

Mr. Malone: The British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry conducts annual surveys of dental caries prevalence in different aged children within a four-yearly cycle comprising those aged five, 12, five, and 14, throughout Great Britain. BASCD began these surveys in 1985–86 in England and Wales. Tables showing the mean number of decayed, missing and filled in the deciduous teeth only of five-year-old children, and in the permanent teeth only of 12 and 14 year old children in Barnet are:

No figures for 14-year-olds are available for 1986–87.

St. George's Hospital NHS Trust

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the St. George's Hospital NHS trust; where they reside; what are their professions; and if he will make a statement. [10889]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is:

	Postal town	Occupation
Chairman
Dr. Elizabeth Vallance	London	Academic
Non-executive directors:
Mr. Bernard Asher	London	Banking
Mrs. Kay Sonneborn	London	Not categorised
Miss Flona Colquhoun	London	Personnel management
Mr. Peter Mumford	London	Health management
Professor Robert Boyd	London	Academic

Shellfish

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates since 1990 public warning notices have been issued on the consumption of shellfish from the North sea between Amble and Marske. [10902]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not held centrally. The responsibility for posting warning notices lies with local authorities.

Motor Neurone Disease

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what drug treatments are available on the NHS for those suffering from motor neurone disease; and what assessment he has made of the differences in availability between health authorities in this respect; [11244]

(2) what treatment is available on the NHS for those who suffer from motor neurone disease. [11256]

Mr. Horam: A wide range of treatment, including drug treatment, is available on the national health service for those who suffer from motor neurone disease.

No assessment has been made of the differences in availability between health authorities in respect of treatment for motor neurone disease. It is for health authorities to determine the local needs of their populations and then purchase services to meet those needs within their available resources.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the report of the advisory group on the ethics of xenotransplantation will be published. [11764]

Mr. Dorrell: "Animal Tissue into Humans", the report of the advisory group on the ethics of xenotransplantation, was published today. The Government response to the report was also published for a three-month consultation period. Copies of the report and response are available in the Library.

I also announce the establishment of the UK Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority which will regulate this area until a suitable opportunity for primary legislation arises. I am very pleased that Lord Habgood of Calverton has agreed to chair this interim authority.

Community Care (Residential Charges)Bill

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place a copy of the current draft of the Community Care (Residential Charges) Bill in the Library. [11765]

Mr. Dorrell: Copies of the preliminary draft of the Community Care (Residential Charges) Bill have been placed in the Library. This draft has served as a basis for informal discussions with the financial services industry, local authority associations and other interested bodies. The Government will be publishing a final draft together with a policy statement in the near future: the current draft is purely a working draft and policy details will be given in the statement.

Deaf-blind People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners are able to provide communication support to deaf–blind patients. [9472]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training ambulance paramedics receive in communicating and making contact with deaf–blind people. [9473]

Mr. Malone: Ambulance paramedics do not receive specific training in communicating with deaf-blind people but are trained in communicating with, and handling, deaf people and blind people. They are trained to have good communication skills with all types of patients and trained in how to deal with patients sensitively.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community care assessments have been made by local authorities in England and Wales under the Carers Recognition and Services Act 1995 for carers of deaf-blind children and adults since 1 April 1995. [9475]

Mr. Burns: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to develop and expand the communicator guide service within local authorities for deaf-blind people. [9480]

Mr. Burns: Many local authorities are developing communicator guide services for deaf-blind people, often in partnership with deaf-blind organisations. The Department of Health has sought to promote the development of these services by raising awareness of the needs of deaf-blind people, and by making grants to voluntary organisations under the section 64 general scheme.

In 1996–97, the Council for the Advancement of Communication with Deaf People received a further award for the "Touch and Go" project, which has successfully developed accredited training courses for the communicator guides, and Sense and the Royal National Institute for the Blind are receiving project grants to develop communicator guide schemes. Deaf-blind United Kingdom and Sense—the National Deaf-blind and Rubella Association—both receive core funding under the section 64 scheme.

In seeking to promote awareness of deaf-blindness, the Department of Health works closely with the Association of Directors of Social Services. Particularly significant are the "Think Dual Sensory" draft good practice guidelines for social services and health professionals who provide or commission services for the increasing number of older people with dual sensory loss. The guidelines are currently being piloted in several local authorities.

Blood Stocks

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the current levels of blood stocks; and what recent representations he has received about their adequacy. [11228]

Mr. Horam: No representations have been received recently about the levels of blood stocks.

Blood stocks are often low over the Christmas and new year period, because of seasonal and other fluctuations in supply and demand and this winter has been no exception. Current levels of donations are encouraging, but the National Blood Authority has appealed for more donors to come forward in two out of its three zones, and in keeping the position under review.

Paediatric Services (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the role of the NHS executive, north-west will be in the public consultation process regarding paediatric services in Greater Manchester. [11094]

Mr. Horam: The regional offices of the Department of Health have an important role in facilitating discussions between key players locally and then to advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, where decisions have to be referred to him.

Psychological Injuries (Ex-service Personnel)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health at what sites medical provision is available to assist ex-service personnel who have suffered psychological and stress-related injuries from conflicts since 1982. [11037]

Mr. Burns: Assistance for suffers from post traumatic stress is available from general practitioners, who can make referrals to specialist psychiatric services as necessary.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle Cull

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated cost of the disposal per tonne of cattle carcases (a) by incineration, (b) by landfill and (c) by other means. [10342]

Mr. Baldry: The disposal of cattle carcases by direct incineration costs around £160 per tonne. Landfill, where this is an appropriate means of disposal, costs around £40 per tonne. Rendering followed by incineration of the resultant meat and bonemeal and tallow costs around £315 per tonne.

Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many successful prosecutions have been brought for infringements of the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986. [10409]

Mrs. Browning: Responsibility for enforcement of the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 is shared between the Health and Safety Executive, local authorities and the agriculture departments in Great Britain.

A total of 265 successful prosecutions have been brought under COPR since their introduction in 1986 by the HSE and the agriculture departments. Information on the number of prosecutions by local authorities is not available.

Community-supported Agriculture Projects

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make an assessment of the (a) number, (b) distribution and (c) benefits of community-supported agriculture projects in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [10536]

Mr. Boswell: The Department has no information on agriculture projects supported by local communities. However, where local projects contribute to the Department's overall policy aims and objectives these are to be welcomed.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Foreign Nationals (Work Permits)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the average time taken for foreign nationals employed in the United Kingdom to secure extensions to their permission to stay, for each year since 1992. [11226]

Mr. Kirkhope: About one third of applications for further leave to remain made by work permit holders are decided in the public inquiry offices on the same day. The average time to decide the remainder was as follows:

Category of decision	Average number of days
	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996[1]
Work-permit to holders	76	78	77	62	73
All decisions[2]	70	77	93	88	99

[1] Provisional.
[2] Excluding asylum-related decisions.

Prisoners (Education)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the average amount of time prisoners spent in education in each month of the financial year 1995–96 and each available month so far during 1996–97 (a) in each prison, (b) by prison type and (c) in the whole Prison Service. [9675]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking for the average amount of time prisoners spent in education in each month of the financial year 1995–6 and each month so far during 1996–7 (a) in each prison, (b) by prison type and (c) in the whole Prison Service.

The attached tables summarise the average number of hours per week that prisoners spent in education from April 1995 to September 1996, by prison, by prison type and in the whole Prison Service. I have arranged for copies of the tables to be placed in the Library.

The following categories have been included when calculating average education hours: daytime education, evening education, vocational training courses, construction and industrial training courses and physical education. Contracted-out prisons are not required to provide this detail of information therefore no figures are available.

Prison Behaviour Programmes

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the average number of prisoners (a) taking part in and (b) completing offending behaviour programmes in each month of the financial year 1995–96 and each available month so far during 1996–97 (i) in each prison, (ii) by prison type and (iii) in the whole Prison Service; [9677]

(2) if he will list the average number of prisoners (a) taking part in and (b) completing sex offender treatment programmes in each month of the financial year 1995–96 and each available month so far during 1996–97 (i) in each prison, (ii) by prison type and (iii) in the whole Prison Service; [9679]

(3) if he will list the average amount of time prisoners on such programmes spent in sex offender treatment programmes in each month of the financial year 1995–96 and each available month so far during 1996–97 (a) in each prison, (b) by prison type and (c) in the whole Prison Service; [9678]

(4) if he will list the average amount of time prisoners on such programmes spent in offending behaviour programmes in each month of the financial year 1995–96 and each available month so far during 1996–97 (a) in each prison, (b) by prison type and (c) in the whole Prison Service. [9676]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A.J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your Questions about how many prisoners have completed (a) offending behaviour programmes, (b) sex offender programmes for each month in 1995–96 and for this financial year so far and the average amount of time spent on these programmes.

You asked for this information for each prison, by prison type and for the whole of the Prison Service. I am afraid this information is not available in the form requested and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

However for the year ending 31 March 1996, 406 prisoners completed the core module 3 of the sex offender treatment programme (SOTP). A further 33 completed the SOTP booster programme (designed for men about to be released from very long sentences).

746 prisoners completed cognitive skills programmes, 115 of these completed the reasoning and rehabilitation programme and 631 the in-house thinking skills.

In order to meet the criteria set for programmes to be accredited the standards of existing programmes have had to be improved. The Sex Offender Core Programme was revised during 1995 from 70 to 180 hours and the length of the Thinking Skills programme was increased from 28 hours to 40 hours from April 1996.

I attach two tables containing information received from establishments which indicate the number of prisoners completing each of the accredited programmes so far this financial year, the programme length and the type of establishments running these programmes. There are a number of courses in progress which are not included in these figures.

There are other offending behaviour programmes run in prisons according to prisoners need and the skills of staff available to deliver them. These are not recorded centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Sex Offences

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the current maximum penalties for sex offences. [11766]

Mr. Howard: I have decided, in consultation with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, to undertake a review of the existing maximum penalties for sex offenders. The object of the review will be to identify any anomalies in existing penalties, and to ensure that penalties properly reflect the comparative gravity of different offences.

Prison Medical Service

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the merits of privatising the prison medical service. [10450]

Miss Widdecombe: We have no plans to privatise the prison health care service. We are committed to pursuing a policy where health care for prisoners will be purchased from the national health service or the private sector, rather than be provided directly, where this makes sense in terms of a better level of service and better value for money.

Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the estimated (a) set up and (b) monthly and annual running costs of the helpline to be introduced for employers regarding the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993. [10667]

Mr. Kirkhope: The cost of setting up the helpline for employers about section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 was approximately £23,000. The annual running costs would be approximately £3,500.

Prisoners (Purposeful Activity)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the average amount of time prisoners spent in purposeful activity in each month of the financial year 1995–96 and each available month so far during 1996–97 (a) in each prison, (b) by prison type and (c) in the whole Prison Service. [9674]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking for the average amount of time prisoners spent in purposeful activity in each month of the financial year 1995–96 and each month so far during 1996–97 (a) in each prison, (b) by prison type and (c) in the whole Prison Service.

The attached tables summarise the average number of hours per week that prisoners spent in purposeful activity from April 1995 to September 1996, by prison, by prison type and in the whole Prison Service. I have arranged for copies of the tables to be placed in the Library.

Imprisonment Statistics

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the male population has experienced imprisonment. [10632]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the proportion of the male population who experienced imprisonment.

The most recent available information was published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Criminal careers of those born between 1953 and 1973" (14/95). A copy of this bulletin has been placed in the Library.

This bulletin gives estimates of the proportion those born in 1953, 1958, 1963, 1968 and 1973 who had been convicted for at least one standard list offence (standard list offences consist of all indictable offences and some of the more serious summary offences—see Appendix 5 of "Criminal statistics, England and Wales, 1995" (Cm. 3421) for further details). Table 4 in this bulletin contains estimates of the cumulative percentage of the population with a custodial sentence for a standard list offence by gender and age.

Before the age of 40 (the highest age for which figures based on complete conviction histories are currently available) it is estimated that just under 7 per cent. of males born in 1953 had been sentenced to custody.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the number of strip searches undergone by Miss Roisin McAliskey on her journey from HM prison Holloway to the magistrates court on 13 December. [10638]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Hugh Taylor to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about strip searches undergone by Miss Roisin McAliskey on her journey to court on 13 December.

Miss McAliskey was subject to two strip searches in connection with her journey to court. In accordance with normal practice, she was strip searched on her departure for court and again on her arrival back at the prison. Both searches were conducted in the reception area at Holloway.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of daily strip searches undergone by Miss Roisin McAliskey since her transfer from Northern Ireland to HMPs Belmarsh and Holloway; what were the intervals between each search; what (a) contraband goods and (b) other materials were found on her body; and if such searches included the bodily orifices. [10639]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Hugh Taylor to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about strip searches undergone by Miss Roisin McAliskey.

Miss McAliskey has not been subject to daily strip searches. She has been strip searched whenever she has moved in or out of the prison to court, hospital or transfer. She has also been strip searched before and after every visit. This is the normal practice for a prisoner of her security category. At Belmarsh, Miss McAliskey was strip searched four times in connection with visits and four times in the course of movements in or out of the prison. Up to 20 December, she had been strip searched 31 times at Holloway, 24 in connection with visits and seven in the course of movements.

No contraband or other items have been found. Her mouth and ears have been searched, but she has not been subject to any internal body searches.

Strip Searches

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason it is necessary for remand prisoners to be strip searched before receiving closed visits. [10651]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the strip searching of remand prisoners prior to closed visits.

Governors have discretion under Prison Standing Order 5 to impose closed visits on any prisoner where security or control considerations so require. Under normal circumstances, prisoners who are subject to closed visits are not given a strip search prior to receiving such a visit.

A policy of mandatory closed visits for all exceptional risk category A prisoners held in special secure units (including those held on remand) was introduced in June 1995. Special secure units (SSUs) operate in accordance with national operating standards. The standards state that prisoners in the SSUs at Full Sutton and Whitemoor must be subjected to a rub down search before a closed visit. The standards also state that prisoners in the SSU at Belmarsh must be strip searched before and after all visits.

In the SSUs at Full Sutton and Whitemoor exceptional risk prisoners do not come into contact with prisoners from outside the unit. Prisoners in the Belmarsh SSU are held in the same building as high risk prisoners who are not subject to the restrictions imposed on exceptional risk prisoners. Exceptional risk prisoners at Belmarsh (whether convicted or on remand) are therefore strip searched to ensure that illicit items are not passed between prisoners on the way to or from visits.

High Intensity Regimes

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research has been undertaken by the Prison Service on (a) high intensity regimes and (b) boot camps; when it will be published; and if he will make a statement; [10783]

(2) from what areas the high intensity regime to be based at Colchester will draw inmates; and if he will make a statement; [10785]

(3) when the high intensity regime at Colchester will open; and if he will make a statement; [10784]

(4) what are the reasons for the delay in opening the high intensity regime at Colchester; and if he will make a statement. [10786]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Colchester young offender institution and the high intensity training programme at Thorn Cross young offender institution are both pilots. They will be the source of evidence of the effectiveness of the new approaches adopted. There are no directly parallel initiatives to provide evidence at present on likely reconviction rates.

In 1994, Prison Service officials prepared a report on American boot camps as advice to Ministers. Following the long established convention this advice was not published, nor will it be. Copies of readily available published research into American boot camps were placed in the Library in 1995. I must stress, however, that our two initiatives are not copies of American boot camps.

We intend the young offenders at Colchester to come predominantly from East Anglia and the south-east of England.

As I explained in the answer which I gave the hon. Member on 14 November, Official Report, column 299, this is a unique initiative requiring careful preliminary work and much progress has already been made. Since then, we have proceeded with the staff appointments to which I referred on that occasion, and I hope shortly that we will agree the final details of the regime. When we have done so we will set an opening date.

High Security Prisons

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for changes in the high security prison estate. [11767]

Miss Widdecombe: The director general of the Prison Service announced yesterday that the following eight prisons will be released from the high security category A estate:

Birmingham, Bullingdon, Elmley, Leeds, Liverpool, Swaleside, Winchester and Wormwood Scrubs.

The high security category A estate will comprise the following 13 prisons:

Belmarsh, Frankland, Full Sutton, Long Lartin, Wakefield, Whitemoor, Altcourse, Bristol, Doncaster, Durham, High Down, Manchester and Woodhill.

In addition, Hull prison will be available on occasion to take category A prisoners in its control review committee unit for disruptive prisoners but only until alternative accommodation can be provided elsewhere. There will also be some other occasions when individual category A prisoners will have to be held temporarily outside the category A estate for reasons of operational necessity.

Funding has been made available to complete the upgrading of physical and procedural security at the 13 prisons, in accordance with the recommendations in the Woodcock report. The work will be completed at 11 of the 13 prisons by May 1997, in accordance with the timetable published in February 1995, at Doncaster by September 1997 and at Altcourse when the prison opens in spring 1998.

The director general is also announcing the implementation of a further 11 recommendations of the Learmont report, in addition to the 100 recommendations set out in the implementation progress report published in July 1996.

Details are set out in a further implementation progress report which has been placed in the Library.

"Custody Care and Justice"

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the implementation of paragraph 4.12 concerning staff development in the document, "Custody Care and Justice", published in 1991 (Cm. 1647); and if he will make a statement. [10787]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the implementation of paragraph 4.12 concerning staff development in the document Custody, Care and Justice, published in 1991. Addressing the 11 points under their respective headings the points on each is as follows:

1. Pursue a Better Jobs initiative

The Better Jobs initiative continued as a method of improving staff motivation and achieving high quality work by means of collecting and publishing information on good practices in these areas. An evaluation in 1994 gave satisfactory results.

Last year saw a gradual change of focus to Investors in People support. This scheme shares many of the Better Jobs aims, but leads to accreditation to a National Standard. Achieving Investors status has been made a government requirement for the Civil Service. Most prisons now have some involvement with work on the Standard and five are already accredited.

2. Increase the opportunities for providing more fulfilling work for prison officers with prisoners

A revised sentence planning model is being launched across the Service during 1997. This will enhance the assessment of risk in prisoners and identify aspects of offending behaviour which should be addressed during the course of their sentence. Prison Officers have a key role in this in partnership with the Probation Service. A review of the Personal Officer Schemes is currently underway with a view to better equipping Prison Officers to meet the demands of advising and challenging prisoners' offending behaviour. Together with the Incentives and Privileges Scheme, this will provide a means by which staff gain constructive authority over prisoners as well as enhancing the Prisoner Officer role, providing a worthwhile service to prisoners.

3. Continue to encourage Governors to identify jobs which can be undertaken by staff other than prison officers

The Service has continued to identify jobs, where appropriate, that can be undertaken by staff other than prison officers. The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 enabled the widening of duties of such staff. Proposals have been put to the Prison Officers Association for the introduction of an Operational Support Grade to further help free prison officers for the work requiring their particular skills.

4. Consider the position of staff working in prisons who were not included in the initial "Fresh Start" arrangements

Following negotiation with unions representing industrial staff, the Service has introduced a new pay structure for those staff. Discussion with unions representing non-industrial staff have not been able to identify the necessary efficiency savings along the principles of Fresh Start.

The Prison Service pay and grading review is continuing to develop proposals which might go some way to improving the position of Heads of Management Services (which posts were specifically mentioned in the Woolf report).

5. Produce a new handbook for all staff setting out standards for the treatment and care of prisoners

The work of providing staff with guidance about the practical implementation of standards has been taken forward in the following ways.

(a) Suicide prevention strategies were extensively reviewed between 1991 and 1994. New research was commissioned from the Institute of Criminology, Cambridge and best practice was drawn upon. A revised strategy was launched in 1994 which focuses upon a multi-disciplinary approach to identifying those prisoners at risk and providing support. A new modular staff training programme in suicide awareness was drawn up which includes identification or risk factors; high risk stages in custody; and signs and symptoms of suicidal behaviour. Training and instructions are re-inforced by a detailed guidance pack on Caring for the Suicidal in Custody.

It is the responsibility of all staff to be alert to the risk of self-harm and suicide. The process of providing support through a multi-disciplinary approach centres around the use of the Form F2052SH which activates a case-conference approach. Where appropriate, external agencies such as the Samaritans are involved either as individual befrienders or in training and supporting prisoners as Listeners.

(b) Since 1993, the Directorate of Health Care in collaboration with operational colleagues has produced and promulgated Health Care Standards on the following 9 topics:

Health Assessment at First Reception

Mental Health Services in local prisons and remand centres

Primary and Out-patient Care

In-patient Care

Reception, Transfer and Discharge

Clinical and related Services for Promoting Health

Clinical AIDS/HIV Service

The Use of Medicines

Two further standards, on Forensic Psychiatry and Throughcare are planned.

(c) The Prison Service has also developed a National Vocational Qualification (NVQ), Level Two, in Custodial Care. 700 staff in 40 establishments are working towards this award. A further 400 applications have been made by staff in 1997–98. The award provides operating standards for staff to achieve eg in challenging aggressive and abusive behaviour while maintaining control.

It is expected that an NVQ Level Three award will be accredited by Spring 1997. This award will offer a flexible approach and cover other aspects of Prison Officer duties such as personal officer, reception and gate duties as well as imparting some units from other NVQ Lead Bodies, in the Care Sector Consortium eg units in Criminal Justice, Management and Supervision, Training and Development.

6. Issue shortly a new Guide for Line Managers on Service Induction with a clearer and more readable Guide for New Staff

A welcome to the Prison Service Pack was introduced comprising a series of 10 small brochures entitled:

Introduction to the Service

Caring for staff

Matching Prisoners to Places

Working for the Prison Service

Running Prisons

Industrial Relations

Caring for Prisoners

Information

Your Career

Glossary of Terms

Prison Service Internal communications is presently looking at the redrafting and redesign of the Welcome Pack.

In the event, it was decided to incorporate the Guide for Line Managers into the Staff Handbook. A new version is due to be published early this year. Where items are not covered, reference will be made in the Handbook to particular pieces of guidance in existence.

7. Provide staff in prisons with a statement of the facilities for and the standards expected of them

The Realising our Potential project of the Pay Grading and Performance Review identified a number of areas to be developed into "Standards" for delivery to staff. Work is well advanced on one of these, Communications, and the Communications Standard will be audited by the Standards Audit Unit.

8. Continue to improve the performance of all staff in treating prisoners fairly and without discrimination on grounds of race or religion

The Prison Service is committed to equality of opportunity and the elimination of discrimination on improper grounds. Comprehensive structures are in place to implement the Service's race relations policies. Prisons are required to have a Race Relations Management Team to develop and monitor progress and a Race Relations Liaison Officer to offer advice and support. The Service continues to up date procedures and develop mew initiatives, including revised guidance on the handling of racial incidents.

9. Introduce a Prison Officer Development Scheme

The Prison Service is piloting a Developing Managers Programme which is open to all Prison Service staff up to Governor 5 and equivalent. The programme aims to provide meaningful, high quality development opportunities for staff identified as having sufficient potential to progress to higher ranks. Subject to the outcome of the pilot and sufficient resources being available the programme will be launched during 1997.

10. Increase the posting of female staff to male establishments and vice versa

Opposite sex postings have been governed by a management/trade union agreement since 1988. On 9 May 1988 there were 101 female staff in the prison officer grades employed in male establishments (9% of all female officers), and 67 male officers posted to female establishments (0.4% of all male staff). The corresponding opposite sex postings figures as at 7 February 1996 (the latest available) are 1–579 (73% of all female officers) and 216 (1% of all male officers). Opposite sex postings have thus increased substantially over the last 8–9 years and are now well established within the Prison Service.

11. Broaden the experience of Prison Service staff

To facilitate this initiative, provision was made within the Personnel Directorate salaries budget to finance secondments of senior staff to other organisations. This has included placements with Kingfisher PLC, Newcastle NHS Trust, NACRO, The Church of England, The Prince's Trust, Thames Valley Safer Communities Partnership, Birmingham Institute for the Deaf, Action in the Community and The Lord Chancellor's Department.

In addition, the Prison Service has continued to work closely with other Government Departments and Agencies Personnel Sections in order to maximise interchange.

Prison Report

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish his response to the chief inspector of Her Majesty's prisons annual report; and if he will make a statement. [10789]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: It is not our practice to publish a response to the chief inspector's annual report. The Government are grateful to the chief inspector for producing this considered and informative annual report, and have noted its contents.

Asylum

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications were received for asylum in October 1996 and November 1996; and what were the equivalent figures for 1995. [10778]

Mr. Kirkhope: A total of 2,150 applications for asylum in the United Kingdom were lodged in October 1996 and 1,920 were lodged in the following month. The equivalent figures for the same months in 1995 were 4,595 and 4,715 respectively.

RAF Finningley

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards opening a prison on the site of RAF Finningley; and if he will make a statement. [10788]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the opening of a temporary prison on the RAF Finningley site.

In order to respond to the increase in prisoner population currently being experienced, several options have been considered. As part of this approach the Home Secretary asked the Secretary of State for Defence about sites no longer needed by the Ministry of Defence. RAF Finningley was found to be suitable for conversion into a temporary prison, particularly in the light of the immense pressure on other prisons in the north.

The planning application for part of the Finningley site to be converted into a temporary prison was lodged with Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council on 15 November 1996. The Council considered our proposal at a planning meeting on 23 December 1996 and has made clear its objections to our plans.

We are now considering whether to pursue further out planning application for use of part of Finningley as a temporary prison.

Air Weapons

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences involving air weapons were recorded in the last five years for which figures are available. [10255]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 14 January 1997]: The information requested is published in chapter 3 (table 3.3) of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1995".

A copy of this publication has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of air weapons held in the United Kingdom. [10256]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 14 January 1997]: No realistic estimate has been made centrally.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prescription and (b) over-the-counter medicinal drugs were consumed in each of the past three years in (i) Cardiff prison, (ii) Downview prison, (iii) Everthorpe prison and (iv) Swansea prison. [9849]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about medicines issued at Cardiff, Downview, Everthorpe and Swansea prisons.

The information is not available in the form requested. However we are able to provide figures for the number of prescription sheets issued in 1996 for each of the prisons listed. Each prescription sheet may cover one or more medicines.

Cardiff: 12,168

Downview: 3,900

Everthorpe: 2,080

Swansea: 11,960.

Prison Officers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers have taken retirement under the new voluntary early retirement and severance scheme; and if he will indicate the numbers for each prison in England and Wales and the officers that have left that prison under this system. [10772]

Miss Widdcombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 16 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the numbers of prison officers who have taken retirement under the VERSE scheme.

WALES

St. David's Health Centre, Cardiff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 587, if he will list for each of the parties concerned and their legal representatives the date on which his officials first made contact with them to propose a date for the oral hearing into the Triocare application. [10473]

Mr. Hague: The procedures for setting up an oral hearing require that dates are canvassed with panel members in advance. The parties to this hearing were advised of the date which had been set on 18 December 1996.

Welsh Development Agency (Redundancy Policy)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he approved a redundancy policy for the Welsh Development Agency. [11175]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh Office approved the policy on 20 September 1994.

TREASURY

Tax Revenue

13. Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total tax revenue generated by those taxes which have been introduced since 1992. [9528]

Mr. Waldegrave: Some £2.9 billion. However, of this, £1 billion was lottery duty, the rate of which was set to offset broadly the indirect tax lost from consumer spending diverted to the lottery.

Labour Statistics

14. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of Britain's working age population are in employment; and what is the figure in other European countries. [9529]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Total employment in autumn 1996 was almost 300,000 up on a year earlier, 900,000 million higher than at the end of 1992, and 1.5 million higher than at the end of 1979. Our impressive record on job creation means that, at 69 per cent., we have a higher proportion of our working age population in work, and a lower unemployment rate than any other major EU country.

Earnings

15. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the real take-home pay of a family on average earnings in 1978–79; and what he estimates it will be in 1997–98. [9530]

Mr. Jack: In today's prices, real take-home pay for a family on average earnings was £220 a week in 1978–79 and should rise to £318 a week in 1997–98. That is an increase of nearly £100 a week, over £5,000 a year.

16. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much better off he estimates a family on average earnings will be in April 1997 compared with May 1992. [9531]

Mr. Jack: In 1997–98, a family on average earnings should be £1,100 better off than in 1991–92 after earnings growth, tax and inflation.

Illegal Imports

17. Mr. Tony banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what seizures Customs and Excise made of illegally imported (a) alcohol and (b) tobacco in the last available month. [9532]

Mr. Oppenheim: In October 1996, Customs and Excise detected smuggled alcohol with a revenue value of £258,599 and tobacco products with a revenue value of £267,463.

Private Shareholders

18. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the current number of private shareholders in the privatised utilities. [9533]

Mr. Jack: The most recent Government survey suggested that the number of individual shareholders was around 10 million, three times higher than the figure in 1979. Well over half of this number owned shares in privatised companies.

European Single Currency

19. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the criteria for joining the European single currency. [9534]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Maastricht convergence criteria are fully consistent with the Government's economic policy of achieving permanently low inflation and sound public finances. An assessment of which countries meet the conditions for joining the single currency on 1 January 1999 will be made by the Council of Ministers in early 1998. At present, there are considerable uncertainties surrounding this and other issues relating to the single currency.

27. Mr. Pope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the benefits of a European single currency to the United Kingdom economy. [9543]

Mr. Oppenheim: We cannot properly assess whether to join economic and monetary union until we know the key facts, including when it will begin, who will take part, and how strictly the economic criteria governing membership will be applied. This demonstrates the value of preserving our opt-out. It allows us to influence the negotiations to help ensure that the single currency proceeds only on a sustainable basis and that the UK's interests are protected, but it also allows us to reach our own decision at an appropriate time.

Airport Passenger Duty

20. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the yield from airport passenger duty in the last two years; and what he expects the yield to be in 1997. [9535]

Mr. Oppenheim: Receipts of air passenger duty were £343 million in 1995–96 and are expected to reach £0.4 billion in 1996–97. I expect the yield in 1997–98 to be £0.5 billion. This corrects the earlier estimate of £0.8 billion, published in the November 1996 "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

I am also taking this opportunity to inform the House of a correction to the forecast of insurance premium tax receipts in 1997–98. I now expect the yield to be £1.1 billion, compared to £1.2 billion in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

Value Added Tax (Fuel)

21. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received relating to value added tax on fuel. [9536]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have received a number of representations on this subject.

Investment

22. Ms Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on investment in the United Kingdom economy. [9537]

Mrs. Angela Knight: UK businesses have invested more in relation to gross domestic product in the 1990s than in the 1980s, having invested more in the 1980s than in the 1970s. In setting the right climate of low inflation and steady growth, the Government's economic policies are encouraging business to expand and invest with confidence.

Petrol Duty

23. Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account his assessment of the Budget's impact on the overall level of taxation has taken of the increase in the duty on petrol. [9538]

Mr. Jack: The impact of the Budget on the overall level of taxation is set out in table 6.1 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" 1997–98.

Computer Systems

24. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with his European Union counterparts about achieving single currency compliance and millennium compliance of computer systems before 2000; and if he will make a statement. [9539]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave him on 13 January, column 19.

Inland Revenue (Local Offices)

25. Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes he plans to make to the network of local offices of the Inland Revenue. [9541]

Mr. Jack: Since 1993, the Inland Revenue has been carrying out a 10-year programme to reorganise its whole network of local offices. Firm plans exist for the period up to April 1998 and initial planning for the period from April 1998 is currently taking place.

Fixed Exchange Rates

26. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy in respect of fixed exchange rates. [9542]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government recognise the value of a stable exchange rate but do not have a target for sterling. The exchange rate is only one of many factors that has to be taken account of in policy decisions. Monetary policy is, and will continue to be, aimed at achieving the Government's inflation target of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. or less.

Retail Sales (Brent Cross)

28. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to visit Brent Cross to discuss the level of retail sales. [9544]

Mrs. Angela Knight: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has no plans to visit Brent Cross at present, but I am always happy to discuss the buoyant state of the British economy with my hon. Friend.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the timetable for EMU. [9525]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The EC Treaty sets out the timetable for EMU. As I have said before—to the House of Lords Select Committee on 28 March 1996—it is too soon to say whether EMU will start on 1 January 1999, but member states will continue to prepare on that basis.

Take-home Pay

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about changes in real take-home pay since April 1992. [9540]

Mr. Jack: Next year, real take-home pay for a family on average earnings should be £1,100 a year higher than in 1991–92.

Treasury Building

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the project to redevelop the Treasury building. [11768]

Mr. Jack: The Treasury has now taken another step forward in this project by agreeing commercial heads of terms with Exchequer Partnership plc. This completes a significant milestone in the negotiation process, and enables both parties to proceed with the project in principle, subject to final contract. That contract, known as the development framework agreement, is now being drafted.

The Treasury is likely to occupy around a third of the redeveloped building. The intention is that all essential building works will be completed in advance of occupation, and that the Treasury will pay as and when its accommodation needs are delivered to specified standards. The accommodation will all be towards the western end of the building which will enable the Treasury to occupy purpose-built, modern accommodation within the existing facade. It is for Exchequer Partnership plc to decide how best to utilise the non-Treasury space in the redeveloped building.

It is presently looking at various options including flats at the western end, and a hotel and/or additional offices at the eastern end. Other issues will necessitate satisfying the authorities on a wide variety of matters, including planning permission and listed building consent, and will be subject to security considerations. Further details will be available at DFA stage.

The present timetable, subject to planning permission and therefore necessarily tentative, remains for the Treasury temporarily to vacate the building towards the end of 1998, and to re-occupy part of it in the middle of 2001.

EU Contributions

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlie the discrepancies between his Department's assessment of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Union for 1994 and that of the European Court of Auditors. [10226]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The main reasons for the differences between the Government's estimate of the United Kingdom's net contribution in 1994 and the figures of the European Court of Auditors are as follows:

the European Commission introduced a supplementary and amending budget so late in 1993 that member states paid their contributions to this budget in early January 1994—in the UK's case £530 million. It would appear the Court of Auditors scored member states' contributions to the 1993 budgetary year. The Treasury scored these contributions to 1994; the Court of Auditors 1994 figures would appear to include the bulk of the receipts which the UK received in January 1995—£245 million. Treasury estimates scored these receipts to 1995; the Court of Auditors figures include payments by the Community direct to the UK private sector (£450 million). These were not taken into account in the Treasury's estimate which relates only to UK public sector transactions.

Mr. Budice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the net payments made by each EU member state to the European Union budget in 1995. [10516]

Mr. Oppenheim: I refer to the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley) on 11 December, Official Report, column 203.

EU VAT Committee

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate the composition of the VAT committee of the European Community; what representatives it has from the United Kingdom; what are (a) its terms of reference and (b) the matters currently under consideration; and who has access to its minutes. [10808]

Mr. Oppenheim: Article 29 of the sixth VAT directive provides for an advisory committee on value added tax. Its members are representatives of the member states and the Commission, which also chairs the committee. The United Kingdom is represented by officials of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise. The committee has no formal terms of reference. In practice, it examines matters concerning the application of EC VAT provisions referred for consideration by the chairman or at the request of a member state. Matters under consideration are generally technical questions on the correct application or interpretation of the sixth VAT directive. Minutes of the committee's proceedings are available only to the members of the committee.

Value Added Tax

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenues to the Exchequer arising from recent changes in the application of VAT regulations. [9517]

Mr. Oppenheim: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) earlier today.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to circulate to all interested statutory and non-statutory bodies the proposals of the European Commission contained in its document COM 96/328 relating to plans for completion of full harmonisation of VAT, together with its proposals for implementation of a system of centralised Community-wide collection; and if he will request observations on these proposals from the organisations concerned. [10879]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 15 January 1997]: In August 1996, HM Customs and Excise issued an information paper covering a copy of the Commission's outline programme for a "common system" of VAT—COM 328/96—and invited observations on the Commission's ideas. The Commission's programme contains no legislative proposals. The information paper was issued to all members of Customs' Joint VAT Consultative Committee and Joint Customs Consultative Committee. These twin committees comprise a wide range of interests including representatives of large and small businesses, trade associations, lawyers and tax advisers. Customs is also engaged in a continuing dialogue with business and other interested parties about the Commission's ideas to ensure that the widest range of opinion is canvassed.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants there are currently of (a) attendance allowance and (b) disability living allowance; and how many in each case also receive (i) income support, (ii) housing benefit and (iii) council tax benefit. [6733]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is in the table.

Recipients of attendance allowance and disability living allowance who are beneficiaries of income support, housing benefit, council tax benefit: May 1995

	Recipients: August 1996	Income support[2]	Housing benefit[3]	Council tax benefit
Attendance allowance[1]	1,194,000	418,000	306,000	445,000
Disability living allowance[1]	1,768,000	506,000	390,000	499,000

[2]Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry: 5 per cent. sample as at May 1995.

[3]Housing Benefit Management Information System: 1 per cent. as at May 1995.

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand.

2. Beneficiaries are those adults and children who receive disability living allowance who are also a claimant, partner or child dependant in receipt of the means tested benefits shown.

3. There are overlaps between recipients of disability living allowance who receive either one or both components.

4. Not all housing benefit/council tax benefit dependants can be identified. Figures do not include second adult rebate cases.

5. There is considerable overlap between benefits shown.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many deaf-blind people have applied for the disability living allowance; [9476]

(2) how many deaf-blind people have been awarded the disability living allowance; and at what levels; [9477]

(3) how many deaf-blind people have appealed against a disability living allowance decision; and how many of these appellants have been successful in reversing the original decision. [9478]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

Awards of disability living allowance to people whose main disabling condition is deafness and blindness[1]

Components awarded	Number
Higher rate care and higher rate mobility	46
Higher rate care and lower rate mobility	2
Higher rate care only	9
Middle rate care and higher rate mobility	73
Middle rate care and lower rate mobility	11
Middle rate care only	19
Lower rate care and higher rate mobility	75
Lower rate care and lower rate mobility	23
Lower rate care only	9
Higher rate mobility	47
Lower rate mobility	24
All awards	338

Notes:
[1] People with deafness and blindness, but for whom another condition was the main disabling condition, are not included.

Figures are for the period from 6 April 1992 up to 30 November 1996.

Analytical Services Division: 100 per cent. data.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people with Usher syndrome have applied for the care component of the disability living allowance; and how many have been refused. [9479]

Mr. Mitchell: The information requested is not available.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of carers who are no longer entitled to sign on as unemployed as a result of the introduction of jobseeker's allowance and are also unable to obtain national insurance credits due to the cared–for person not being in receipt of disability living allowance at the middle rate. [8896]

Mr. Roger Evans: No such estimate has been made. Carers who care for someone who is in receipt of the highest or middle rate of disability living allowance care component are not required to be available for work and may be able to claim income support. People who receive income support as carers can take advantage of home responsibilities protection which will protect their basic pension rights.

All unemployed carers, whether caring for someone who is in receipt of disability living allowance or not, can choose to claim jobseeker's allowance and will receive either benefit and credits or credits alone, depending on their personal circumstances, so long as they fulfil the jobseeker's allowance conditions of being available for and actively seeking work. Under jobseeker's allowance, carers are able to restrict the hours for which they are available for work in line with their caring responsibilities, so long as they retain reasonable prospects of securing employment and are available for a minimum of 16 hours per week. Additionally, carers are not required to take up employment immediately but are instead allowed 48 hours notice before taking up a job.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much benefit expenditure has been saved as a result of the introduction of jobseeker's allowance. [11039]

Mr. Evans: The information is not yet available. However, we estimate that the new jobseeker's allowance will save £60 million in 1996–97 and £240 million in 1997–98.

German War Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many German war pensions are paid to people resident in the United Kingdom; in what ways his Department acts as agent for those payments; what records his Department retains of the war service of those paid; and if he will make a statement. [9905]

Mr. Heald: The payment of German war pensions is a matter for the German authorities. However, I understand that, as at July 1996, 459 such pensions were in payment. The Department does not act in any way as agent for these pensions and consequently has no record of any sort of the individuals concerned.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which regulations cover the operation of the special payment unit of the Child Support Agency. [11177]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: None, as the Department's special payments scheme operates on an extra-statutory basis.

Cold Weather Payments

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes there have been to the trigger points for cold climate payments in Scotland; for each new station what is the difference in recorded temperatures compared to the previous site for the last three months; how many payments have been triggered for the areas covered by new weather stations; and if he will make a statement. [10727]

Mr. Roger Evans: From November 1996, a number of changes were made to postcode links with weather stations in Scotland. Two additional weather stations were introduced at Aultbea and Loch Glascarnoch. Aultbea covers some postcodes formerly covered by Tiree weather station. Loch Glascarnoch covers some postcodes formerly linked to weather stations at Aviemore, Kinloss, Tiree and Wick airport.

So far this winter, Loch Glascarnoch has triggered payments five times. Aultbea has not triggered.

Based on the daily data used for the scheme, the mean monthly temperatures for the last three months are set out in the following table:

Mean temperatures Deg. C

	October 1996	November 1996	December 1996
Aultbea	11	5.8	4.7
Tiree	10.7	6.3	5.2
Loch Glascarnoch	9.0	2.2	1.0
Aviemore	9.4	2.1	0.4
Kinloss	10.8	4.3	2.4
Tiree	10.7	6.3	5.2
Wick airport	9.4	3.7	3.1

This winter, the starting date for the cold weather payments scheme was 4 November.

Visits to Pensioners

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what visits he made to pensioners on low incomes during the recent cold weather. [11092]

Mr. Heald: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State sees pensioners throughout the year, but he has had no meetings in an official capacity with pensioners in the recent period.

However, our commitment to help with periods of cold weather is reflected in the fact that more than 5 million cold weather payments, worth more than £43 million, have been made so far this winter.

Apart from cold weather payments, the total extra help above normal upratings made available to pensioners on income-related benefits since 1988 is worth around 1.2 billion pounds a year.

Expenditure on benefits for the elderly rose by almost 50 per cent. in real terms between 1978–79 and 1995–96.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Graffiti

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures have been taken to remove the sectarian graffiti on the subway between Cairnshill close and Newtonheights, Belfast; and if he will make a statement. [10803]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 15 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked the Chief Executive to reply to your question about graffiti on the subway between Cairnshill Close and Newton Heights, Belfast and in his absence I am replying on his behalf.

As you may be aware this subway is subject to recurring graffiti. Work to have the latest graffiti removed commenced on 13 January.

Central Services Agency

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the overspend by the legal directorate of the central services agency against its contract income for the year 1996–97; what measures he proposes to address the overspend; and what funding he proposes to make available to the legal directorate of the Central Services Agency in order to cover its overspend. [10876]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available.

The level of expenditure of the legal services directorate of the Central Services Agency against contract income for 1996–97 will not be known until the end of the financial year at 31 March 1997.

The legal services directorate is an integral part of the CSA and as such is required to live within its budget by breaking even on income and expenditure taking one year with another. Consequently, if an overspend were incurred, the legal services directorate would be required to identify and take the necessary measures to absorb the deficit. There are no plans at this stage to provide additional funding to the CSA's legal services directorate.

Independent Commission for Police Complaints

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will lay before Parliament the 1994–97 triennial review of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [11470]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have today arranged for the 1994–97 triennial review of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints to be laid before Parliament.

This is the third triennial review by the commission since it was established in 1988 and, although it largely follows the approach of the other two, it also considers the vexed issue of who should investigate the police. A chapter setting out the strengths and weaknesses of four possible models is included.

The commission makes seven recommendations for change, including on the nature of the disciplinary tribunal, the standard of proof, the commission's involvement in non-complaint cases and recording of complaints.

The Government will be considering the recommendations in the light of the report of the review of the police complaints system in Northern Ireland by Dr. Hayes which is due to be published later this month.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the likelihood of the Ross on Wye outbreak of Newcastle disease spreading; what measures have been taken to prevent the spread of the disease; and if he will make a statement. [11551]

Mrs. Browning: All outbreaks of Newcastle disease pose a risk of the disease spreading. Following confirmation of the first outbreak of disease on premises near Ross on Wye, an order was made under the Animal Health Act 1981 imposing movement restrictions on poultry and hatching eggs within a 3 km protection zone and 10 km surveillance zone around the affected premises. The same action was taken following a further outbreak close to the original outbreak, and another outbreak—which may not be linked—in East Sussex. Restrictions are not lifted until 30 days after the infected premises have been disinfected assuming that there have been no further outbreaks. The State Veterinary Service is conducting investigations with the objective of tracing the source of the infection and preventing it from spreading.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidelines his Department gives to farmers in respect of a suspected Newcastle disease outbreak; and if he will make a statement. [11555]

Mrs. Browning: All poultry farmers in the restricted areas are visited and given guidance as to the restrictions placed upon them, advice on the nature of the disease and how to avoid its being spread and the need to report to MAFF any suspicion of the disease.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many recognised outbreaks of Newcastle disease have been recorded on farms by area in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [11550]

(2) how many (a) chickens, (b) turkeys and (c) other birds have been affected by Newcastle disease in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11548]

Mrs. Browning: Other than the current outbreaks this year, there has been one incident of Newcastle disease in Great Britain since 1984, in May 1996. Following the death of 11 farmed pheasants on a farm in East Sussex, the remaining flock of about 3,600 birds and chicks was slaughtered.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of birds contracting Newcastle disease currently die; and if he will make a statement. [11554]

Mrs. Browning: The rates of mortality depend upon the species and age of the bird and the virulence of the virus concerned. The virus isolated from birds in the current incident near Ross on Wye has proved to be more virulent for chickens than for turkeys.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the causes of Newcastle disease in (i) farmed poultry, (ii) other captive birds, (iii) wild birds, (iv) other species and (v) humans; and if he will make a statement. [11553]

Mrs. Browning: MAFF has funded a number of research projects into Newcastle disease in farmed poultry and continues to do so. The following research undertaken since 1991 into Newcastle disease virus has been completed and evaluated:

- Molecular mechanisms of pathogenicity of Newcastle disease virus;
- Evaluation of the antigenicity and immunogenicity of Newcastle disease virus;
- Development of techniques for the rapid diagnosis of Newcastle disease and the characterisation of the virus.

The following research projects into Newcastle disease virus are currently in progress:

- Evaluation of the molecular basis for the pathogenicity of Newcastle disease virus;
- Use of monoclonal antibodies in differentiation and assessment of the relationship between Newcastle disease isolates for rapid diagnosis;
- Virulence assessment of Newcastle disease virus utilising a non-radioactive probe;
- Molecular epidemiology of Newcastle disease virus based on phylogenetic analysis of sequences;
- Development of alternative methods for the virulence testing of Newcastle disease isolates.

The following research project into Newcastle disease virus will begin in the next financial year:

- Virulence assessment and epizootiological tracing of Newcastle disease in chickens using recombinant antibodies.

Research into Newcastle disease in humans is a matter for the Department of Health but I understand that no research in this area has been undertaken recently.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Jobsearch Assistance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her estimate of the cost of extending eligibility for jobsearch assistance to (a) partners of (i) unemployed claimants and (ii) sick and disabled people, (b) lone parents and (c) sick and disabled claimants. [10962]

Mr. Forth: All of these people can get help in looking for a job from the employment service. In addition, subject to certain eligibility conditions, people in each of these groups are eligible for our employment and training programmes. Any individual is eligible if he or she has been (a) in direct or indirect receipt of one or more of a number of relevant benefits for a specified minimum period, and (b) out of work for a specified minimum period. Some groups, including people with disabilities, are eligible for programmes whether or not they meet these conditions.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many assisted places have been financed for pupils in each education authority, and at what public cost, in each of the last five years. [11077]

Mrs. Gillan: Information on the local education authority area in which assisted pupils reside is not collected centrally. Schools participating in the scheme recruit widely beyond the area in which they are situated and admit pupils from a number of different LEA areas.

Teaching Methods

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many maintained schools use (a) formal and (b) informal teaching methods. [11218]

Mr. Forth: Information is not collected in this form. Schools generally use a range of teaching methods. The Government's education reforms encourage the use of the most effective methods to maximise the attainment of pupils.

Science Teachers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has for funding increased in-service training for (a) primary teachers teaching science and (b) science teachers in secondary schools. [10957]

Mr. Forth: The Government support in-service teacher training, for both primary and secondary school teachers, through elements of the grants for education support and training programme. GEST–supported expenditure will rise from £266.4 million in 1996–97 to £296.8 million in 1997–98. Schools generally have considerable flexibility in deciding how to spend GEST funds, although some is ring-fenced, including funding to enhance primary teachers' subject knowledge.

Reading Skills

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current proportion of 11-year-olds achieving a reading age appropriate to their age; what the figure was two years ago in (a) England, (b) the north-west region and (c) Bolton; and what action she is taking to improve the reading abilities of 11-year-olds. [11032]

Mrs Gillan: National curriculum assessment results for English encompass reading, writing, speaking and listening. In 1995, the first year of national curriculum assessment for 11-year-olds, 48 per cent. achieved the level expected for their age in tests and 56 per cent. did so in teacher assessments. In 1996, these figures had improved to 58 per cent. and 60 per cent. respectively. The first primary school performance tables will report by school and LEA the 1996 key stage 2 results including English. In 1997, the key stage 2 reading test will generate separate optional national curriculum levels and age standardised scores. The Government have a range of strategies to improve literacy standards, including their network of literacy centres national curriculum for initial teacher training and family literacy initiative.

Personalised Number Plates (Executive Agencies)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by her Department; and if she will list them. [11414]

Mr. Robin Squire: None.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Fairs and Seminars

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the results of the bids for trade fair and overseas seminar support for 1997–89. [12007]

Mr. Nelson: I am pleased to announce that, under the trade fairs support scheme, about 260 groups of firms will be offered support totalling £17 million for exhibitions world-wide in 1997–98. This will be a major fillip, especially to small and medium firms which otherwise would not exhibit their products to potential customers in this way. In addition, this year, for the first time, similar export promotion activities will be eligible for the sector challenge competition, the results of which will be announced in March. I am pleased to report that a number of such applications have been invited to prepare full bids under the challenge.

Of the 260 exhibitions being announced now, nearly half will be in Europe, about one fifth in the Asia Pacific and another fifth in the Americas. The full programme will be published in my Department's overseas promotions guide later this week. Copies will be sent to business links and trade associations and copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Against a background of considerable demand for this support and in order to maintain a substantial programme while containing public expenditure, I have decided to reduce the rate of grant on the approved cost of renting space and constructing stands at trade fairs from 50 per cent. to 45 per cent. I have also decided not to revalue the price levels on which construction grants are based. These changes will apply to all events for which my Department announces support from today. Offers of grant and firm announcements of support already made will continue to attract grant at current rates. I am not yet in a position to take decisions on supporting some events which would involve new expenditure in 1998–99.

Inclusion of the trade fairs programme in the sector challenge should bring significant benefits to exporters by allowing new and more flexible approaches to exhibiting. I will be reviewing the way that we support trade fairs after the first sector challenge but my intention is to make all support for the trade fairs after this round available through the sector challenge. Consequently, the existing understanding to support automatically a core programme of events will continue only up to 31 March 1999.

In the meantime, with the aim of making the current scheme more customer-friendly, I have decided to streamline its administration. My Department will be reducing the number of forms, simplifying those forms still needed and asking intermediaries to be more accountable to their customers and less to my Department. This will apply routinely to the events for which I am announcing support from today and, where practicable, to offers already made.

In addition, under the related overseas seminar scheme, my Department plans to support 31 events in 1997–98. Details of these too will be included in the overseas promotion guide.

Business Links

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the Government observations on the fifth report of the Trade and Industry Committee on business links—House of Commons 301 of Session 1995–96—what steps the Government have taken to reduce bureaucracy and relate funding to outputs; and what targets he intends to set for each business link. [12030]

Mr. Page: From 1997–98, each business link will have a single budget for the core services that it is required to provide and my Department will make its contribution to the cost of business link services against proposals set out in the relevant training and enterprise council business plan for meeting the needs of the area. Funding will no longer depend in a mechanistic way on the precise levels of activity on each service, but each business link partnership will need to meet targets related to (a) the fees paid to the business link by assisted businesses, (b) the number of businesses with at least one employee using business link services and (c) the number of businesses that have an established fee-based relationship with the business link. The numerical targets for each business link will depend on local circumstances such as how long the business link has been operating.

These targets reflect the fact that business links are commercial organisations operating in the private sector, although with a public purpose. If they are to be credible in providing business advice to their client customers, it is particularly important that they also operate commercially. Charging helps the assisted business to appreciate the value of the services provided and helps business links to generate additional funds so that the business link can increase the volume, quality and range of services it offers. In order to ensure that all business links make progress in this area, I have decided to set a minimum level for fee income from assisted businesses. Consequently, by their fifth year of operations—or by 1998–99 for business links that will reach their fifth year in 1997–98—business links should be earning at least 25 per cent. of their income from the assistance they provide to businesses. In earlier years, they will be expected to be making clear and defined progress towards this target. This approach gives business links considerable freedom in deciding how to charge their customers, while ensuring a broad minimum overall level of income from assisted businesses across all business link areas.

Overseas Projects Fund

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many projects have been won with overseas projects fund assistance in each of the last five years; and if he will identify each project. [11444]

Mr. Lang:

1991–92: 4
1992–93: 3
1993–94: 5
1994–95: 5
1995–96: 1
1996–97 to date: 3.

Information about individual projects is confidential between the company and the Department.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Hyndburn (Mr Pope) of 11 November, Official Report, column 14, on the overseas projects fund, if he will identify each of the projects assisted in each of the last five years. [11446]

Mr. Lang: Information about individual projects is confidential between the company and the Department.

Arbitration Act 1996

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Arbitration Act 1996 will come into force; and if he will make a statement. [12008]

Mr. Lang: I am pleased to announce that, before the House rose for the Christmas recess, I made an order to bring the main provisions of the Arbitration Act 1996 into force on 31 January 1997. I have decided not to bring sections 85 to 87 of the Act, which make certain special provisions for domestic arbitration agreements, into force. A draft order to repeal these sections will be laid before both Houses as soon as is practicable.

The new Act will apply to all arbitration proceedings which are commenced on or after 31 January, no matter when the agreement to arbitrate was made. The only exception is the provision at section 46(1)(b) of the Act, which enables the parties to agree that the dispute can be decided in accordance with provisions other than the law. This provision will apply only to new arbitration agreements made on or after 31 January 1997.

The commencement order which brings the Act into force makes certain transitional arrangements to deal with situations where applications in respect of arbitral proceedings are made to the courts around the time the Act comes into force.

Arrangements are being made to have new rules of court in place on 31 January to complement the new Act.

At the same time, I have laid before both Houses an order under section 91 of the Act to set at £3,000 the amount below which a consumer arbitration agreement will be considered unfair. The order will apply to England and Wales and Scotland. Apart from its provisions on consumer arbitration agreements the Act does not apply to Scotland. A similar order is being made for Northern Ireland.

The departmental advisory committee on arbitration law produced an excellent commentary on the Arbitration Bill in February of last year. A supplementary report is being prepared which will bring the commentary on the project up to date.

My Department is in the process of preparing a brochure on the Act which is being written with the needs of small business and consumers specifically in mind.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the age of (a) the youngest and (b) the oldest person who was electronically tagged in England and Wales during 1996. [10884]

Mr. Sackville: The answers are: (a) 16; (b) 60.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were electronically tagged in England and Wales during 1996. [10885]

Mr. Sackville: Two hundred and thirteen men and 16 women were sentenced to curfew orders monitored electronically in the three trial areas during 1996.

Research (Dogs and Cats)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if non-purpose-bred dogs and cats used for research in the United Kingdom are obtained from non-designated supplying establishments situated within the United Kingdom. [11171]

Mr. Sackville: In Great Britain during 1995, the only year for which figures are available, 66 dogs but no cats used in scientific procedures were obtained from sources within the United Kingdom not designated breeding or supplying establishments.

Animal Procedures Committee

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his appointments to the Animal Procedures Committee. [11929]

Mr. Sackville: I have appointed the following persons to be members of the Animal Procedures Committee for four years with effect from 1 January 1997:

Professor Robin Dunbar, professor of psychology, university of Liverpool;

Mr. John Gregory, fellow, Institute of Animal Technicians;

Professor John Turner, professor of evolutionary genetics, university of Leeds.

Shoplifting

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the minimum number of items of information a police officer has to provide in order to initiate the prosecution of a juvenile delinquent for shoplifting; and if he will make a statement. [10761]

Mr. Maclean: Six forms are needed in the prosecution file in the case of a juvenile offender where a guilty plea is expected. These are:

a file front sheet which includes the defendant's details;

a copy of the charge sheet/summons;

the defendant's previous convictions, if any;

a compensation form completed by the victim;

a short descriptive note; and a note of how the decision to prosecute was reached.

More information is required where a not guilty plea is expected. There are also other forms and documents which are completed or taken into account which are not directly associated with the prosecution process; these include property registers, custody records and fingerprint forms.

Deaf-blind People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training police receive in communicating and making contact with deaf-blind people. [9471]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 16 January 1997]: There is no national training aimed specifically at how police officers should communicate or make contact with deaf-blind people although the probationer foundation training programme seeks to establish a general awareness and understanding of the special needs of people the police are likely to encounter. There are, however, special provisions for dealing with people in police custody who appear to be blind or deaf and training in the requirements of the relevant Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 codes of practice is included in the custody officer training package which is available to all forces.

It is the responsibility of individual chief officers to ensure that their officers are suitably trained for the duties that they undertake.

Firearms (Amendment) Bill

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the number of (i) small businesses which will close and (ii) jobs which will be lost as a result of the implementation of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill; [11219]

(2) what is the size of the budget which the Government are proposing to compensate (a) businesses and (b) individuals who will have to surrender firearms as a result of the implementation of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill. [11220]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answers 16 January 1997]: Our estimate of the costs that will need to be paid to compensate all those who surrender guns and accessories is as set out in the financial memorandum to the Firearms (Amendment) Bill.

It has not been possible to estimate the full impact of the measures that would be introduced by the Bill on businesses and employment.

Prison Interviews

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to ban interviews between journalists and convicted murderers on prison premises; and if he will make a statement. [10658]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Visits to prisoners by journalists or authors in their professional capacity are generally not permitted. Where, exceptionally, a visit is permitted, journalists or authors are required to give a written undertaking which limits the subject and conditions of the interview. The Government have considered the recent High Court judgment in the case of Simms and O'Brien and have decided to appeal.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the five hon. Members who most frequently had one of the first five oral questions to the Prime Minister on the Order Paper since the beginning of the Session. [9951]

Mr. Newton: The hon. Members listed have appeared more than once in the top five on the Order Paper for oral questions to the Prime Minister between the start of the current Session and 18 December. In that period, there were 15 Prime Minister's Question Times. The total number of times each Member has appeared is shown in brackets after their name.

Mr. Edward O'Hara (3)

Mr. D. N. Campbell-Savours (2)

Mr. Malcolm Chisholm (2)

Roseanna Cunningham (2)

Mr. Harry Greenway (2)

Mr. John Hutton (2)

Mr. John Marshall (2)

Sir Irvine Patnick (2)

Mr. Dennis Skinner (2).

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many hon. Members have had questions lost since the contract with the Stationery Office commenced. [10728]

Mr. Newton: I have been advised that there has been one incident, on 17 December, when a single batch of eight questions from five hon. Members was lost.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he expects to receive an apology from the Stationery Office about hon. Members' lost questions; and when he expects hon. Members to receive apologies. [10725]

Mr. Newton: I am advised that the chairman of the Stationery Office wrote to the Speaker on 19 December, apologising for the incident. He also sent a letter of apology to four of the five hon. Members whose questions were lost. I understand that the fifth has not yet been identified.

Mr. MacNamara: To ask the Lord President of the Council what assessment he has made of the security of hon. Member's questions at the Stationery Office. [10708]

Mr. Newton: I am advised that a review of the process for dealing with Members' questions is being undertaken by the Stationery Office in consultation with House officials. In the meantime, the photocopying of Members' questions immediately on arrival at the Parliamentary Press has been introduced as a safeguard.

Hon. Members (Swearing In)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Lord President of the Council if arrangement are in hand for hon. Members to take the oath following the next election in accordance with the recommendations in the first report of Session 1995–96 on proceeding at the start of Parliament [HC 386] of the Procedure Committee. [11475]

Mr. Newton: As I explained to the House on 11 July 1996 Official Report, column 636, this is a matter for Madam Speaker.

TREASURY

Administration Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlie the increase in the provision for gross running costs of civil Departments compared with revised plans as set out in the Red Book paragraph 5.30; and if he will provide a breakdown of the increase by Department, indicating, where possible, executive agencies separately. [8277]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 9 December 1996]: Compared with an estimated 1996–97 outturn of £14,919 million for running costs of civil Departments, the Government's planned expenditure on running costs of £14,736 million in 1999–2000 represents a fall of 7 per cent. in real terms over three years.

The increases in running costs provision for 1997–98 and 1998–99 are more than accounted for by increases on anti-fraud and anti-evasion measures—an additional £760 million of running costs over three years—and on prisons. Additional provision has also been given to the agriculture Departments to fund the continuing package of measures to counter BSE.

The table following compares the Government's plans published in the public expenditure statistical analyses—PESA—1996–97 with new plans for each departmental group. New plans may be subject to further revision before the Government's plans are set out in detail in the 1997 departmental reports, due to be published in March 1997, which will include information on the running costs of executive agencies.

Betting Duty

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much his Department has received in revenue from betting duty in each quarter of each of the last three financial years; [10999]

(2) what estimate he has made of the loss of betting duty as a result of recent cancellations of horse race meetings. [11000]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 January 1997]: The betting duty receipts—that is, general betting duty—for each quarter of the last three financial years are as follows. All figures are £ million.

Quarter	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
1	138	138	120
2	140	137	124
3	122	118	—
4	108	96	—

No estimate has been made of the loss of betting duty as a result of recent cancellations of horse race meetings. There is no duty due in respect of bets made at a racecourse. Off course betting has continued for Irish and other foreign horse racing and for all-weather courses in this country.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel (Safety)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the most recent fire involving a train being used as part of the new emergency procedures in the channel tunnel. [11515]

Mr. Watts: On 19 December 1996, smoke was detected in the heating, ventilation and air conditioning unit of an empty tourist shuttle train on stand-by at a platform on the Folkestone terminal. Kent fire brigade attended and extinguished a small electrical fire.

A second tourist shuttle was immediately prepared for use as a replacement stand-by train.

Roads Programme (Property Purchases)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what property his Department holds for the purposes of the present and previously planned roads programme, indicating (a) the number of houses, (b) the number of other properties and (c) the extent of land holdings; and what was the total amount spent in purchasing the property in each of these categories. [10846]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Andrew Smith, dated 17 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what property his Department holds for the purposes of the present and previously planned roads programme, indicating (a) the number of houses, (b) the number of other properties and (c) the extent of land holdings; and what was the total amount spent in purchasing the property in each of these categories.

The information is not available in the form requested. The Highways Agency's previously planned (pre-November 1995) roads programme required 3,176 properties/plots at a purchase cost of £301.6M. The Highways Agency's present programme will require 1,411 properties/plots at a purchase cost of £119.8M.

The purchase price excludes compensation payable for disturbance, home loss removal expenses and fees, etc. In addition we hold some 700 properties/plots in connection with schemes previously under construction or completed which were not listed in the November 1995 budget announcement as either withdrawn or in the programme. These are needed for operational reasons or are for eventual disposal when vacant. The purchase price of these properties/plot was £61.7M.

Thai-registered Airlines

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what action (a) his Department and (b) the Civil Aviation Authority has taken following the recent announcement by the Federal Aviation Administration relating to Thailand's non-compliance with international aviation standards; [11529]

(2) if he will list those airlines registered in Thailand operating to or from United Kingdom airports. [11528]

Mr. Bowis: Thailand's civil aviation authority has been assessed by the Federal Aviation Administration under its international aviation safety assessment programme as "Category II, Conditional". This means that FAA inspectors found areas that in their opinion did not meet international safety standards, but services by the country's carriers continue to be permitted to the United States under heightened FAA surveillance.

We take FAA assessments into account in deciding whether to ask the Civil Aviation Authority to inspect a particular country's aircraft operating into the United Kingdom. We also take into account whether the country is participating in the International Civil Aviation Organisation's safety oversight programme. Thailand has been assessed by ICAO and we are awaiting the outcome of that mission.

One airline registered in Thailand operates into the United Kingdom. Thai Airways International operates a daily scheduled service into Heathrow: the Department does not currently plan to ask the CAA to ramp check its aircraft but will keep the matter under review.

London Transport Annual Settlement

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he received from chief officers and the board of (a) London Transport and (b) the City of London about the Government's annual settlement for London Transport; what they told him about the effect of the settlement on London Transport's investment programme and existing infrastructure; and if he will make a statement. [11063]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and I meet the chairman and other members of the board of London Transport on a regular basis and discuss this and other matters. No representations have been received from the Corporation of the City of London.

London Underground Power Generation

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his timetable for the privatisation of London Underground power generation facilities; what consultation he has had on this; what guarantees in respect of future investment will be required; and what assurances he expects in respect of its continuing reliability. [11081]

Mr. Bowis: The provision of power supplies to the underground is an operational matter for London Underground. It is currently in negotiation with two short-listed bidders for a project under the private finance initiative which would meet the underground's future power generation and distribution requirements. Reliability of supply and the bidders' investment plans are matters being discussed with the bidders. London Underground hopes soon to decide on its preferred bidder.

London Underground (Consultants)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the consultants, outside organisations and individuals employed by London Underground Ltd., for advice on introducing a private sector element into the (a) organisation, (b) operation and (c) funding of (i) the London underground system and (ii) London Underground Ltd., the duration of their employment and the total cost of their employment in each of the years 1992 to 1997. [11096]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for London Underground Ltd. However I understand that it employs outside parties from time to time to advise on matters including disposals, contracting out and projects under the private finance initiative.

Ms Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the consultants, outside organisations and individuals employed by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies, for advice on introducing a private sector element into the (i) organisation, (ii) operation and (iii) funding of (1) the London underground system and (2) London Underground Ltd., the duration of their employment and the total cost of their employment in each of the years 1992 to 1997. [11097]

Mr. Bowis: The Department has made no such appointments.

Heathrow to London Rail Link

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for a fast rail link between Heathrow and central London other than the Heathrow to Paddington service; what interim station stops are being considered for inclusion; and if he will make a statement. [11013]

Mr. Bowis: BAA has recently announced that it is considering the introduction of a sister service to the Heathrow express, which will operate between St. Pancras and Heathrow. This service would start to operate from 1999 and possible stops being considered include West Hampstead, Ealing Broadway, Hayes and Harlington.

ENVIRONMENT

Absenteeism

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to ensure that incentives aimed at reducing absenteeism do not extend to absenteeism as a result of work-related injuries. [11085]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. My Department has no responsibilities for reducing absenteeism from work. The Health and Safety Executive is, however, constantly looking at ways of reducing work-related injuries.

Opencast Mining (Environmental Effects)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the research carried out by his Department, since January 1994, into possible environmental health problems caused by opencast coal operations indicating (a) the commissioning dates of the investigations, (b) the name of organisations or agencies commissioned to undertake investigations and (c) the expected dates for publication of results; and if he will provide summaries of the investigations undertaken. [11357]

Mr. Gummer: The Departments of Health and Environment commissioned a joint research project on the impact of particulate matter from opencast coal sites on public health in August 1996. The research is being undertaken by the university of Newcastle medical school and the work is expected to be complete in late October 1998. This work is still in its early stages and I will write to the hon. Member with details of what it involves.

SCOTLAND

Private Health Providers

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each health board the names of the private health providers with which they have had contracts, the value of each contract, and the number of patients covered by each contract for (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1995–96. [10967]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not collected centrally on a routine basis.

In response to a request by the hon. Member, the information in the table was obtained specifically from health boards. The further details requested by the hon. Member cannot be provided centrally without risking a breach of patient confidentiality.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have been affected with Newcastle disease in Scotland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11546]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No cases have been recorded in the last five years.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

NHS (Emergency Capacity)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 14 January concerning emergency capacity in the national health service, Official Report, column 130, if he will make a statement on the extent of this capacity indicating the basis on which the amount of such capacity is calculated, and the approximate costs of maintaining spare beds. [11439]

The Deputy Prime Minister: It is the responsibility of health authorities and national health service trusts to ensure that NHS emergency services can meet demand. In the last financial year, over 3.5 million patients received emergency in-patient care in NHS hospitals. Within the context of overall growth in the NHS, we have recently made available additional funding to help meet key service objectives in the current financial year. This funding includes money for intensive care beds and to improve discharge arrangements, thus making extra beds available.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 13, which Departments (a) have implemented and (b) have not implemented their action plans in response to the efficiency unit's report on external consultants. [11440]

Mr. Freeman: Each Department is best placed to provide the most up-to-date account of its progress in implementing the recommendations of the efficiency unit's report; I refer the hon. Gentleman therefore to the answers supplied by Departments to his recent questions about progress on implementation.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 13, if he will make a statement on the assessment made by the efficiency unit of the monitoring of Departments' expenditure on consultants. [11441]

Mr. Freeman: The efficiency unit estimates that ministerial Departments and the Attorney-General's Office spent approximately £510 million on external consultants in 1995–96 at 1996 prices. This figure excludes spending by the Department for Education and Employment. When this latter figure is available, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in, the Library.

Many factors effect the level of departmental spending on consultants and expenditure should not be taken as a sole indicator of the impact of the efficiency unit's scrutiny report, the prime purpose of which was to increase control and accountability and to secure improvements in procurement and project management.

Efficiency Training

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what have been the costs of efficiency training for managers in the civil service and agencies; and how many staff have participated in each of the last five years. [11443]

Mr. Freeman: In line with the civil service White Paper, "Continuity and Change", responsibility for efficiency planning and the training of staff is delegated to Departments. The information requested is not held centrally.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Arts Council

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the appointment of the Public Affairs Officer to the Arts Council of Northern Ireland was made; how many persons applied for the position; in which newspapers the position was advertised; and how many of the applicants were perceived to be (a) Protestants and (b) Roman Catholics. [10780]

Mr. Ancram: The appointment of the public affairs officer with the Arts Council of Northern Ireland was made on 12 May 1995. There were 38 applicants for the post. The vacancy was advertised in the Irish News, Newsletter and Belfast Telegraph. Of the 38 applicants, 21 were perceived to be from the Protestant community, 15 from the Roman Catholic community and two non-determined.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons applied for the position of education and training officer to the Arts Council of Northern Ireland; in which newspapers in (a) the UK and (b) the Republic of Ireland this vacancy was advertised; and how many of the applicants were perceived to be (i) Protestants and (ii) Roman Catholics. [10781]

Mr. Ancram: The post of education and training officer with the Arts Council of Northern Ireland was first advertised in August 1995. Of 18 applicants, only one was considered suitable but declined the appointment. The post was re-advertised in October 1996 and there were 28 applicants.

On both occasions, the vacancy was advertised in the Irish News, Newsletter and Belfast Telegraph. The vacancy was not advertised in any Republic of Ireland newspapers.

Of the 18 applicants in August 1995, five were perceived to be from the Protestant community and 13 from the Roman Catholic community. Of the 28 applicants in October 1996, eight were perceived to be from the Protestant community, 18 from the Roman Catholic community and two non-determined.

Raising School Standards Initiative

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the schools involved in the raising school standards initiative and the criteria by which they were chosen. [10939]

Mr. Ancram: Secondary schools were identified for inclusion in the initiative by means of a performance index, which took account of both the number and level of GCSE and vocational qualifications over the three years 1990–91 to 1992–93. Primary schools were selected for invitation to participate in RSSI on the following basis:

- only those primary schools contributing 10 per cent. or more to the year eight intake of any participating secondary school were considered;
- these primary schools were ranked using a points system based on transfer grades, combined with the proportions of pupils entitled to free school meals;
- where this approach excluded a school which contributed 30 or more to the participating secondary school's year eight intake, this school was selected.

I will write to the hon. Member listing the participating schools.

Teachers (Discretionary Support)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the changes in discretionary support for teachers embarking on courses to obtain additional qualifications, showing the financial allocations. [10985]

Mr. Ancram: As schools' budgets have been given priority, funds will not be available for new applicants for discretionary awards from and including the 1997–98 academic year. Teachers already receiving financial support will continue to have their tuition fees, travelling and subsistence expenses met under the existing terms and conditions.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many recognised outbreaks of Newcastle disease have been recorded on farms in Northern Ireland by area in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11544]

Mr. Ancram: No outbreaks of Newcastle disease were recorded on farms in Northern Ireland in 1992 to 1995. One outbreak was recorded in County Antrim in 1996.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) chickens, (b) turkeys and (c) other birds have been affected by Newcastle disease in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11542]

Mr. Ancram: One outbreak of Newcastle disease occurred in Northern Ireland in 1996, affecting approximately 2,500 chickens. Some 59,000 in-contact chickens were slaughtered during the outbreak.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been affected with Newcastle disease in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11543]

Mr. Ancram: There were no recorded cases of Newcastle disease in humans in Northern Ireland during the last five years.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will (a) place in the Library and (b) circulate to members of the Social Security Committee the draft contract to be issued on 19 December to private sector companies shortlisted for the contractorisation of the Benefits Agency medical services; [10273]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 11 November, Official Report, columns 87–88, if he will place in the Library the statement of service requirements issued on 20 November to companies shortlisted for the contractorisation of the Benefits Agency medical services. [10272]

Mr. Burt: The information requested cannot be provided, as disclosure would prejudice the competitive position of the Department in its negotiations with the shortlisted companies.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if an asylum seeker in receipt of income support is allowed to undertake a full-time course of education or training. [10266]

Mr. Roger Evans: Asylum seekers in receipt of income support are subject to the same rules on study as other recipients. However, an asylum seeker who has been granted refugee status may continue to receive benefit for up to nine months while attending a course for more than 15 hours a week to learn English in order to enable him to gain employment, provided that, on the date the course started, he had been in Great Britain for not more than 12 months.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish data on the spread of income of pensioners on the lowest decile of income and the highest decile of income in 1978–79 and 1994–95. [10743]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table. The figures represent the amount of the spread in income of pensioners between the 25th and the 75th percentile of each of the lowest decile and highest decile of the income distribution.

Inter-quartile range

	1979 £	1994–95 £
Bottom decile	30.40	28.20
Top decile	116.70	205.60

Notes

1.All estimates are £s per week in July 1994 prices, rounded to the nearest £0.10.

2.Data for 1979 are based upon an estimate for the calendar year 1979. The 1994–95 estimate is in respect of that financial year.

3.The estimates refer to all pensioner units. A pensioner unit is defined to be either a single person over state pension age, or a couple where the head, assumed to be the man, is aged over SPA.

4.The measure of spread provided is the inter-quartile range, which is the difference between the 25th percentile and the 75th percentile of an income distribution. This measure is subject to a large degree of statistical variability.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the start-up costs of the information technology system needed to run the jobseeker's allowance payment scheme. [10510]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

£ million

Year	Information Technology Services Agency	Benefits Agency/ Employment Service	Total
1994–95	2,395	0,394	2,789
1995—96	15,385	3,235	18,620
1996–97	7,051	2,239	9,290
Total	24,831	5,868	30,699

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimated annual running costs of the jobseeker's allowance payment scheme. [10511]

Mr. Evans: The information is not yet available. However, it is estimated that the annual costs of administering jobseeker's allowance will be broadly similar to those for the previous benefits, unemployment benefit and income support for unemployed people.

Corporate Date (Access System)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the tendering for the new ACCORD—access to corporate data—information technology system. [10512]

Mr. Burt: The ACCORD project is intended to deliver, through the private finance initiative, a set of services to support the Department's information systems—information technology strategy.

A notice was placed in the supplement to the Official Journal of the European Communities on 7 August 1996. A statement of requirement was issued on 2 October to which six responses were received. Following an evaluation of these responses, an announcement was made on 12 December that three bidders would be taken forward to the next stage.

Following a period of consultation lasting several months, tenders will be invited.

Child Support

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 28 November 1996, Official Report, column 400, if he will place in the Library a copy of the version of the draft regulations to which the comments of the president of the Independent Tribunal Service referred. [11045]

Mr. Roger Evans: I have placed a copy of the draft regulations in the Library.

There were some changes made before laying before the House in order to make the drafting clearer and to correct minor drafting errors, as well as amendments following the consultation with the president of the Independent Tribunal Service and the Council on Tribunals.

Invalidity and Incapacity Benefit (Barrow and Furness)

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were claiming (a) invalidity benefit and (b) incapacity benefit in the Barrow and Furness parliamentary constituency in each year between 1990 and 1996. [11023]

Mr. Burt: The administration of invalidity benefit and incapacity benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Hutton, dated 16 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people were claiming (a) Invalidity Benefit and (b) Incapacity Benefit in the Barrow and Furness Parliamentary Constituency in each year between 1990 and 1996.

The information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are kept for Benefits Agency (BA) Districts and not by Parliamentary Constituencies. The BA District Lancaster and South Cumbria consists of the BA offices at Lancaster, Barrow and Kendal. Statistics are not available broken down by BA Districts for 1990 and 1991.

The available information is shown in the attached table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Number of customers in receipt of invalidity benefit in the benefit agency district Lancaster and South Cumbria

	Number
March 1992	10,633
March 1993	10,961
March 1994	11,513
March 1995	12,076
March 1996	[1]12,469

Figures are provisional and subject to change. Incapacity Benefit replaced Invalidity Benefit on 13 April 1995.

[1] The figure quoted is for Incapacity Benefit cases paid at short term higher rate and long term rate, ie cases from the 29th week of incapacity. This is comparable to Invalidity Benefit.

HEALTH

General Practitioners

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which bodies are responsible for ensuring adequate minimum standards of establishment and functions of deputising services for general practitioners. [10901]

Mr. Malone: Health authorities are responsible for ensuring that general practitioners only use deputising services which are of a satisfactory standard.

NHS Trusts (Patients' Cash)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is given to NHS trusts about cash handed over for safekeeping on admission to the care of the trust. [11243]

Mr. Horam: Guidance on safeguarding patients' property formed part of the national health service executive's model standing financial instructions issued to all NHS trusts in 1994. The guidance sets out the trust's responsibility to provide safe custody for money and other personal property handed in by patients.

Meningitis

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of cases of meningitis in the last three months of 1996; and if he will make a statement. [11064]

Mr. Horam: There were 368 laboratory confirmed reports of meningococcal infection by the Public Health Laboratory Service's meningococcal reference laboratory in the last three months of 1996. The latest mid-year to mid-year data show the number of cases in 1996 are currently running very slightly lower than in 1995:

	PHLS confirmed laboratory reports of meningococcal infection
1 July–22 December 1995	654
1 July–22 December 1996	585

Meningitis remains a rare, but serious, disease with a peak in the number of cases in children under one year and a second smaller peak in late teenagers. High awareness of the disease and parental alertness remain the best general protection which is why information on meningitis is targeted in these areas. Health visitors provide new parents with the Health Education Authority's leaflet, "A Guide to Childhood Immunisations", which includes advice on recognising the signs and symptoms of meningitis. The Department of Health and the National Meningitis Trust collaborated in providing an information leaflet for parents of small children and teenagers. The HEA also produced a leaflet, "Look out for your mate", targeted at students, which has been very widely distributed to colleges and universities. The Chief Medical Officer recently wrote to all doctors giving up-to-date advice on the early diagnosis of suspected cases of meningococcal infection and on the need for antibiotic treatment and urgent referral to hospital.

Tuberculosis and Rickets

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the incidence of (a) tuberculosis and (b) rickets among those aged 0 to 19 years in each health authority area in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11604]

Mr. Horam: Information on the numbers of notifications of tuberculosis is not available in the form requested. The number of notifications to the Office for National Statistics under the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1988 are published by local authority district or by age in the publications, "MB2 Communicable Disease Statistics" annually and "MB2 Infectious Disease Statistics" quarterly. Copies are available in the Library. Total notifications for 0 to 19-year-olds for the last five years are:

Numbers of tuberculosis notifications, excluding chemoprophylaxis, England and Wales, 0 to 19-year-olds

	Tuberculosis notifications
1992	730
1993	785
1994	615
1995	631
1996 (first 39 weeks)	[1]429

The United Kingdom has an excellent record of tuberculosis control and we are determined that this should remain the case through the BCG immunisation programme, treatment of identified cases and screening of their close contacts, screening and treatment for immigrants and active surveillance of tuberculosis.

Rickets is not a notifiable disease and data are not collected centrally. There are anecdotal reports of rickets in the medical literature, but these tend to be associated with extreme diets and insufficient exposure to sunlight. There is no reliable evidence that rickets is on the increase, and some evidence that rickets which used to be prevalent among Asian communities is now rare. The Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy has established an expert sub-group which is considering the nutritional aspects of bone health in the UK population.

Child Malnutrition

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring he has undertaken of the incidence of (a) anaemia, (b) calcium deficiency and (c) vitamin D deficiency among those aged 0 to 19 years. [11605]

Mr. Horam: The nutritional status of 0 to 19-year-olds has been monitored by the Government's programme of nutrition and health surveys.

(a) Anaemia: The prevalence of anaemia has been monitored among young children by the "National Diet and Nutrition Survey of Children Aged 1½–4½ years" published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office in 1995; among those aged 18 to 24 years by the "National Diet and Nutrition Survey of British adults" published by HMSO in 1990, and among 16 to 24 year olds by the 1994 Health Survey for England published by HMSO in 1996. No survey has been analysed in respect of the specific age range 0 to 19 years. The results were as follows:

Prevalence of anaemia (haemoglobin below 11.0g/dl)

	Males[1] Percentage	Females[2] Percentage
NDNS 1½ to 4½ years	7	9
NDNS British Adults 18–24 years	1	6
Health Survey for England 16–24 years	0.2	2.1

[1] 1.0 per cent. below 13g/dl.
[2] 7.7 per cent. below 12g/dl.

(b) Calcium deficiency: There is no clinical condition which can be ascribed to dietary calcium deficiency.

(c) Vitamin D deficiency: The NDNS of Children aged 1½ to 4½ years found adequate vitamin D status in the general population. A review of reports of rickets, prepared for the panel on maternal and child nutrition of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy, found sporadic cases of rickets among specific groups who follow inappropriately rigid diets, but no evidence of rickets among the general population.

Vitamin D status has also been measured in the survey, "Asian infant feeding practice". The report is expected to be published later this year. Both the occurrence of anaemia and vitamin D status will be measured in the "National Diet and Nutrition Survey of Young People aged 4 to 18 years", the report of which is expected in 1999. The prevalence of anaemia among 11 to 15 year olds was measured in the "1995 Health Survey for England" which is expected to be published next month.

Care for the Elderly

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update the estimates set out on 22 May 1995, Official Report, column 406, relating to the average cost of keeping an elderly infirm person in a (a) hospital bed, (b) nursing home and (c) residential care home. [10210]

Mr. Burns: The Department does not collect information on the average cost for the elderly and infirm of a place in a hospital, residential care home or a nursing home, but the Laing and Buisson market survey estimates, on the basis of the latest survey of independent sector homes, the average fees were £333 and £239 per week at August 1995 for nursing homes and residential care homes, respectively. These figures do not include contributions from individuals' income or from public sources.

The average cost of keeping an elderly infirm person in a hospital bed has been estimated by the personal social services research unit in "The Unit Cost of Health and Social Care", 1996, to be £114 per in-patient day, or £798 per week at 1995–96 prices.

In addition, figures on gross expenditure per week by local authorities for each supported resident in residential and nursing homes for the elderly in 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available are given as item UCO2 and UCO3 in table U1 of "Key Indicators of Local Authority Social Services 1996", copies of which are available in the Library.

District Nurses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many district nurses there were per 5,000 people in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement; [9774]

(2) how many district nurses there were in each year since 1979 (a) nationally and (b) by region; and if he will make a statement. [9773]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is shown in the tables.

[1] Between 1979 and 1994 district nurses exclude seniors 1–5. Included are senior nurses 6–8 in district nursing, district nurses, district nurse practical work teachers, holders of dual post (DN/Midwife), bank district nurses and clinical grades C to I in district nursing.

[2] A new classification for non-medical staff was introduced in 1995. Information based on this classification is not directly comparable with earlier years.

[3] Figures for 1979 are not directly comparable with those for later years because of the change in nurses standard working hours in 1980–81 from 40 to 37.5 hours a week.

[4] Figures for south-east Thames, and subsequently to a lesser extent the England totals, should be treated with caution. There was evidence of considerable under recording of occupation codes used to allocate staff to a particular area of work in the South-east Thames region in 1989 and several years prior to this.
[5] The decrease in practice nurses in 1994 is due to a non-submission of complete data relating to fundholding practices for certain FHSAs.

Personal Social Services

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlay the reduction in the personal social services standard spending assessment for Buckinghamshire county council between 1996–97 and 1997–98. [10681]

Mr. Burns: The use of more recent data in the indicators used to calculate the standard spending assessment was the primary cause of a very small reduction in the funding for personal social services in Buckinghamshire county council between 1996–97 and 1997–98. The revised area cost adjustment formula was the main factor. However, the total combined resources provided for social services in Buckinghamshire and Milton Keynes increased by £4,748 million from funding provided in 1996–97.

Operations

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled in (a) each district health authority and (b) each region on the day of or day after admission to hospital; and how many of those patients were not readmitted within a month, for the second quarter of 1996. [11676]

Mr. Horam: The information will be placed in the Library shortly.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) heart bypass operations, (b) hip replacements, (c) knee replacements and (d) cataract operations were carried out by the national health service in the latest year for which figures are available; and what were the equivalent figures in 1979. [11258]

Mr. Horam: The information is as follows:

Primary operations: estimated number of ordinary admissions and day cases combined, NHS hospitals, England

Operation	1979 discharges and deaths	1994–95 finished consultant episodes
Coronary artery by-pass operations[1]	n/a	22,192

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were carried out by the national health service in the latest year for which figures are available; and what was the equivalent figure in 1979. [11261]

Mr. Horam: The number of finished consultant episodes where an operation was performed was 5,110,182 in 1994–95. In 1979 the estimated number of spells on a comparable basis where an operation was performed was 2,458,720.

Cervical and Breast Cancer Screening

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women received tests for (a) cancer of the cervix and (b) breast cancer, in the latest year for which figures are available; and what were the equivalent figures in 1979. [11257]

Mr. Horam: A total of 3.9 million women were tested in 1995–96 for cervical cancer. There is no comparable figure for 1979. The number of cervical smears examined by laboratories in 1979 was 2.6 million compared with 4.6 million in 1995–96. The earliest data available on breast cancer screening show that in 1991–92 0.9 million women were screened. In 1995–96 1.0 million women were screened.

NHS Expenditure

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the figures for expenditure on the national health service for (a) 1978–79, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [11259]

Mr. Horam: The information is as follows:

National health service total net–ie Government-expenditure (£ million, cash)

	£ million
1978–79	6,273
1996–97 (estimated outturn)	33,179
1997–98 (plan)	34,374

Patient Statistics

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were treated by the national health service in the latest year for which figures are available; and what was the equivalent figure in 1979. [11260]

Mr. Horam: On a comparative basis, there were 6.6 million finished consultant episodes in all hospital specialties in England in the calendar year 1979, compared with 11.2 million in 1995—96.

Manchester Health Authority

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the total cost of the consultation process regarding the proposals for the new children's hospital provision for the Manchester area; and from which budget this sum was taken; [11437]

(2) what has been the additional percentage pay increases awarded to the Manchester health authority management in the current year relative to the average awards made by trusts in the area. [11448]

Mr. Horam: A total of £110,000 was set aside from Manchester health authority's consultation budget, which is less than 4p per head of population.

A pay award to the health authority's managers has yet to be announced, but is expected to be broadly in line with other NHS staff in the city. The pay offers made so far to staff in the Manchester area range from 2 to 2.75 per cent., including the national pay increase of 2 per cent. from 1 April 1996 with provision for local negotiations for further increases.

Opencast Coal Mines (Health Hazards)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the research carried out by his Department, since January 1994, into possible environmental health problems caused by opencast coal operations, indicating (a) the commissioning dates of the investigations, (b) the name of organisations or agencies commissioned to undertake investigations and (c) the expected dates for publication of results; and if he will provide summaries of the investigations undertaken. [11358]

Mr. Horam: The Departments of Health and of the Environment commissioned a joint research project on the impact of particulate matter from opencast coal sites on public health in August 1996. The research is being undertaken by the University of Newcastle medical school and the work is expected to be complete in late October 1998. This work is still in its early stages. I will write to the hon. Member with details of what it involves.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the possible transfer of Newcastle disease between poultry and other birds and humans; and if he will make a statement. [11552]

Mr. Horam: The risk of transmission of Newcastle disease to humans is low, even when handling infected birds. There is no risk of human infection from eating poultry meat.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been affected by Newcastle disease in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11549]

Mr. Horam: No human cases of Newcastle disease have been reported to the Public Health Laboratory Service communicable disease surveillance centre in the last five years.

WALES

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the £12.8 milllion included in his Department's 1996–97 expenditure on the national health service in Wales as a repayment by national health service trusts to his Department. [9959]

Mr. Hague: The £12.8 milllion represents the public expenditure cover necessary to enable the trusts to make repayments which effectively cancel out a liability from previous years.

Meningitis

Mr. John Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 338, if his Department assesses the cases of meningitis diagnosed on (a) 16 October, (b) 16 November and (c) 28 November to be unrelated. [9870]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Evidence which became available on 5 December indicates that the three cases were not unrelated.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what have been the objectives of the Welsh Development Agency's redundancy policy with particular reference to the restructuring exercise undertaken since 1994. [11202]

Mr. Hague: This is an operational matter for the agency. I have asked the acting chief executive to write to the hon. Member with details. I shall arrange for a copy of the reply to be placed in the Library of the House.

Water Quality

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has had with the chairman of the Wales committee of the Environment Agency concerning the date for setting water quality objectives for (a) immersion sports, (b) basic aquatic amenities and (c) fisheries. [11608]

Mr. Hague: None. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 7 February 1995, Official Report, column 135, the Government's intention to test the operation of statutory water quality objectives in a limited number of pilot catchments. I am considering the Environment Agency's proposals for objectives for the Cleddau river catchment in Pembrokeshire which was one of those selected for the trial.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many recognised outbreaks of Newcastle disease have been recorded on farms in Wales by area in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [11558]

(2) how many (a) chickens, (b) turkeys and (c) other birds have been affected by Newcastle disease in Wales in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11556]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No outbreaks of Newcastle disease have been recorded in Wales in the last five years.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have been affected with Newcastle disease in Wales in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11557]

Mr. Jones: There have been no cases of Newcastle disease in humans in Wales reported to the public health laboratory service communicable disease surveillance centre in the last five years.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who will own the APCOA car park and Eastern avenue eastbound on-slip road being constructed under the private finance initiative at the end of the operating lease period. [11609]

Mr. Hague: Ownership of the car park will transfer to the University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS Trust at the end of 20 years. The on-slip road will remain in the ownership of the trust, with the PFI partner funding the capital costs and a maintenance contract with Cardiff county council under a standard highways agreement for 20 years.

Cancer Treatment Centre, Bodelwyddan

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors underlie the size of the increase in the prospective annual revenue costs of the north Wales regional cancer treatment centre at Ysbyty Glan Clwyd, Bodelwyddan. [11302]

Mr. Hague: The increase in revenue costs from £4.3 million to £5.1 million per annum comprise an increase in capital charges in line with the increase in the capital costs to build and equip the centre, and the addition of a further radio iodine treatment facility.

Workshop on GP Work Force Planning

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the workshop on GP work force planning which took place on 15 November 1996; if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the proposals emanating from the workshop and (b) the summary of the questionnaire on GP retirement intentions. [11303]

Mr. Hague: A report of the workshop is being drafted, and a copy will be placed in the Library upon completion.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from the Land Authority for Wales concerning the non-determination of its planning application for a bird reserve to compensate for the loss of wader winter feeding grounds arising from the Cardiff bay barrage; and if he will make a statement. [11304]

Mr. Hague: None. The Land Authority for Wales issued a press notice on 14 January, indicating its intention of appealing to me against Newport borough council's non-determination of the planning application for a wildlife reserve on the Gwent levels. The Planning Inspectorate will be advising me on the appropriate action once the appeal is received.

Information Technology

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who will own the information technology equipment used in his Department's OSIRIS office automation project at the end of the operating lease period. [11610]

Mr. Hague: The OSIRIS contract is let under the private finance initiative and is not a leasing arrangement. Ownership of the equipment after the end of the contract period will rest with Siemens Business Services. The Welsh Office, and any subsequent contractor, has an option to buy the equipment at that time at a price which reflects the fair market value of the assets.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Union

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the number of articles that permit derogations from the obligation for ever closer union in all matters within the scope of each of the respective treaties of the European Union. [10900]

Mr. David Davis: The treaty on European Union, like the original treaty of Rome, calls for an ever-closer union "among the peoples of Europe", not among the states or their Governments. This aspiration for strengthened co-operation and friendship is fully shared by the Government. Since it does not impose any legal obligation on the member states of the European Union, the question of derogations does not arise.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of which countries, currently holding nuclear weapons, are likely to develop a new generation of nuclear weapons. [9671]

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 15 January 1997]: All the nuclear weapon states have signed the comprehensive test ban treaty, which will prohibit any nuclear weapon test explosion and any other nuclear explosion, and thus constrain the development and qualitative improvement of nuclear weapons and end the development of advanced new types of nuclear weapons.

EU Legislative Instruments

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the draft and adopted legislative instruments which have been solely based on the articles of the social agreement attached to the social protocol of the treaty on European Union, indicating for each (a) the document numbers and titles, (b) the dates of publication, progress or adoption, (c) the articles and paragraphs of the agreement cited as their base and (d) the opinions or amendments made by the European Parliament; and if he will make a statement on the nature and objectives of further legislation arising from the agreement of which he has received notification and which has not yet been formally presented to the Council of Ministers. [10878]

Mr. David Davis [holding reply of 15 January, 1997]: The following legislation is proposed, or has been adopted, on the basis of the agreement on social policy attached to protocol 14 of the Treaty of European Union:

European Works Council

a) Council directive 94/45/EC on the establishment of a European Works Council or a procedure in Community-scale undertakings and Community-scale groups of undertakings for the purposes of informing and consulting employees.

b) Adopted by the Council on 22 September 1994.

c) Adopted on the basis of article 2(2) of the agreement on social policy.

d) European Parliament opinion delivered on 4 May 1994; the European Parliament's second reading on 15 September 1994 suggested eight amendments, of which three were agreed by the Council.

Parental Leave

a) Council directive 96/34/EC on the framework agreement on parental leave concluded by Union of Industrial and Employer Confederation of Europe, European Centre of Public Enterprise and the European Trade Unions Congress.

b) Adopted by the Council on 3 June 1996.

c) Adopted on the basis of article 4(2) of the agreement on social policy.

d) European Parliament informed of the proposal.

Burden of Proof

a) Commission proposal for a Council directive on the burden of proof in cases of discrimination based on sex. Council document no. 6703/88; COM(96) 340 Final.

b) Proposal under discussion in the Council.

c) Proposed on the basis of article 2(2) of the agreement on social policy.

d) The opinion of the European Parliament is awaited.

The Commission has initiated consultations with the social partners under the terms of article 4 of the agreement on social policy as to whether there should be legislation in the following two areas:

the provision of equal statutory rights for atypical workers with their full-time equivalents.

the application to companies with more than 50 employees of the principles of information and consultation of workers already enshrined in the European Works Council Directive.

Government Employees Abroad

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidelines are provided to British Government employees working in, or visiting, foreign countries in respect of behaviour towards children which under United Kingdom law would be exploitative or abusive with particular reference to countries where local legislation differs substantially from that in the United Kingdom. [11203]

Mr. Hanley: There are no specific guidelines in respect of behaviour towards children, but all employees of this Department have a duty to respect British law and, when overseas, local laws. The general principles of conduct are set out in diplomatic service regulations, the civil service management code and in contracts of employment.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the current guidelines provided to British Government employees working in or visiting foreign countries in respect of behaviour towards children which under United Kingdom law would be exploitative or abusive; and if he will make a statement. [11204]

Mr. Hanley: There are no specific guidelines in respect of behaviour towards children; but the general principles governing the conduct of employees of this Department accord with the central framework of rules and principles of conduct set out in the civil service management code. These general principles are also set out in the diplomatic service code of ethics which was introduced on 1 January 1996.

Bougossa Family

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken to secure the extradition of Rhaha Bougossa from Tunisia; and if he will make a statement. [11159]

Mr. Hanley: The absence of an extradition treaty between the UK and Tunisia precludes action to extradite Mr. Rhaha Bougossa from Tunisia. However, the British embassy in Tunisia has assisted Mr. Bougossa's ex-wife to begin proceedings to pursue through the Tunisian courts her case to obtain custody of her children.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the abduction to Tunisia of British-born twins Nathan and Adam Bougossa; what action he has taken to date to seek their return to their natural mother in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [11158]

Dr. Liam Fox: We have received representations from Pamela Hamilton, Glenys Kinnock Member of the European Parliament, the hon. Member for East Berkshire (Mr. MacKay) and Mary Banotti, Member of the European Parliament. Our embassy visited the children, helped Mrs. Hamilton to meet senior officials and to lobby the Tunisian President. It also helped her engage solicitors who are trying to obtain a custody order and to arrange further access.

China

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of China regarding Ngaweng Chephel since he was sentenced; and if he will make a statement. [11091]

Mr. Hanley: The Chinese authorities are well aware of our concern about the treatment of individuals in Tibet. The sentencing to 18 years imprisonment of Ngawang Chcephel was discussed in detail at a recent meeting with our EU partners, and we are now considering with them what action to take.

Burma

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice his Department gave to British Airways before the company began operating tours in Burma. [11172]

Dr. Liam Fox: I understand that British Airways does not operate tours in Burma, but that British Airways Holidays does. The latter did not consult the Foreign and Commonwealth Office before starting operations.

Hong Kong (Vietnamese Boat People)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Vietnamese boat people are currently in detention camps in Hong Kong; if the governor will exercise discretionary compassionate powers enabling them to remain in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement. [11062]

Mr. Hanley: As of 16 January this year, 5,836 Vietnamese migrants were held in detention centres in Hong Kong compared with 20,225 on 1 January 1996.

Hong Kong is working to implement the internationally agreed comprehensive plan of action which provides for the return to Vietnam of all Vietnamese asylum seekers who have been determined to be non-refugees. It remains an important objective of the British and Hong Kong Governments to complete that repatriation process as soon as possible.

Irish Republic (Agreements)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to require the name, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, to be utilised in both his and the Irish Republic's copy of agreements he proposes to sign with that country; and if he will make a statement. [11198]

Mr. Rifkind: No. The practice established for signing agreements between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland does not prejudice the status of Northern Ireland as part of the United Kingdom.

Caribbean Dependent Territories

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for the future constitutional relationship between Her Majesty's Government and the five remaining Caribbean dependent territories; and if he will make a statement. [9906]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Harborough (Mr. Garnier) on 18 December, columns 676–77.

Government Communications Headquarters, Cheltenham

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 9 December 1996, Official Report, column 21, on the relocation of GCHQ, if he will supply the full terms of reference of the study into future accommodation, saying whether these exclude the relocation of any activities currently provided on the Cheltenham sites to (a) new and (b) existing sites outside Cheltenham. [11297]

Mr. Rifkind: The terms of reference of the study team are to assess GCHQ's future requirements for accommodation and related services to support its Cheltenham-based personnel, and the issues associated with achieving single site working. The study is intended to lead to a decision on the feasibility and scope of potential private finance initiative solutions to these requirements. Assuming that a single site solution were feasible, one which involved relocation of the Cheltenham-based personnel outside Gloucestershire is unlikely to be justifiable on economic grounds.

Argentina

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of his talks with Mr. Guido Di Tella and the Argentine delegation at Chevening on 11 and 12 January. [11450]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The talks at Chevening on 10 and 11 January covered UK-Argentine relations, including the Falklands. The discussions were held on the basis that the UK is not prepared to transfer or share sovereignty over the Falklands. We reiterated that this will remain the UK position. It was agreed that there should be early resumption of full negotiations for a fisheries agreement covering all aspects of the south Atlantic.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many personalised number plates there are in the Government car pool; and if he will list them. [11239]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of its framework document to the Security Facilities Executive under its chief executive, Mr. John King. The agency is therefore responding to the question.

Letter from John King to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 17 January 1997:

I have been asked by Mr. Freeman, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (who has Ministerial responsibility for the Government Car Service (GCS)), to provide you with a response to your Parliamentary Question concerning the use of personalised number plates by the Government Car Service. I am the Chief Executive of the Agency with operational responsibility for the GCS.

I can confirm that the Government Car Service does not have any number plates which are personalised to individual users or to the GCS itself.

We do however have one number plate which does not include a letter indicating the cars year of registration. This is used on a 15 year old Daimler Limousine which operates as part of the pool fleet. It is the only Limousine on the fleet.

TREASURY

Labour Statistics

Dr. Howells: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the methodology used by his Department to calculate labour force statistics. [9889]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Kim Howells, dated 20 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) to your recent question asking for a statement on the methodology used to calculate labour force statistics.

The main official sources of labour market statistics are the Labour Force Survey (LFS), the Workforce in Employment (WiE) figures and the monthly unemployment claimant count. All these are published by the ONS.

The LFS is a quarterly household survey collecting information from individuals on a wide range of labour market issues (e.g. employment, unemployment, training job-search methods). The LFS uses the International Labour Organisation (ILO) definitions of labour market statuses, including unemployment, which are suitable for international comparison. A description of the LFS was published in the October 1992 Employment Gazette (page 483).

The other regular source of employment data is the WiE series. This is a count of jobs based mainly on a survey of employers. A comparison of the LFS and WiE employment figures and methodologies was published in the January 1996 edition of Labour Market Trends (page 19).

The other major source of unemployment data is the monthly administrative count of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. This is dependent on rules relating to benefit entitlement and is not suitable for international comparisons. The methodologies for both the claimant count and the LFS ILO unemployment measure are described and compared in the booklet How Exactly is Unemployment Measured?.

The Government's policy on the collection and presentation of labour market statistics is set out in its Response to the Third Report from the Employment Committee Session 1995–96: Unemployment and Employment Statistics (30 October 1996).

Copies of all the above publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

VAT

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will personally sign future explanatory memoranda supplied to the Vote Office accompanying documents deposited there by Her Majesty's Government concerning changes in the system of value added taxes from within the European Community. [10809]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. Explanatory memoranda reflect the Chancellor's policy but are sometimes signed by junior Ministers within their own area of responsibility.

Construction Industry

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will reconcile the figures published by (a) the Office for National Statistics and (b) the Department of the Environment for the number of people employed in the construction industry; and what assessment he has made of the increase in productivity in the construction industry over the last 10 years. [11031]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Office for National Statistics and the Department of the Environment expect to reconcile the figures by the end of 1997.

The index of output per person employed is published by ONS in "Labour Market Trends". The index uses value added data from DOE and employment data from the ONS work force in employment series. The index increased by 16.4 per cent. in the 10 years to the third quarter of 1996.

Exchange and Trading Systems and Credit Unions

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make an assessment of the (a) number, (b) distribution and (c) benefits of (i) local exchange and trading systems and (ii) credit unions in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [10534]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 16 January 1997]: Information about the number and distribution of local exchange and trading systems is not held centrally.

As for credit unions, 554 are currently registered under the Credit Unions Act 1979.

This distribution is:

England: 408

North: 80

North West: 118

Yorks and Humberside: 61

East Midlands: 12

West Midlands: 57

South West: 10

South East: 62

East Anglia: 8

Scotland: 113

Wales: 33.

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11415]

Mrs. Angela Knight: None.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Land

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will list the (a) total area of land administered by the Church Commissioners, (b) amount assessed as agricultural land, (c) amount of land let for the purpose of farming and (d) total number of tenant farmers; and if he will make a statement. [10519]

Mr. Alison: The commissioners administer land for investment in agricultural, residential and commercial property and, in addition, small areas occupied by bishops' residences. Statistics of total area are available only for agricultural land. As at 31 December 1995, the latest date for which figures are available, the commissioners owned 55,518 hectares—137,185 acres—of agricultural land; 52,788 hectares—130,438 acres—were let for the purpose of farming. For the purpose of calculating only the number of tenant farmers, the commissioners define a farm as an area of land over 20 hectares—50 acres. As at 31 December 1995, there were 371 tenanted farms.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11600]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Ministers of the Crown are able to make use of the child care facilities provided by the Department.

EC Gas Directive

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress was made towards agreeing a European directive on gas liberalisation at the EU Energy Council of Minsters meeting on 3 December; and if he will make a statement. [10823]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 9 December, Official Report, column 30 and the hon. Member for Blaneau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 11 December, Official Report, column 274.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what conclusions his Department has drawn from the Grant Thornton 1996 European business survey regarding (a) the percentage of United Kingdom SME which export, (b) the figures in each European Union country and (c) the European Union average. [11229]

Mr. Page: I welcome the survey's findings that as many as 45 per cent. of United Kingdom SMEs export, and that the share is significantly higher in only six other European Union countries. SMEs clearly make an important contribution to Britain's position as the world's fifth largest trading nation.

Centre for Ecology and Hydrology

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been spent to date on the prior options review of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology; and from which budget these sums were paid. [11098]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 13 January, Official Report, columns 133–34.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees include employees of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology as representatives of UK interests; and how many of these employees are leading the UK team on their committee; [11100]

(2) how many (a) United Kingdom, (b) European and (c) international committees are chaired by employees of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology. [11101]

Mr. Taylor: The staff at the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology are employed by the Natural Environment Research Council. The prior options process is designed to ensure that the interests of the United Kingdom are best served by these bodies. In most cases, membership in fact reflects the professional or personal qualifications of the individual. However, information on committee membership is set out in the table.

	Chair/President	Members
United Kingdom	4	40
European	1	9
International	3	24

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the expected future costs of the prior options review of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology; and from which budget these sums will be paid. [11099]

Mr. Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 13 January, Official Report, columns 136–37.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Inmates (Prosecutions)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been of prison inmates during the past 12 months; what were the principal offences for which they were prosecuted; and if he will make a statement. [9937]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not available centrally.

Prisoners (Custody Costs)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average cost of custody per inmate month in adult prisons in the last year for which figures are available. [10922]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 20 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the average cost of the custody per prisoner month in adult prisons in the last year for which figures are available.

The average net operating cost per prisoner per month in adult male prisons in 1995–96 was £1,776. This figure includes establishments which may contain facilities for some young offenders and female prisoners. It excludes all female establishments, most of which may contain both adults and young offenders.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average cost of custody per inmate month in (a) open and (b) closed youth establishments in the last year for which figures are available. [10923]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 20 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the average cost of custody per prisoner month in a) open and b) closed youth establishments in the last year for which figures are available.

The average net operating cost per prisoner per month in open youth establishments in 1995–96 was £2,071 and in closed youth establishments it was £1,730. The figure for closed establishments includes remand centres. These figures exclude all female establishments, most of which may contain both adults and young offenders.

Non-custodial Sentences (Costs)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average monthly cost of supervision under the Children and Young Persons Acts for the last year for which figures are available; [10925]

(2) what was the average monthly cost of a supervision order combined with intensive, intermediate treatment or specified activities in the last year for which figures are available; [10926]

(4) what was the average monthly cost of a community service order in the last year for which figures are available. [10930]

Mr. Sackville: Information on monthly unit costs collated from probation service returns is given in the following table:

Estimated monthly cost per case supervised by the probation service in England and Wales, by type of order, 1995–96

	£ per case Cost
Supervision order under the Children and Young Persons Act 1969	180
Probation Order	190
Community service order	140

The figure for supervision orders relates to work by the probation service, and does not cover work by social services departments. Information on supervision orders with an additional requirement is not identified separately.

Bail Support Schemes (Costs)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average monthly cost of bail support schemes in the last year for which figures are available. [10928]

Mr. Sackville: Bail support schemes, which vary widely in scope and coverage, are organised and funded locally by area probation services and social services. No information is held centrally about their cost.

Fire Service College

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the consideration given to health and safety at work issues at the Fire Service College. [11231]

Mr. Sackville : We are satisfied with the consideration given to health and safety at work issues at the Fire Service College. Responsibility for these matters rests with the college management, but the arrangements are monitored by professionally qualified Home Office health and safety officers, Health and Safety Executive inspectors and local authority environmental health officers.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently held in Her Majesty's prison establishments; and how many of them are accused of committing a crime. [11611]

Mr. Kirkhope: As at 11 December 1996, the latest date for which information is available, 292 persons who had sought asylum were detained in Prison Service establishments solely under Immigration Act powers. In addition to these, a further 121 asylum seekers were detained in prisons under powers other than, or in conjunction with, those contained in the Immigration Act 1971. Information on the number of these persons who are being held on criminal charges, as opposed to those serving a court imposed sentence, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Year Against Racism

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has received in relation to the EC's Year Against Racism, and from whom. [11213]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Department has received many inquiries of many different kinds about aspects of the European year from a wide range of organisations and individuals and has established a database of several hundred names.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives are planned as the United Kingdom's contribution to the European Year Against Racism. [11211]

Mr. Kirkhope: The first major event of the year will take place on 28 January, when the Secretary of State for Employment and Education and Sir Herman Ouseley, the chairman of the Commission for Racial Equality, will be jointly hosting a conference to promote the business case for race equality. We shall then be launching the year formally in February. Other activities are being planned throughout the year, both by Government and by a wide range of other organisations. These are being collated into a calendar of events which will be widely disseminated in due course.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department is the lead Department for the United Kingdom's contribution to the EC's 1997 Year Against Racism. [11214]

Mr. Kirkhope: Yes.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations his Department has held with groups and organisations in the voluntary sector, and with local authority associations about the European Year Against Racism. [11210]

Mr. Kirkhope: In addition to informal contacts, we have set up a national co-ordinating committee which I am chairing personally. The committee met for the first time on 2 December and meets again on 26 February. The following organisations have been invited on to the committee: the Commission for Racial Equality; Association of County Councils; Association of District Councils; Association of Metropolitan Authorities; British Phonographic Industry; Confederation of British Industry; Convention of Scottish Local Authorities; Interfaith Network; Race for Opportunity; Runnymede Trust; SIA; Trades Union Congress; training and enterprise councils; Welsh Local Government Association; Home Office; Department for Education and Employment; Department of Health; Department of the Environment; and Northern Ireland Office. Lady Flather, the United Kingdom member of the European Union Consultative Committee on Racism and Xenophobia, is also a member of the committee.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information his Department has made available with regard to the activities surrounding the EC's designation of 1997 as a Year Against Racism; and what sums have been set aside for such activity. [11212]

Mr. Kirkhope: I am pleased to say that the European year has generated an enormous amount of interest in the United Kingdom and my Department has responded to a large number of inquiries. We have also disseminated widely the newsletter produced by the European Commission. We are providing specific funding to the Commission for Racial Equality to run a helpline and information service for the year and the first United Kingdom newsletter will be issued very shortly to the lists of contacts collated by the Home Office and the Commission for Racial Equality.

In addition, Government Departments will mark the year in appropriate ways, although no specific central budget has been set aside for this purpose.

The European Commission has set aside a budget of 4.7 million ecu to stimulate action and involvement in the year. We expect the Commission to announce details shortly of how organisations in member states can apply for this funding.

Data Protection (Registration Fees)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates he has made of the fees likely to be received from applicants for registration under the Data Protection Act 1984 in the next three financial years; and what plans he has to transform the registration fee into a tax on data users. [11238]

Mr. Sackville: The current estimates are:

Financial Years	£ million
1997–98	4.4
1998–99	6.5
1999–2000	4.9

The fee has been set at a level which will ensure that the full costs of the Data Protection Registrar's activities, since the exception of her office, are met on an accruals accounting basis. Fee income for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 may be affected by changes to the registration arrangements with the implementation by October 1998 of the European Community directive on data protection. We have not yet decided the form of the new arrangements.

Probation Service

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of expenditure in the current financial year on the probation service in (a) England and Wales and (b) Wales; and if he will express this expenditure as a percentage of expenditure on police and prisons. [11017]

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is set out in the table:

	England and Wales	Wales
Current estimate of expenditure on probation service 1996–97	£350.2 million	£18.1 million
As percentage of estimated expenditure on police	9.9 per cent.	10.4 per cent.
As percentage of estimated expenditure on prisons	21.3 per cent.	[1] —

[1] Separate figures for expenditure on the Prison Service in Wales are not kept.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the expenditure of the probation service in each of the counties of Wales since 1992, indicating the annual percentage increases or decreases on the previous year's expenditure. [11019]

Mr. Sackville: Net specified expenditure by probation areas in Wales between 1992–93 and 1995–96, and year-on-year percentage changes are given in the table. The probation areas correspond with the pre-April 1996 counties, with the exception of north Wales, which comprises the former counties of Clwyd and Gwynedd.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what national standards or criteria are currently in force in determining the average case load of probation officers (a) dealing with community service orders, (b) dealing with offenders in custody and (c) dealing with supervision orders. [11021]

Mr. Sackville: Decisions on allocation of case load to make best use of available staff resources are matters for individual probation committees, having regard to local circumstances; and no national standards or criteria have been issued.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the percentage change in expenditure upon the probation service in England and Wales since 1992; and what are the equivalent figures for the police and prison services. [11018]

Mr. Sackville: Central Government support for the probation service in England and Wales, current and capital, between 1992–93 and 1995–96 increased by 9.6 per cent. The equivalent figures for the police and the Prison Service are 19.1 per cent. and 3.5 per cent. respectively.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of probation officers currently dealing directly with cases in each of the counties of Wales; and what assessment he has made of the change in the number of officers following the proposed budgets for 1997–98. [11020]

Mr. Sackville: The latest available published figures for the numbers of probation officers and senior probation officers[1] employed by probation committees in Wales at 30 June 1996 are given in the table.

It is for individual probation committees to determine their spending priorities, including staff numbers, in the light of the expenditure limits implied by the level of their grant support in 1997–98.

Baboons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many project licence applications for the use of wild-caught baboons have been approved by the Animal Procedures Committee since 1994 for research; what checks were made to ensure that these animals did not suffer unduly during trapping and transport to the United Kingdom; and what was the country of origin of these animals. [11169]

Mr. Sackville: Since the start of 1994, three project licences authorising the use of wild-caught baboons have been approved by the Animal Procedures Committee.

We announced in 1995 a ban on the use of wild-caught non-human primates unless specific and exceptional justification could be made. Details of the trapping, housing and transport arrangements for any holding centres must now be submitted to the Home Office before animals acquired from these sources can be used in regulated procedures.

All the animals originated in Kenya. Following a visit by one of the animals (scientific procedures) inspectors to the holding centre concerned, many further application to use animals acquired from this source will not be considered until adequate improvements have been made to the facilities.

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11416]

Mr. Howard: None.

ENVIRONMENT

Health and Safety (Co-Steel)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many Health and Safety Executive inspectors have visited Co-Steel to speak to employees without management present since August 1996. [11083]

Sir Paul Beresford: An HSE inspector who made three visits to investigate a fatal accident which occurred on 28 September 1996 interviewed several employees without management being present. An HSE inspector who carried out an inspection on 5 December 1996 had a discussion with two employees without management being present.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to initiate an investigation into safety procedures at Co-Steel, following the withdrawal of the British Safety Council's safety award. [11082]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Executive carried out an inspection of Co-Steel Sheerness plc in May 1996 and were generally satisfied with the company's health and safety arrangements. However HSE is currently examining the arrangements for complying with the reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995.

Health and Safety

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which elected workers representatives have access to documents relevant to workplace health and safety in derecognised workplaces. [11084]

Sir Paul Beresford: Under the Health and Safety (Consultation with Employees) Regulations 1996, employers who choose to consult their employees via elected representatives are required to provide the representatives with the information necessary to carry out their functions. Employers must let workers representatives see the records of work-related injuries, diseases and dangerous occurrences which relate to the representatives' responsibilities.

Derelict Land Grant (Corby)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was paid in derelict land grant to Corby district borough council in each year since 1979. [11068]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information about expenditure from 1979–80 to 1994–94 was given in my answer of 26 April 1995, Official Report, columns 530–31. English Partnerships paid £2,148,392 from its land reclamation programme in 1995–96. There have been no payments as yet in the current financial year, but English Partnerships expects to make a payment of £193,000.

Landlords (Gas Appliance Safety)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to ensure that landlords comply with the amendment made to regulation 35 of the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994 by the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) (Amendment) (No. 2) Regulations 1996: and if he will make a statement. [10952]

Sir Paul Beresford: Gas safety publicity is an important plank in the Health and Safety Commission's strategy for promoting compliance by duty holders with gas safety legislation. The duties enjoined on relevant landlords by the second amendment to the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994, as amended, are the primary focus of the commission's current gas-related carbon monoxide poisoning publicity campaign.

Enforcement of the 1994 regulations is a priority activity for the Health and Safety Executive. There was more than a tenfold increase in formal enforcement action against landlords for breaches of regulation 35A in 1995–96 compared with 1994–95. Enforcement of the 1994 regulations, including the second amendment, will continue to be a priority activity for the HSE.

Telecommunications Masts

Sir Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce measures to ensure (a) that the direction of all telecommunications masts is properly controlled and (b) that numbers are kept to the practical minimum in (i) Dorset and (ii) the United Kingdom. [11581]

Sir Paul Beresford: Controls over the erection of telecommunications masts are already in place. Masts over 15 m in height require a full application for planning permission wherever they are located, as do all masts in specified protected areas. Outside these areas, licensed telecommunications operators have the right to erect masts up to 15 m in height, subject to a prior approval procedure operated by local planning authorities under the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995. To help minimise the number of masts, our planning policy guidance encourages mast sharing wherever practicable and licences issued under the Telecommunications Act require operators to consider this. These controls apply to England and Wales. Other controls are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right. hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Ancient Hedgerows

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the implications of the judgment in Hull county court by Judge Cracknell concerning the preservation of ancient hedgerows. [11424]

Mr. Clappison: In the case referred to, Mr Colin Seymour and the Yorkshire Wildlife Trust obtained from Hull county court a declaration that Flamborough parish council is bound for ever by the Flamborough Inclosures Act 1765, and subsequent award under it, to maintain a particular hedge that is owned by the council. The judge heard only one side of the argument. However, his judgment illustrates that obligations arising under Inclosure Acts and awards may still be enforceable; and that, in appropriate circumstances, the court may find that a local resident has locus standi to challenge the failure of a local authority to perform them. As he pointed out, the outcome depended on the wording of the particular Inclosure Act and award, and others may be expressed differently. It would therefore be wrong to read too much into this case.

Radioactive Waste (Disposal)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received a copy of the memorandum by John Holmes of the Nirex science department, dated 10 December 1996, concerning the outstanding scientific matters that need attention in regard to the rock characterisation facility and proposals for the disposal of radioactive wastes. [11801]

Mr. Clappison: Yes.

Stockton City Challenge

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish his decision on the public inquiry into the Stockton city challenge scheme for the redevelopment of Stockton high street. [11871]

Sir Paul Beresford: Good progress is being made in considering the inspector's report and a significant amount of post-inquiry correspondence. Some complex issues are involved which need careful consideration, and the decision will be issued as soon as it is practicable to do so.

Christ the King School

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will (a) make a statement on and (b) announce a decision on, the application referred to him by Spelthorne borough council to divert a footpath currently running through the playground of Christ the King school, Stanwell. [10916]

Sir Paul Beresford: The order will be decided by an inspector appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State following an exchange of written representations between Spelthorne borough council and the objector. The exchange of representations is complete and the inspector will visit the site before making his decision on the order.

Building Research Establishment

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total financial allocation (a) from his Department and (b) from other Government Departments and agencies for research to be carried out by the Building Research Establishment executive agency in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [11268]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The total amount expected to be spent at the Building Research Establishment in 1996–97 by my Department will be in the order of £32 million.

The Department is discussing with BRE proposed contracts for 1997–98, when it is anticipated that BRE will be in the private sector.

In 1996–97, other Government Departments have commissioned work valued at £2.1 million. It is a matter for individual Departments to decide whether and when to let contracts to BRE in 1997–98.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names and qualifications of the Building Research Establishment executive agency visitors. [11270]

Mr. Jones: The visitors of the Building Research Establishment executive agency are appointed by its chief executive, and I have asked him to reply.

Letter from R.G. Courtney to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 16 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment has asked me to reply to your question on the names and qualifications of the Building Research Establishment Executive Agency Visitors.

Professor J. B. Burland, Professor of Soil Mechanics, Imperial College, London

E. C. Chaplin, Company Chief Engineer, Tarmac Construction Limited

B. W. Smith, Flint and Neill Partnership

Professor R. Webster, Faculty of Design, Robert Gordon University, Aberdeen.

I regret that we do not hold details of their qualifications.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what sources of professional advice his Department will have available after the transfer of the Building Research Establishment executive agency to the private sector to enable his Department to arbitrate on plans for novel buildings; and if he will make a statement. [11272]

Mr. Jones: My Department employs its own professional officers to advise on cases referred to it under the Building Act 1984, but where appropriate advice will continue to be sought from the Building Research Establishment after its transfer to the private sector.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total amount allocated to the negotiated research programme for the Building Research Establishment executive agency for the financial year 1996–97 by his Department. [11267]

Mr. Jones: The total amount expected to be spent at the Building Research Establishment in 1996–97 under the negotiated construction research programme is £15.85 million.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to ensure the continuing maintenance of the Buildings Research Establishment executive agency's large building test facility at Cardington after the transfer of the agency to the private sector. [11275]

Mr. Jones: In response to a question from my right hon. Friend the Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones) on 2 April 1996, Official Report, columns 163–64, my right hon. Friend made it clear that the Government want BRE to remain a single entity. That is the basis on which BRE is being offered for sale.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has undertaken to solicit the views of the construction industries throughout the United Kingdom regarding his intention to transfer the Building Research Establishment executive agency to the private sector; and if he will make a statement. [11280]

Mr. Jones: A large number of construction industry bodies were consulted as part of the review of the options for privatisation of BRE carried out by PA Consulting. In addition, three senior industry representatives were members of the advisory group which oversaw PA Consulting's work.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are being taken to ensure that those parts of the land on which the Building Research Establishment executive agency is situated which are sites of special scientific interest will be protected in the event of the transfer of the Building Research Establishment to the private sector. [11278]

Mr. Jones: There are no sites of special scientific interest on the sites occupied by the Building Research Establishment.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when funding for the negotiated research programme for the Building Research Establishment executive agency for the financial year 1997–98 will be allocated by his Department. [11266]

Mr. Jones: Within the Department the allocation for construction research programmes has been made. The Department is discussing with BRE proposed contracts for 1997–98, when it is anticipated that BRE will be in the private sector.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action is being taken to establish the nature of the waste deposited in refuse tips on land on which the Building Research Establishment executive agency is sited at Garston, and the extent of the contamination of that waste; and if he will make a statement. [11279]

Mr. Jones: An environmental liabilities audit was commissioned by the Department as part of the preparation for the sale of BRE. This concluded that the area of the Garston site previously used for tipping does not present a risk to the current activities.

Knowsley Heights (Fire)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been carried out, and by which organisations, into building and other fire safety issues raised by the fire at Knowsley Heights in Liverpool in April 1991. [11269]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Building Research Establishment was commissioned by the Department to investigate the fire at Knowsley Heights. This subsequently led to a programme of research by BRE into the spread of fire in relation to cladding systems, particularly those of the "rainscreen" type. The project included appraisal of some of the hygrothermal properties of cladding systems.

Lightweight Polymer-cored Sandwich Panels

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has commissioned to be carried out into the fire safety implications of the presence of lightweight polymer-cored sandwich panels in the food processing industry; and by which organisations this research was carried out. [11271]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Officials in my Department have been working on this question with colleagues in the Home Office who had commissioned the Building Research Establishment to undertake an initial review of the fire safety of large insulated sandwich panels. My Department will commission follow-up tests with larger specimens shortly.

Pollutants

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been carried out on his behalf, and by which organisations, into pollutants in the home in the United Kingdom in each of the past five years. [11273]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Department of the Environment has commissioned a substantial body of research into pollutants in the home over recent years. The research contracts which have been let over the past five years, and the organisations performing these contracts, are as follows:

Contract title	Contractor	Contract duration
Indoor air quality	Building Research Establishment	1990–93 1993–96 1996–99
Assessment of the risks to health and well being of occupants from exposure to various pollutants in homes	MRC Institute for Environment and Health	1994–99
ALSPAC daily health diaries	University of Bristol	1994–95
The siting of carbon monoxide detectors for use in domestic premises	Building Research Establishment (joint DoE/HSE contract)	1995–97
Size Selective Sampling of Indoor Air Quality—Exposure to Tobacco Smoke and Allergens	AEA Technology	1996–98
Estimation of Personal Exposures to Gaseous and Particulate Pollutants	University of Birmingham	1996–98

Stainless Steel (Swimming Pools)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been carried out on his behalf, and by which organisations, into the behaviour of stainless steel in swimming pool construction. [11274]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Since 1988 my Department has commissioned research at the Building Research Establishment on the risks associated with the use of stainless steel in swimming pools. The work has been carried out in collaboration with interested parties such as British Steel and the Institute of Sports and Recreation Management. BRE has published a guidance document and has provided information for several journal articles. The work has provided advice on recommended stainless steel grades, inspection and maintenance and has generally raised awareness of the issues for designers and swimming pool owners.

Water Industry

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the responses he has received into his consultation paper on competition in the water industry; and how many were in favour of extending competition into the domestic sector. [11049]

Mr. Clappison: A list of responses to the consultation paper "Water—Increasing Customer Choice" is in the Library. The paper invited comments on a number of measures to extend competition. These included giving domestic customers the right to make their own connections to the water main, on which there was general support. On common carriage arrangements, our proposals related to large users of water, and we did not invite comments on extending the proposals to the domestic sector.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent by his Department and the regulator on consultancy advice on the feasibility of extending competition in the water industry. [11050]

Mr. Clappison: The Department and the Office of Water Services jointly funded a report on the hydraulic, network and quality issues raised by common carriage at a cost of £21,150.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the results of his consultation exercise into extending competition in the water industry. [11051]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend hopes to make an announcement soon about how the Government intend to proceed.

Large Building Design (Bomb Attacks)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to reassess the current robustness requirements for large buildings, following recent bomb attacks in London and Manchester; and which organisations have acted on his behalf in assessing the damage and formulating design guidance aimed at limiting the impact of terrorist attacks. [11263]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My Department did commission the Building Research Establishment, and others, to undertake limited investigations of the London bombings at St. Mary Axe in 1992 and at Bishopsgate in 1993, but not the Manchester incident. More detailed studies of such incidents are routinely carried out by experts in the explosives safety branch on behalf of the Home Office. Close liaison is maintained by my Department with ESB in order to monitor the performance of those buildings subjected to explosive attack. We have no plans to amend the Building Regulations to increase the resistance of buildings to bomb attack, although we have supported the development of design guidance specifically aimed at limiting the effect of explosions on buildings which are considered to be at particular risk of terrorist attack.

British Standards Institution

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names, qualifications and employing organisations of the Government's funded representatives on each BSI committee; and what arrangements he proposes to make for Government representation on each committee in the event of the transfer of the Building Research Establishment executive agency to the private sector. [11363]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: A list of representatives funded by the Department of the Environment of BSI committees has been deposited with the Library of the House. That list shows the information requested except the qualifications of each individual, which are not recorded centrally. The expertise of Building Research Establishment staff is expected to remain available to assist with the representation of government interests in the development of standards following the transfer of BRE to the private sector.

Capital Challenge

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will reconcile the figures for the reductions in the provision for local authority capital approvals and capital grants by service in 1997–98 that were made to provide for the introduction of capital challenge with the estimated supplementary credit approvals to be allocated to each service under the capital challenge pilot scheme. [11650]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information available is in a different form from that requested.

The pool of resources for the capital challenge pilot scheme was created by transferring provision from Government Departments' budgets for support for local authority capital expenditure. Table 1 shows departmental contributions in each of the three financial years of the pilot scheme.

A total of £600 million is available under the capital challenge pilot scheme. Ministers have approved a slight surplus of projects since it is likely that some will not proceed according to plan.

The services shown cannot be reconciled directly with the departmental contributions shown in table 1 since some services, for example economic development, will include the policy interests of more than one Department. The precise profiling of individual projects has not yet been agreed with authorities, and it is not therefore possible to show estimated expenditure for each service for individual financial years.

Earth Summit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the targets agreed at the Rio summit in 1992, indicating progress so far achieved with each of them by (a) the United Kingdom, (b) each other country for which information is readily available and (c) internationally. [10818]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 January 1997]: At the Rio earth summit, the Prime Minister and other world leaders agreed the Rio declaration, conventions on climate change and biodiversity, a statement of forest principles, and Agenda 21. Shortly after Rio, the United Kingdom, with other members of the European Union and the Group of Seven, adopted an action plan to give practical effect to the Rio agreements. The United Kingdom has met in full its commitments under that action plan, including the ratification of the climate change and biodiversity conventions, and the production of a national strategy for sustainable development.

The strategy sets out measures and targets designed to promote the implementation of Agenda 21 and is monitored through annual White Papers which report on progress.

The UN's Commission on Sustainable Development was established after Rio to monitor progress on the implementation of the Rio agreements. The United Kingdom submits annual reports to the commission, copies of which are placed in the Library. We do not keep information on other countries' progress in implementing Rio commitments.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what occasion the British Council has provided or facilitated training for the Indonesian paramilitary or police personnel (a) in Indonesia and (b) in the United Kingdom; and if he will list the cost and content of such training and what proposals there are for future support. [10707]

Mr. Hanley: The British Council has provided or facilitated training for Indonesian police personnel, in Indonesia and in the United Kingdom, under non-aid-funded arrangements, in addition to its involvement, on behalf of the Overseas Development Administration, in the national police management training project in Indonesia. Details of the latter have been provided to the hon. Lady and to the hon. Member for Cardiff, Central (Mr. Jones) in earlier replies on 8 February 1995, Official Report, columns 294–95, 3 March 1995, Official Report, column 727, 12 July 1995, Official Report, columns 609–12, and 16 May 1996, Official Report, columns 522–26.

The British Council in Indonesia has provided English language training to prepare police personnel for training in Britain. This language training has been funded under the Chevening awards scheme by the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The number of police trainees and associated costs over the past five years, and estimated figures for the coming financial year, are as follows:

Year	Trainees	Cost (£)
1992–93	1	1,000
1996–97	2	2,000
1997–98	1	1,500

Figures in respect of training arranged by the British Council in the United Kingdom for these Indonesian police personnel, all under the Chevening awards scheme, are as follows:

Year	Trainees	Cost (£)
1992–93	1	12,000
1996–97	2	29,000
1997–98	1	15,000

The four students listed have followed, or will follow, courses in police studies, business administration, banking and finance, and traffic studies.

In 1993–94 and 1994–95 the British Council also provided English language training in Jakarta to two groups of 15 traffic police. This was fully funded under the auspices of a World bank project managed by a British consultancy company.

The British Council has not provided for facilitated training for Indonesian paramilitary organisations.

British Citizens (Death Sentence)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if consular access has been granted and made to Mr. Krishna Maharaj in Florida. [11480]

Dr. Liam Fox: Our consular staff became aware of Mr. Maharaj's situation in October 1988. He received his first consular visit on 3 January 1989. We have been in regular touch with him ever since.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens abroad his Department estimates to have been (a) sentenced judicially to death and (b) executed in the past 10 years. [11476]

Dr. Fox: The answer is (a) eight, and (b) four.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the reason for the replacement of the judge who initially presided in the Florida murder trial of Mr. Krishna Maharaj. [11478]

Dr. Fox: The first judge was removed from the trial in order to face bribery charges in an unrelated case.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens abroad outside the EU have been provided with financial resources to defend themselves or to appeal against verdict or sentence in cases that could end with judicial execution in the past 10 years. [11477]

Dr. Fox: None.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the legal options available to Mr. Krishna Maharaj; and how much time has been made available to Mr. Krishna Maharaj to present arguments to the Florida Supreme court for a new trial. [11479]

Dr. Fox: Mr. Maharaj is able to make use of the US post-conviction appeals process. His state appeal was heard in April 1996. The Florida Supreme court ruled in December 1996 that his case should be returned to the Miami court for an evidentiary hearing to decide whether or not he is entitled to a retrial.

United Nations

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the United Nations regular budget in 1996 was financed by borrowing from the peacekeeping budget; and what assessment he has made of the impact of this on peacekeeping operations. [11344]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The UN regular budget at the end of 1996 was most recently forecast to have been in deficit by $195 million—down from $198 million at the end of 1995. This end of year balance of funds was cross-borrowed from the peacekeeping budget.

The borrowing of funds from peacekeeping budgets to meet cash shortfalls on the UN regular budget is a short-term measure and is within UN financial regulations. It has no appreciable impact in the day-to-day work of UN peacekeeping operations. We do not, however, believe that this is good accounting practice.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much outstanding debt is owed to the United Nations (a) in total and (b) by the United States; how much of this is owed to the peacekeeping budget; and if he will make a statement about the financial situation of the United Nations. [11345]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: At 15 December 1996, outstanding assessed contributions to the UN totalled $2.26 billion. Of this, $1.71 billion was for peacekeeping operations. The total US debt was $1.3 billion, including $926 million for peacekeeping operations.

We firmly believe that all UN member states including the US, must pay their dues promptly, in full and without conditions, in accordance with their legal obligation. The EU proposals for UN financial reform include penalties for late or non-payers.

Bosnia

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will review export controls and the supply of arms to Bosnia. [11587]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: In my written answer to the hon. and learned Member for Harborough (Mr. Garnier) on 15 July, Official Report, column 358, I announced continuing restrictions on UK arms exports to the states of the former Yugoslavia, in line with an EU common position. We have no plans at present to review this policy.

Venezuela (Prisoners)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to secure the release of James Miles and Paul Loseby from custody in Venezuela. [11530]

Dr. Liam Fox: Our consular staff in Caracas are in regular contact with Mr. Miles and Mr. Loseby to ensure that they are treated fairly. They have provided information about local lawyers and the Venezuelan legal system. The date of their release is a matter for the Venezuelan judicial authorities.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to conclude a prisoner exchange agreement between Britain and Venezuela. [11531]

Dr. Fox: Yes. Steps are in hand.

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11417]

Mr. Hanley: None.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place concerning the loss of life of asylum seekers trying to travel to European Union countries; and if he will make a statement. [11180]

Dr. Liam Fox: Meetings take place on a regular basis with our European Union partners to discuss asylum matters. There has been no discussion on this specific issue.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Greece concerning the reported loss of life of people trying to reach Greece by sea. [11181]

Mr. David Davis: None.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Domestic Air Travel

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what guidelines are issued to hon. Members about the use of air travel funded by the House of Commons within the United Kingdom; and if he will list the airlines and airports in the United Kingdom that hon. Members are able to use. [11680]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: Hon. Members may use any United Kingdom airport or any airline appropriate to their parliamentary duties.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Visit (Indian Sub-continent)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what was the cost to public funds of his visit to India, Pakistan and Bangladesh; and who accompanied him on his visit. [11666]

The Prime Minister: I was accompanied by my wife and my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. We took 24 members of my office and other staff, 23 members of the press and 48 representatives of British industry, although not all of them accompanied us throughout the entire visit.

Detailed cost information is not yet available. The representatives from industry and the press will, of course, be charged in the normal manner.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Exhibition

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the progress of the millennium exhibition project at Greenwich. [12056]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My Department issued a statement on 18 January setting out the basis on which the millennium exhibition project will go ahead. The text of the statement is reproduced as follows:

On 6 December last year, the Millennium Exhibition operating company, Millennium Central, submitted its proposals for a National Exhibition to the Millennium Commission. The Commissioners decided at their meeting on 11 December that an Exhibition will take place in Greenwich in the year 2000.

At its meeting on 13 January 1997, the Commission agreed that the indicative budget now available provides a basis on which a grant of £200 million can be made. Immediate negotiations on the terms and conditions of grant will begin in parallel with the preparation of a detailed business plan and the creation of the management team. This will be done in such a way as to drive costs down.

In addition to the Commission's grant, the Exhibition will be funded through commercial income including private sector sponsorship. The Millennium Commission has a target of £150 million for sponsorship, of which more than half has been identified. Entrance charges will be set at a level which allows as many people as possible to attend but which also maximises revenue.

The operational targets for visitor numbers and income for the Exhibition are, of course, estimates and will remain so, even when the detailed business plan is prepared. The Government will expect the business plan to be delivered within the indicative budget and will keep progress under continuous review to ensure that a first class exhibition is delivered at Greenwich in the most cost effective way. Nevertheless, the Government has taken the view that the Commission should have provision to cover variations from the estimates in the plan without prejudicing its existing grant programmes and the possibility of a fourth round of capital projects.

The National Lottery etc. Act of 1993 allows for money from the National Lottery to be channelled to the Millennium Commission only until 31 December 2000, although that period may be extended by Order. An Order will accordingly be brought forward to extend the funding life of the commission for one year. Millennium Central understands that should the need for provision to cover variations arise, it will be required to make a new application to the Commission for this purpose. But any such application will only be made for contingencies and inflation which at present cannot be predicted and both the Government and Opposition agree that everything possible must be done to keep within the existing budget.

The Government is putting in place the normal public sector procedures necessary to monitor and review a project of this sort. No public expenditure will be committed to the Exhibition beyond that which will be made available to English Partnerships to acquire and prepare the site.

The Government has decided that the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Mr. Roger Freeman, should assume responsibility for Millennium Central. It would not be right for the Secretary of State for National Heritage to take this role in view of her position as Chairman of the Millennium Commission. To do so would also fetter her discretion as Secretary of State to act properly under the terms of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993. Mr. Freeman will be advised by the Department of National Heritage. He will be the company's shareholder and will appoint its Board members and be answerable to Parliament for its performance.

The Government is also pleased to announce that Robert Ayling, Chief Executive of British Airways, is to be Chairman of Millennium Central and that Jennifer Page, currently Chief Executive of the Millennium Commission, will be Chief Executive of the company.

The Government has discussed the Millennium Commission's plans in detail with the Opposition, who are represented on the Commission. The Opposition remain enthusiastic about the proposed exhibition at Greenwich. They will want, if elected, to review all aspects of the project delivery, to ensure it is cost effective and properly implemented, so that it will come within the existing budget. The Government is pleased that the Shadow Heritage Secretary, Dr. Jack Cunningham, who has supported the plan for a National Exhibition from the start, has agreed the terms of this announcement.

A National Exhibition should be a landmark in the lives of British people; it should be an event of which the whole country can be proud and which other nationals will admire, and be a worthy successor to the 1851 Great Exhibition and the 1951 Festival of Britain. The decontamination and regeneration of the 300-acre Greenwich Peninsula—the largest single derelict site in Southern England, just six miles for Westminster—will be one of the great legacies of the event. Five thousand people will work to build the Exhibition. The associated national programme will involve the whole country in the celebration of the Millennium. This will be an exhibition for the whole nation.

Historic Buildings (Advice Charges)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what sources of advice on the reduction of fire risks in historic buildings are currently available to her; and if she will list the amount paid in charges for such advice for each of the last three years. [11282]

Mr. Sproat: There are number of sources of advice available to me including: Sir Alan Bailey's report, "Fire Protection Measures for the Royal Palaces", produced in May 1993; and the National Research Co-ordinating Committee for Fire Safety in Historic Buildings, on which most organisations with an interest in fire safety in heritage buildings are represented. Advice has also been sought from Lawrence Webster Forrest/Klimat, International Fire Consultants, Warrington Fire Research, C. S. Todd and Associates and the Building Research Establishment. Over the last three years, the following amounts have been paid in charges for such advice: 1993–94—£52,000; 1994–95—£109,000; 1995–96—£163,000.

In addition, English Heritage operates a technical research programme which can include research into the reduction of fire risks in historic buildings. The results of that research are generally made available to the public either free or at a small price.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what sources of advice on the protection of stone in historic buildings are currently available to her; and if charges are made for such advice. [11281]

Mr. Sproat: English Heritage, in consultation with the Building Research Establishment, operates a technical research programme which can encompass research into the protection of stone in historic buildings. The results of such research are generally made available to the public either through leaflets or through publications. The former tend to be free; the latter tend to be at a small charge. English Heritage also offers guidance on technical issues on request, for which a charge is not levied.

DEFENCE

Malathion

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what clinical assessments have been conducted by or on behalf of his Department on the health effects of malathion powder containing organophosphates. [10634]

Mr. Soames: None.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what licensing procedures apply in respect of use of malathion by British armed forces. [10640]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Malathion-based dusting powder has been discontinued and replaced in the inventory of UK armed forces by coopex powder, a pyrethroid-based pesticide. Residual stocks of the malathion-based dusting powder are being disposed.

Post-viral Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what data have been collected by his Department in each year since 1979 on the occurrence of post-viral fatigue syndrome or related illness contracted by environmental health assistants serving with the Royal Army Medical Corps. [10891]

Mr. Soames: Data on post-viral fatigue syndrome are not collected in this form.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary for Defence what assessment his Department's research into Gulf war syndrome made of the possible linkage between the use of vaccines against hepatitis B and post-viral fatigue syndrome manifested in Gulf war veterans. [10894]

Mr. Soames: My Department has made no specific assessment of the possible linkage between the use of vaccines against hepatitis B and post-viral fatigue syndrome manifested in Gulf war veterans.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department's inquiry into Gulf war syndrome has made of articles published in the "Journal of the American Medical Association"; and what is his policy on reviewing American publications on post-Gulf war illness. [11028]

Mr. Soames: My Department is currently assessing the four articles and editorial on the health of US Gulf war veterans which were published in the 15 January edition of the "Journal of the American Medical Association". We continue to monitor articles on Gulf health issues in American publications, reviewing them and conducting detailed assessments as medical staff consider appropriate. The Medical Research Council has also agreed to review research carried out or in progress in the US on our behalf, in order to establish its relevance to UK Gulf health issues.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of the vaccines provided for use by personnel who served during the conflict with Iraq included anti-malarial agents. [11292]

Mr. Soames: None of the vaccines provided for use by the personnel who served in the Gulf during the conflict with Iraq included anti-malarial agents.

Diazinon

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what examination his Department's research into Gulf war syndrome undertook of the transitional breakdown products of the pesticide, diazinon; and what externally produced research papers on this pesticide have been evaluated by his Department. [10898]

Mr. Soames: My Department has not undertaken any research into the health effects of pesticides containing diazinon. As was stated in the report of the organophosphate pesticide investigation team, paragraph 3.D.31, there is a possibility that during deployment to the Gulf in 1990–91 a small number of personnel could have used a pesticide containing diazinon, which was purchased locally, for a limited period. As far as the Department is aware, these are the only circumstances under which British forces may have used a pesticide containing diazinon. The Ministry of Defence has not evaluated any externally produced research papers on diazinon.

Ballistic Missiles

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to develop technology-based defence against ballistic missile attack. [11029]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We are currently assessing whether we have a national requirement for ballistic missile defence, taking into account risks posed by ballistic missiles and evaluating the options for responding to these risks.

Naval Helicopters (Training)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many departures from the agreed flight plan of naval helicopters on training flights occurred in each year since 1992. [11527]

Mr. Soames: This information is not available. Military aircraft are not required to file flight plans other than if transmitting through civil controlled airspace. Departures from a sortie plan can occur for a variety of emergency, operational or air traffic control reasons.

Duke of York (Helicopter Flight)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the flight path and the stopping-off places of the naval helicopter which carried the Duke of York on a training flight on 13 November 1996. [11520]

Mr. Soames: The aircraft left its home base at Portland, delivered a flight crew to the royal naval auxiliary yard Fleetlands, Gosport and then proceeded to collect HRH the Duke of York at Sunningdale while carrying out navigation training in the London helicopter route. A visit to Cowarth Park school was then undertaken during this training and after HRH was returned to Sunningdale the aircraft proceeded to RAF Manston for a military exercise.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who was responsible for agreeing the flight plan of the helicopter which carried the Duke of York on 13 November 1996. [11518]

Mr. Soames: The sortie was fully planned and authorised through the normal chain of command at the royal naval air station, Portland.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the training flight of the naval helicopter which carried the Duke of York on 13 November 1996. [11519]

Mr. Soames: The cost of individual flights is not routinely recorded. The cost of the helicopter training flight which carried HRH the Duke of York on 13 November was accommodated within overall annual training hours and fuel allocations.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11598]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Ministers of the Crown are eligible to make use of the child care facilities provided by the Department. If use were made of my Department's child care facilities by my ministerial colleagues or by me, we would expect to pay the full non-subsidised cost of the care provided.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made to clean up the North Ponds area at AWE Aldermaston; and if he will make a statement. [11482]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The North Ponds area receives surface water from within the Aldermaston site. Radiological levels are within limits set by the Environment Agency and other regulatory bodies. The area is being remodelled as part of a scheme to improve water management at Aldermaston, with completion expected next year. Some decontamination work will then be needed.

Nuclear Co-operation

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many requests have been made by the United States of America for permission to transfer nuclear weapons information of British provenance to France since 1967. [11536]

Mr. Soames: We are not aware of any official requests for the transfer of nuclear weapons information under the 1958 agreement.

Defence Police (Highlands and Islands)

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number and location of his Department's police within the Scottish highlands and islands. [11898]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief constable/chief executive of the Ministry of Defence Police agency. I have asked the chief constable/chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from W. E. E. Boreham to Mr. Charles Kennedy, dated 20 January 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number and location of Ministry of Defence Police officers located in the Scottish Highlands and Islands, as this falls into my area of responsibility as Chief Constable/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence Police Agency.

There are no Ministry of Defence Police officers stationed in the Scottish Highlands and Islands.

Sunken Ships

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of sunken ships which are listed as war graves indicating their approximate location. [12016]

Mr. Soames: Consideration of whether a sunken ship falls to be considered as a war grave, as now defined in the Protection of Military Remains Act 1986, has been on a case-by-case basis. It has not in the past proved necessary to compile a list of such vessels, and to do so now would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

Naval Vessels (Assistance)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what instructions are given to United Kingdom naval vessels regarding the assistance to be rendered when there is danger to life on the high seas in a non-combat situation. [11183]

Mr. Soames: The United Kingdom abides by customary international law, which recognises the requirement to render humanitarian assistance on the high seas whenever possible. This requirement is enshrined in the Queen's Regulations for the Royal Navy, as well as in a number of other standing instructions and general guidance. All officers in command of Her Majesty's ships, vessels and establishments are required to observe and obey these regulations, and to ensure that their ships' companies do the same.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

European Union Aid

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of the European Commission directorates concerned with the dispersal of aid have underspent in each of the past five years; for what reasons such underspend occurred; and what measures have been taken in response. [10971]

Dr. Liam Fox: All European Community external assistance directorates—Directorates-General VIII, DG, IA, DG, IB, and the EC Humanitarian Office, ECHO—have underspent against their initial annual budget in each of the five years 1991 to 1995 inclusive, except ECHO in 1991, 1992 and 1994 and DGIA in 1993 and 1994.

There are a number of reasons for the persistent underspending: over-ambitious increases in the external assistance budgets; weaknesses in forecasting systems; and insufficient staffing.

The UK Government consistently argue for both realism and restraint during EC budgetary negotiations. We are working with the Commission to improve its forecasting systems. We continue to press the Commission to address staffing issues. We also second ODA staff to Brussels and EC delegations to help improve aid delivery systems.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he is taking to increase the amount and percentage of European Union aid funds that are channelled through British non-governmental organisations. [10970]

Dr. Fox: The Government press for fair competition for all European Community development co-operation spending, in order to ensure both value for money and effectiveness. British non-governmental organisations are extremely effective and well placed to benefit from this approach.

Consortium for Street Children

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the projects of the Consortium for Street Children funded by the aid programme in 1995 and 1996 and the level of funding given; and if he will list the projects, and their cost, to be supported in 1997, 1998 and 1999, or the level of funding to be offered in these years if specific projects have not yet been agreed. [11248]

Dr. Liam Fox: ODA has supported the following projects:

Production of a resource directory: £30,000 spread over two financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96;

Pilot project on girl street children: £16,100 in 1995–96; and legal handbook: £12,000 in 1996–97.

Outline proposals for 1997–98 are under consideration. The director of the Consortium for Street Children is aware that ODA cannot make multi-year commitments.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what locations in eastern Indonesia and East Timor reception tests were carried out to test the effectiveness of the transmitters installed under the shortwave radio transmitters project. [11645]

Dr. Liam Fox: Reception tests were carried out by the Indonesian authorities. Neither the Overseas Development Administration nor the UK contractor has information regarding the locations at which tests were carried out.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department had with the Government of Portugal regarding the developmental benefits to East Timor of the regional physical planning programme for transmigration, the national overview of land resources, and the regional physical map improvement and training projects in Indonesia. [11649]

Dr. Fox: None.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of the Radio Republic Indonesia reports which his Department used to assess the developmental value of the radio studies rehabilitation project in Indonesia. [11646]

Dr. Fox: No such reports are on file. The assessment was carried out by an appraisal team which visited Indonesia in September and October 1985.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Pardes House and Beis Yaakov School

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she received an application for grant-maintained status from the Pardes House and Beis Yaakov school; and when she expects to determine it. [11208]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department received the application from the Pardes House and Beis Yaakov School on 20 September 1996. A decision on the application will be made as soon as possible.

Science Studies

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessment she has made of the reasons why so many young people cease to continue science studies after 16 years of age; [10958]

(2) what plans she has in respect of the science education at age over 16, for those who do not plan a career in a science-related job. [10959]

Mrs. Gillan: It is of course ultimately for young people after 16, in consultation with their schools and colleges, to choose the right subjects for them. The Department undertook a review in 1994 on the supply and demand of newly qualified young people in mathematics and science. Most recently, Sir Ron Dearing's report last year on 16 to 19 qualifications made several recommendations on increasing take-up and achievement in both mathematics and the sciences. The joint committee of the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority and the National Council for Vocational Qualifications has been taking forward work on those recommendations. My right hon. Friend will of course consider carefully any further advice and specific proposals for action they make.

Back-to-work Measures

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures have been introduced since 1992 to help the long-term unemployed back to work; and what assessment her Department has made of their effectiveness. [10963]

Mr. Forth: Since 1992, new jobs have been created and unemployment has fallen. There is clear evidence that our labour market is now more flexible and working more effectively. The UK is the only major European country with unemployment below 2 million, and long-term unemployment has fallen consistently for almost three years.

The Government's labour market policies have sought to build on this progress, and to help long-term unemployed people in particular to compete successfully for the jobs becoming available. Through the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance, Employment Service advisers can now spend more time helping each individual jobseeker. We have also introduced a number of measures to improve incentives to work, and we have maintained year by year the level of 1.5 million opportunities for unemployed people in employment and training programmes.

We have kept the range of employment and training programmes under continual review, and since 1992 have introduced a number of new measures designed to do more to help long-term unemployed people back to work. New programmes for those unemployed for one year or more have included: 1-2-1, jobplan workshops, workwise—worklink in Scotland—restart courses and the jobfinder's grant. A number of other measures have also been piloted.

The Department's programmes and pilot programmes are fully evaluated, and evidence on the comparative effectiveness of individual measures has been used to improve the balance of provision for long-term unemployed people.

In his November Budget statement, my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced a new package of employment measures to help people who have been unemployed for two years or more. We are extending project work: from February, a total of 31 project work pilots will provide help for up to 100,000 people. In addition, a new contract for work pilot initiative will explore ways in which the talents of the private sector might be used to help more very long-term unemployed people back to work.

From April, under a new jobfinder programme, people reaching two or more years unemployment will benefit from an intensive series of one-to-one interviews with an Employment Service adviser which will focus on helping the individual jobseeker back to work. We will also be making the jobmatch programme—which helps people to leave unemployment for a part-time job—available nationally to those aged under 25 who have been unemployed for two years or more; and, within the existing training for work programme, there will be new opportunities for long-term unemployed people whose job prospects can best be increased through training designed to improve their basis skills.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) schools,

(b) primary schools and (c) secondary schools there are in England; and how many schools have (i) held ballots to decide whether or not to opt out of local education authority control and (ii) decided to opt out of local education authority control; and what are (i) and (ii) as a percentage of (a), (b) and (c) for England for each year since 1990. [11356]

Mr. Forth: In January 1996, there were 23,265 primary, secondary and special schools in England, of which 18,480 were primary and 3,594 secondary. Some 1,744 schools have balloted parents on whether to seek grant-maintained status; 1,297 ballots have resulted in a yes vote. The following table sets out the proportion of schools holding ballots and voting yes in each year since 1990.

	All schools		Primary schools		Secondary schools

[1] Figures for all schools include special schools and grant maintained schools in each year but exclude nursery schools, which are not eligible for GM status. Special schools became eligible in 1993.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the grant-maintained schools which have sought her approval for a change of character (a) by extending the age range of pupils for which the school provides and (b) by selecting pupils according to aptitude or ability, stating in each case, whether their application has been successful. [11431]

Mr. Squire: The following table lists grant-maintained schools which have published statutory proposals to extend the age range of the school or to select pupils by ability or aptitude, and whether the proposals were accepted or rejected.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many job vacancies were advertised in the (a) Kilwinning and (b) Irvine job centres in each of the past six months; and how many people were registered as being unemployed during these periods in the parliamentary constituency of Cunninghame, South. [11334]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Brian H. Donohoe, dated 20 January 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of job vacancies advertised in the Kilwinning and Irvine Jobcentres in each of the last six months; and how many people were registered as being unemployed during these periods in the parliamentary constituency of Cunninghame South. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

For ease of reference I have attached, as Annex 1, a breakdown of the number of vacancies advertised in Kilwinning and Irvine Jobcentres over the last six months.

In answer to the second part of your question I have listed below the total number of unemployed claimants registered in the Cunninghame South constituency over the last six months.

December 1996: 2,995

November 1996: 2,926

October 1996: 3,109

September 1996: 3,225

August 1996: 3,585

July 1996: 3,501

I hope this is helpful.

Surplus School Places

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the proportion of school places in each English county which her Department has identified as surplus in each of the last three years in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools; [11354]

(2) if she will list the proportion of surplus places in each county in the last three financial years in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools. [11355]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information available is given in the following table. The Department's figures on surplus places represent a snapshot of the position each January and were first collected in 1994. Figures for January 1996 are not yet available.

Education Spending

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the education component of standard spending assessment and actual spending per pupil, and pupil numbers (a) between five and 10 years and (b) between 11 and 15 years, expressed in cash and constant prices, in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98 in each local education authority and on average. [11433]

Mr. Robin Squire: The data are contained in a number of tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library. The tables set out the level of primary and secondary education standard spending assessment per pupil between 1995–96 to 1997–98 in cash terms and in 1997–98 prices and the underlying pupil numbers. The figures and pupil numbers for 1997–98 are provisional. Outturn spending per pupil for the years in question is not yet available.

Teacher Training

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people entered courses of initial teacher education, broken down by gender, for primary and secondary schools in each year since 1992. [11339]

Mr. Forth: The following table shows new entrants to teacher training for primary and secondary from 1992 to 1996. An overall gender split is given for 1992 to 1994; the split is not available for primary and secondary separately. Data on gender for 1995 will be published in "Education Statistics for the United Kingdom 1996" which will be available on 31 January.

Teacher Statistics

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the (a) gender profile, (b) average length of service and (c) average age of the teaching profession. [11341]

Mr. Forth: In March 1995, 34 per cent. of full-time teachers in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools were men, and the average age for all teachers was 41. Information on average length of service is not available, since records are not available prior to 1962.

Hyperactivity

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will require the assessment for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder of children suspended from school more than three times; and if she will make a statement. [11509]

Mrs. Gillan: No; decisions about whether to undertake a statutory assessment of special educational needs are for the local education authority following referral by a child's school, another agency or a request from a parent. The assessment is to determine a child's educational needs rather than to make a clinical diagnosis, although the authority will take advice from others, including the medical and educational psychology services. Throughout the process, the local education authority must have regard to the code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs.

Non-teaching Staff

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many non-teaching staff were employed by local education authorities throughout the United Kingdom for each year since 1990; and if she will make a statement. [11481]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information is as follows:

Full-time equivalent of non-teaching staff[1] employed by local authorities in England—June 1990 to June 1996

Years as at June	FTE of Non-teaching staff
1990	362,400
1991	364,200
1992	360,300
1993	318,200
1994	320,300
1995 (revised basis)[2]	269,300
1996 (provisional)	266,000

Source:
The main source of information about local authority employment is a survey carried out by the Local Government Management Board on behalf of the joint staffing watch group, on which both local and central government are represented.
Notes:
[1] The table includes all manual and non-manual staff whether employed in schools or centrally based. Staff employed by grant-maintained schools are excluded throughout. The figures for 1993 to 1996 exclude staff in colleges that transferred to the new FE sector in April 1993.
[2] The figures for 1994 and 1995 were not calculated on a comparable basis because of changes to the survey. Previously FTEs were estimated using national statistics of average hours worked. Since 1995 more reliable FTEs are calculated by local authorities at employee level. Also, staff doing two or more jobs in an authority are now recorded for each job separately. It is estimated that, using the 1995 basis of calculation, there was a growth of about 2,000 FTE non-teaching staff between 1994 and 1995.
[3] Non-teaching staff include educational support, clerical, school meals and premises related staff employed in schools and colleges, together with central services and administration within the education service.

Local Authority Education Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the capital expenditure on education by each local authority in England in each year since 1989–90. [11432]

Mrs. Gillan: The following tables gives capital expenditure by each local education authority in England in each year from 1990–91 to 1994–95. Information on 1989–90 and 1995–96 is not available.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects the form 7 figures to have been processed in order to provide class size information as at January 1997; and if she will make a statement. [11360]

Mr. Squire [holding reply 17 January 1996]: Provisional figures on class sizes in maintained primary and secondary schools as at January 1997 are expected to be published in a statistical press notice at the end of June.

Westwood St. Thomas School

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she will announce her decision on the application of Westwood St. Thomas school, Salisbury, for grant-maintained status. [11007]

Mr. Forth: The application is under consideration. A decision will be made as soon as possible, consistent with full consideration of the proposals.

Public Examination Boards

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to reduce the number of public examination boards; and if she will make a statement. [11186]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend made it clear in response to the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority—Office for Standards in Education report on "Standards in Public Examinations 1975 to 1995", published on 5 December, that she believed that it was now right to consult on moves to reduce and rationalise the number of examining and awarding bodies. She will be publishing a consultation paper on possible options early next month.

Small Firms Training Loan Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she plans to re-launch the small firms training loan scheme; and with what changes. [11230]

Mr. Paice: The small firms training loans scheme was re-launched in September 1996. The following changes in rules and procedures were introduced at that time:

- the capital and interest repayment holiday offered to SFTL borrowers is now based on the amount of the loan. Loans up to £700 receive a six-month holiday, loans between £701 and £15,000 receive nine months and those over £15,000 receive 12 months;
- endorsement of applications by a training and enterprise council or local enterprise company is now mandatory only for loan applications for amounts over £15,000 submitted to a bank other than the bank holding the applicant's main business accounts;
- eligibility for SFTL support has been extended to cover the costs of an employee acting as in-house trainer, providing that the named trainer is relieved of normal operational duties while training others;
- the application form has been simplified.

School Day

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans she has to change the current regulations on the length of the school day; [12075]

(2) what estimate she has made of the additional cost of increasing the length of the school day to an average of eight hours; and if she will make a statement. [12076]

Mr. Robin Squire: It is for governing bodies to determine the length of the school day and we have no plans to change this. The Department has carried out no studies of the cost of extending the school day, although it is known that some schools have a significantly longer compulsory day than others.

SCOTLAND

Arrestments

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) bank arrestments and (b) earnings arrestments there were in each year since 1993; and what statistics his Department (i) collects and (ii) publishes on this subject. [10946]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Details of the numbers of arrestments of moveable property in the hands of third parties have been collected centrally only since 1 January 1996. These figures do not distinguish between arrestment of bank accounts and arrestment of other property. The total to 30 September 1996, the latest date for which figures are currently available, is 65,570. The statistics which are collected on arrestments are published in the annual "Civil Judicial Statistics, Scotland".

The information requested in relation to earnings arrestments is given in the table.

1993: 69,195

1994: 90,350

1995: 82,677

1996 (to 30 September): 84,485

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research he has conducted on the trends and impact of bank arrestments arising from civil court judgments. [10947]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

NHS Property Sales

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 28 November, Official Report, column 338, if he will list for each health board and NHS trust in Scotland for the (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 financial years and in total for each of these periods (i) how much has been raised from the sale of surplus property and (ii) how much of this has been reallocated to the health board or NHS trust which disposed of the surplus property. [10965]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the tables.

With regard to NHS trusts, all receipts are retained by the trust responsible for the sale. The expenditure of these receipts is controlled by the external financing limit.

As for health boards, for 1993–94 and 1994–95 all receipts were retained by the board responsible for the sale. Since 1995–96, receipts from the sale of surplus land and buildings by health boards are normally remitted to the management executive and are used to offset the capital programme for the whole of the NHS in Scotland. A case can be submitted by health boards to retain capital receipts. In 1995–96 Dumfries and Galloway health board and Tayside health board retained £3.285 million and £0.15 million, respectively.

Caledonian MacBrayne

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the annual revenue earned by Caledonian MacBrayne from carriage of commercial goods vehicles on all routes to and from the Western Isles in 1995–96. [11586]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A total of £3,537,000. This figure comprises all revenue earned from the carriage of commercial vehicles on the company's Oban-Castlebay-Lochboisdale, Mallaig-Castlebay-Lochboisdale, Uig-Tarbert-Lochmaddy, and Ullapool-Stornoway services.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the representations he has had from the International Bar Association in relation to the bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie. [9943]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is my understanding that neither the Attorney-General nor the Lord Advocate has received representations from the International Bar Association in relation to the bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie. In May 1995 the Lord Advocate received intimation from the president of the International Bar Association of a motion concerning the establishment of a permanent international criminal court which was to be put before the council of the International Bar Association in Edinburgh in June 1995. In May 1996 the president of the International Bar Association wrote once again to the Lord Advocate inviting him, or a representative from the Crown Office, to attend the conference being held jointly by the International Bar Association and the Arab Lawyers Union. That invitation was declined. The Lord Advocate has received a report of the discussions at the conference including the proposals of the keynote speaker, Professor Bassiouni, concerning trial in Scotland. These proposals are, in fact, broadly in line with the approach that the Lord Advocate and Her Majesty's Government have taken to the case and the undertakings concerning the fair trial and treatment of the accused which have already been given to the Libyans.

Historic Buildings (Advice Charges)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what sources of advice on the protection of stone in historic buildings are currently available to him; and if he will list the amount paid in charges for such advice for each of the last three years. [11283]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since these are matters for Historic Scotland, I have asked the agency's chief executive, Mr. Graeme Munro, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graeme Munro to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 20 January 1997:

I refer to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the sources of advice on the protection of stone in historic buildings available to the Secretary of State for Scotland. It has been referred to me for answer since this is an operational matter falling within the remit of Historic Scotland.

The Secretary of State for Scotland has, within Historic Scotland's Properties in Care Division, a regional structure of qualified architects well versed in the conservation of stone. This skill and knowledge is put to use in the preservation of monuments in his care, and through the historic building repair grant scheme, is made available to owners of historic buildings. This advice is also available in support of scheduled monument consent and listed building consent schemes.

In addition, Historic Scotland, commissions research into the conservation and repair of stone in historic buildings and publishes the findings as Research Reports and Technical Advice Notes. To date these include "Stonecleaning in Scotland—Research Report" in 3 Volumes, Literature Review and Research Summary (1992), "Proceedings of the International Conference 1992", "Stonecleaning—A Guide for Practitioners" (1994); "The Repair of Historic Buildings in Scotland" (1995), "Preparation and Use of Lime Mortars" (1995), "Line Conference Proceedings" (1995), and "Case Studies of Traditional Lime Harling" (1966).

Further research projects currently in progress include an investigation into "Carved Stone Decay", "The Cleaning of Granite", "Graffiti Removal", "Sandstone Consolidants and Waterproofers", "Laser Stonecleaning in Scotland" and "Biological Growths on Sandstone Buildings", and it is intended that reports and technical guidance will be published as these projects are concluded.

The costs of these commissioned research projects amount to £70,180 for 1994–95, £94,363 for 1995–96, and £11,815 for April 1996–December 1996. These costs are partially offset by the income accruing from the sales of published Research Findings and Technical Advice Notes amounting to £9,069.7 (1994–95), £5,983.01 (1995–96), and £3,550.34 (April 1996 to December 1996).

I hope this information is helpful.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what sources of advice are currently available to him on the reduction of fire risk in historic buildings; and if he will list the amount paid in charges for such advice for each of the past three years. [11284]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since these are matters for Historic Scotland, I have asked the agency's chief executive, Mr. Graeme Munro, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. Graeme Munro to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 20 January 1997:

I refer to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the sources of advice on the reduction of fire risk in historic buildings available to the Secretary of State for Scotland. It has been referred to me for answer since this is an operational matter falling within the remit of Historic Scotland.

In common with others, the Secretary of State for Scotland has available to him technical guidance on the reduction of fire risk in historic buildings published by the Fire Prevention Association, including "Fire Prevention in Historic Buildings and Town Centres" (published 1992) and "Heritage under Fire" (1995), and by Historic Scotland in "The Repair of Historic Buildings in Scotland" (1995) and other guidance prepared by fire brigades.

Historic Scotland, on behalf of the Secretary of State commissioned, in 1995, a multi-disciplinary research project from Edinburgh University to consider "Fire Protection in Scottish Historic Buildings". The research team is due to submit the report in Spring 1997 and, after consideration, it is hoped to publish a Technical Advice Note. The University research team is assisted by a Steering Group compromising representatives from the Scottish Office Environment Department and Fire Service, Historic Scotland, the Fire Protection Association, Strathclyde Fire Brigade, the National Library of Scotland, the National Trust for Scotland and the Architectural Heritage Society of Scotland. The project has been initiated as a direct consequence of the increasing awareness of the high loss to fire of Scotland's built heritage, and is likely to lead to further research on specific topics to enhance the understanding of fire risk and the means of providing increased protection for historic buildings. The cost of the current research project is £67,500 of which £40,690 was paid in 1995–96.

Historic Scotland is also currently preparing a Technical Advice Note in conjunction with the Fire Prevention Association on the sensitive installation of fully-charged water sprinkler systems in historic buildings. This publication will develop and enhance the experience gained during the installation of such a system in one of the Secretary of State's own properties, Duff House, Banff, (William Adam 1735) during its recent conversion to a country house art gallery.

The Secretary of State for Scotland is represented by Historic Scotland on the National Research Co-ordinating Committee for Fire Safety in Historic Buildings, set up by English Heritage to review the implementation of the Bailey Report following the Windsor Castle fire of 1992.

Representative bodies on the committee are:

Department of National Heritage

The Home Office

Historic Scotland

Historic Royal Palaces

Fire Protection Association

English Heritage

The Royal Household

The National Trust

The terms of reference of this body are to meet quarterly to report on implementation of the Bailey recommendations, to collect and publish fire safety research data, to co-ordinate research based on prioritised needs and to seek research funding by pooling resources, grants from existing programmes and additional share of PES bids.

Following the Windsor Castle fire and major fires in other historic buildings an internal report was prepared in 1992 by the then Head of the Works Services Division of Historic Scotland to assess the fire risk in the ancient monument estate. This resulted in the drawing-up by the Agency's professional staff with the assistance of local fire brigades, Fire Action Plans and an Emergency Procedures Manual for the most vulnerable monuments in state care and this work is on-going.

I hope this information is helpful.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many recognised outbreaks of Newcastle disease have been recorded on farms in Scotland by area in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [11547]

(2) how many (a) chickens, (b) turkeys and (c) other birds have been affected by Newcastle disease in Scotland in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [11545]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 17 January 1997]: There have been no recognised outbreaks of Newcastle disease in Scotland in the last five years. Widespread vaccination of poultry has been instrumental in maintaining the health status of the national poultry flock during the last decade.

Frozen Pipes Warnings

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what work has been carried out for his Department to determine a severe weather trigger for warnings to the general public of possible damage from burst pipes in buildings; what has been the role of the Building Research Establishment Executive Agency in this work; and if he will make a statement. [11276]

Mr. Kynoch: The severe weather working party, which was set up by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland in January 1996, received guidance from the Building Research Establishment Scottish laboratory on the development of a tentative weather trigger for the likely freezing of pipes in loft spaces in severe conditions in Scotland. The Scottish Office subsequently commissioned BRE to develop an appropriate cold weather indicator to act as a trigger for the issue of warnings to householders and others in Scotland of imminent severe weather and of the consequent risk of freezing and bursting of water pipes. BRE reported in October 1996.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the advantages of withholding live animal export licences at times when disruption of the continental road system interferes with journey plans, to the detriment of the welfare of animals in transit. [10988]

Mrs. Browning: A licence is not required to export live farm animals to other member states of the EU. However, during periods of disruption, such as that recently caused by French lorry drivers, the Department checks closely on the circumstances prevailing at the time on routes declared to us on route plans, with a view to intervening if this is justified.

Cattle Cull

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 157, if he will list the locations of the dry warehouses in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland, in which meat and bonemeal from animals slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme is stored, and the cold storage depots in the United Kingdom. [11305]

Mr. Baldry: The locations of the dry warehouses and cold storage depots referred to in my previous answer are as follows:

In addition, over-30-months scheme carcases have been stored at two container sites, one in Kent and the other in Hull. I regret that these were omitted in my previous answer.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the weekly cost of storage of (a) rendered meat and bonemeal and (b) carcases of cattle slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme; and when he expects the disposal to be completed. [11306]

Mr. Baldry: The weekly cost of storage depends upon stock levels. It is currently around £45,000 for rendered meat and bonemeal and £220,000 for unrendered carcase material. Disposal will be completed at a pace determined by control requirements and the availability of rendering and incineration capacity.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what disposal options other than high-temperature incineration are under consideration for cattle slaughtered and rendered under the over-30-months scheme. [11307]

Mr. Baldry: None.

Vitamin B6

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by whom, and for what purpose, the Food Advisory Committee was asked to consider at its December meeting the use of vitamin B6; and if he will make a statement on the conclusions reached at that meeting. [11491]

Mrs. Browning: I asked the Department of Health's Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment—for advice on the toxicity of vitamin B6 in response to concerns expressed by the Consumers Association about the safety of dietary supplements containing high doses of vitamins and minerals. The COT's advice was passed to the Food Advisory Committee so that it could consider what action should be taken. The FAC endorsed the COT's conclusions and recommended that discussions be held with interested parties to explore the possibility of a voluntary limit on levels of vitamin B6 in dietary supplements. It also made it clear that it wishes to consider this matter further in the light of those discussions and information about the market for high dose supplements.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the Food Advisory Committee and the committee on toxicity consulted Consumers for Health Choice and the Society for the Promotion of Nutritional Therapy about the use of vitamin B6 prior to reaching conclusions on its safety. [11492]

Mrs. Browning: Neither the Food Advisory Committee nor the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment consulted Consumers for Health Choice or the Society for the Promotion of Nutritional Therapy before reaching its conclusions on the safety of vitamin B6. However, the FAC has recommended that officials discuss the conclusions with interested parties.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many adverse reactions as a result of vitamin B6 supplement in the United Kingdom were reported to his Department in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [11493]

Mrs. Browning: No arrangement exists for the reporting to this Department of adverse reactions to vitamin and mineral supplements. A report into the toxicological problems resulting from exposure to traditional medicines and food supplements commissioned by this Department did not reveal any cases of adverse reactions to vitamin B6 during the period. However, evidence of adverse reactions has been published in the scientific literature.

TRANSPORT

Sleep-related Road Accidents

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy in respect of financing the erection of permanent advisory "Tiredness Can Kill" signs on roads which have had a high incidence of sleep-related accidents. [9851]

Mr. Bowis: Sleep-related accidents are associated with particular times of day as well as types of road. The need for, and financing of "Tiredness Can Kill" signs on trunk roads and motorways is considered on the basis of local circumstances.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to raise public awareness of the dangers of driving while sleepy. [9852]

Mr. Bowis: We issued preliminary advice to drivers on how to combat sleepiness in September 1995. Further research is in progress into the relative effectiveness of other possible measures to ensure that the best advice is made available to drivers on how to minimise the risk of having a sleep-related accident. This phase of the research will report later this year, following which we will review the requirement for new advice.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of drivers who (i) undertake truck driving during the day and taxi driving at night, (ii) work for two companies, with consequences for their total tachograph entry and (iii) run more than one tachograph. [9853]

Mr. Bowis: None; we have no way of quantifying this.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into roads which have a higher than average incidence of sleep-related vehicle accidents. [9855]

Mr. Bowis: Current casualty data do not allow a clear identification of roads with a higher than average incidence of sleep-related accidents. We are midway through a research programme into accident causation which is seeking to develop methods which will more accurately identify the incidence of such accidents. This will report later this year.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the extent to which rumble strips are effective in alerting sleepy drivers of large-wheel coaches and heavy goods vehicles with power transmissions. [9854]

Mr. Bowis: Rumble strips—raised rib markings—were initially introduced on motorways to separate the edge of the hard shoulder from the main carriageway, by improving the visual delineation in wet conditions at night. They also provide an audible/vibratory warning to vehicle drivers should they stray from the carriageway for any reason. Their effect in alerting sleepy drivers is an additional benefit.

We have not made an assessment of the effectiveness of rumble strips in alerting drivers; US studies suggest that they can reduce run-off-road accidents by 20 to 50 per cent.

Railway Station Car Parks

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications of the High Court decision of 29 November in the case of Clarke v. Kato and others with regard to the status of railway station car parks and the possible future role of local authorities in designating taxi ranks in such car parks; and if he will make a statement. [11046]

Mr. Watts: The decision was made on the particular facts of the case in question and does not lay down a general principle. The significance of the decision is that if a car park is a "road" under the Road Traffic Act 1988, the general provisions of road traffic law will apply to it, such as the requirement for compulsory insurance. The case does not mean that land which is a road within the meaning of the Act because the owner permits the public to use it—as distinct from land over which the public have a right of way—no longer remains under the control of the owner. He remains free to decide what traffic is to be allowed over the land and for what purpose.

The decision therefore has no bearing on the designation of taxi ranks at railway station car parks, which remain a matter for the appropriate station operator.

Channel Tunnel (Safety)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what investigations are being carried out on his behalf, and by which organisations, into issues raised by the lorry fire in the channel tunnel on 18 November 1996, to ensure the safety of future passengers crossing under the English channel. [11264]

Mr. Watts: The Channel Tunnel Safety Authority is conducting an investigation into the channel tunnel fire. This investigation is being undertaken on behalf of both the French and UK Governments in line with the duties and responsibilities of the Intergovernmental Commission and the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority, established in articles 10 and 11 of the treaty of Canterbury 1986, Cmnd 9745.

Bus Emissions

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many inspections of bus emissions have been made in the South Yorkshire area during 1996; and how many of these have resulted in (a) prosecution and (b) a fine; [11047]

(2) if he will list the prosecutions brought and fines levied against bus companies, by region, which have breached the diesel emission limits during each of the past three years. [11048]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate executive agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Ms Helen Jackson, dated 20 January 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the number of inspections of bus emissions made in the South Yorkshire area during 1996; and how many of these have resulted in (a) prosecution and (b) a fine; and the prosecutions brought and fines levied against bus companies by region, which have breached the diesel emissions limits during each of the last three years.

478 inspections of bus (PSV) emissions were carried out in the Nottinghamshire and South Yorkshire area during the 1995/96 financial year which resulted in the issue of 5 delayed prohibition notices. No immediate prohibitions were issued.

It is not usual practice for breaches of PSV emissions limits to be dealt with by a prosecution or fine. The issue of a prohibition notice is considered an effective means of dealing with emissions failures in respect of licensed PSV operators. Prohibition notices issued to licensed operators are available to the Traffic Commissioners to consider whether disciplinary action is required.

Vessels and Passengers (Requests for Assistance)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requests for assistance from ships containing refugees in the Mediterranean have been reported to his Department since December 1996. [11179]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance is given to United Kingdom-registered ships concerning the assistance to be offered to vessels or passengers in distress. [11182]

Mr. Bowis: The annual summary of admiralty notices to mariners and volume 5 of the admiralty list of radio signals, which are mandatory carriage on UK-registered ships, give explicit guidance to the masters of British ships. UK law provides that "the master or person in charge of a vessel shall, so far as he can do so without serious danger to his own vessel, her crew and passengers (if any), render assistance to every person, . . . who is found at sea in danger of being lost."

The master of a British ship, on receiving at sea a distress signal or information from any source that a vessel or aircraft is in distress, must proceed with all speed to the assistance of the persons in distress—informing them, if possible, that he is doing so—unless he is unable, or in the special circumstances of the case considers it unreasonable or unnecessary to do so, or unless he is released from this obligation under certain conditions.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the estimated sums to be paid by way of subsidy in the financial year ending 31 March 1997 to the British Railways Board and each of the companies formerly owned by the board which have been privatised or franchised in the past five years. [11427]

Mr. Watts: My current estimate of the net payments of support, excluding payments under the performance regime, to be made by the franchising director to the British Railways Board and to franchise operators in the financial year 1996–97 is listed in the table.

Marine Accident Reports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines he sets the marine accidents investigation branch for the time scale for producing reports following accidents or incidents. [11513]

Mr. Bowis: Major accidents require an inspector's inquiry to be conducted, leading to a chief inspector's report being produced. The chief inspector's target is to submit the final report to the Secretary of State within 12 months of the date of the accident. Consultation with those considered by the chief inspector to have been adversely affected by the report may sometimes prevent this target being met.

In other accidents requiring full and detailed examination, summary reports may be released generally or to interested parties. Where these are to be published, the target is to do so within 10 months from the date of the accident.

MV Canberra (Inquiry)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what factors underlay the delay in producing the marine accidents investigation branch report into the incident involving the MV Canberra in December 1994. [11514]

Mr. Bowis: This was a complex investigation which involved not only the causes of the power failure but the actions of the master and officers with respect to navigational decisions and communication.

In addition, the consultation and validation process was complex, and some time was spent in exploring the legal implications of publishing the report in the light of the consultation.

Aircraft Safety

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those airlines found to be (a) using unapproved parts and (b) flying without maintenance releases during the last two years. [11511]

Mr. Bowis: The Civil Aviation Authority routinely audit both airlines and their maintenance organisations. All CAA-approved maintenance organisations have procedures to reject on receipt unapproved parts and prevent their fitting to aircraft. However, the CAA has recorded one case in February 1995 where a part fitted was found not to be in full accordance with approved standards. The part presented no hazard to the safety of the aircraft, which was operated by Maersk Air, and appropriate action has been taken to prevent any recurrence. Procedures for the strict regulation and control of aircraft parts were outlined on 22 March 1996 by my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris) Official Report, column 392.

In the past two years, one case has been found where a UK-registered aircraft has been released into service from routine maintenance without there being in force a certificate of release to service as required by Joint Aviation Authorities requirement JAR-145. This one case is currently under investigation by the CAA. It would be inappropriate to name the airline concerned while the investigation is under way.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has commissioned to be carried out into the structural safety of the Jubilee line extension to the London underground system during its construction, and by which organisations. [11265]

Mr. Bowis: This is a responsibility of London Transport, for which safety is the top priority. I understand that the Jubilee line extension construction safety record is commendable by the standards of the construction industry nationally.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions, during the current parliamentary Session, answers to parliamentary questions which reveal information of a sort which is not normally disclosed, as defined in paragraph 5 of the guidance to officials on drafting answers to parliamentary questions, have been referred to him for a decision on whether or not a reply is given. [11285]

Sir George Young: None.

Coastguard Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the coastguard stations which are currently only on day watch; and what plans he has to restrict other coastguard stations to day watch operations over the next five years. [9761]

Mr. Bowis: No coastguard stations are currently on day watch only. There are no plans to restrict coastguard stations to day watch operations over the next five years.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) which coastguard stations he is planning to downgrade; [9763]

(2) if he will place a copy of the Coastguard agency five-year plan in the Library. [9762]

Mr. Bowis: There is no five-year plan for the Coastguard agency. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the agency's chief executive to develop a strategy for using the benefits of new communications technology to meet the expected requirements for distress monitoring and search and rescue co-ordination by Her Majesty's Coastguard into the 21st century. No strategy has yet been submitted. Coastguard staff will be consulted before any decisions are taken. In the meantime, we have no plans to downgrade any coastguard stations.

M11 Link Road

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on the M11 link road to date; and what is the current estimated total cost. [11058]

Mr. Bowis: Total spending to date is £176 million. The current estimated total cost is £340 million.

Driver Eyesight Standards

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many drivers of groups 1 and 2 vehicles he estimates will be unable to meet the new eyesight standards set out in the Motor Vehicles (Driving Licences) Regulations 1996. [11525]

Mr. Bowis: There are no changes in eyesight standards for group 1 drivers as a result of the new regulations. However, from 1 January 1998, group 1 drivers who obtained their licence before 1 January 1997 who, when renewing their licence, wish to retain the associated D1 entitlement—minibuses—will have to meet the higher group 2 eyesight standards. It is not possible to determine the numbers of licence holders who may be affected.

Drivers of group 2 vehicles who obtained their licence before 1 January 1997, who are unable to meet the revised eyesight standards for such vehicles in the new regulations but who can continue to meet the standards applicable when they obtained their entitlement, may renew their licence provided that they are able to satisfy the Secretary of State that they have not been involved in a road accident in the preceding 10 years where defective eyesight was a contributory factor and that they have had recent adequate experience of driving these vehicles. The number of existing group 2 drivers falling below the new eyesight standards is estimated at 3,000. It is not possible to determine how many of these would be unable to satisfy the Secretary of State that their licences should be renewed.

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11412]

Mr. Bowis: There are none.

Marine Pollution Incidents

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents involving the discharge into the sea by merchant shipping of (a) noxious liquid substances and (b) pollution hazard substances took place in the most recent year for which figures are available; and how many successful prosecutions were brought. [11523]

Mr. Bowis: In 1996, 347 incidents of suspected discharges of noxious liquid or other polluting substances in contravention of international regulations were reported to the marine pollution control unit. The source of these suspected violations was identified on 30 occasions, of which 23 involved oil and seven involved other substances. Of these 30 cases, three were referred to the Treasury Solicitor or procurator fiscal and in eight cases it was considered more appropriate to refer to the relevant flag state for action. Ten cases remain under investigation.

Radar Equipment (Milford Haven)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he has taken to ensure the effective operation of radar equipment operating in the area of Milford Haven; what reports he has received regarding the effectiveness of the equipment on St. Ann's head since 1 January 1996; and if he will make a statement. [11350]

Mr. Bowis: The operation of this radar equipment is a matter for the Milford Haven port authority.

Overloaded Aircraft

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those airlines found to be operating overloaded aircraft during the last two years. [11512]

Mr. Bowis: The Civil Aviation Authority audits UK airlines to ensure, among other things, that aircraft are operated within the weight limitations specified in their performance manuals. Incidence of operations outside these limitations is very low. Details of such operations are not held centrally and the information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11596]

Mr. Bowis: The only child care facilities provided by my Department in central London are provided through the interdepartmental Westminster holiday playscheme, which is subsidised by the Department. Ministers may apply to use the facilities in the same way as members of staff.

Driver Accident Rates

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the accident rate for drivers over the age of 70 years, and for each 10-year age group below 70 over the past 10 years. [11489]

Mr. Bowis: The latest available estimates are shown in the following table. The table shows that driver involvement rates in road injury accidents, in relation to the number of driving licence holders in the age group, fall with age. However, older car drivers and younger, mainly novice, drivers, drive fewer miles per year. When this reduced exposure to accident risk is taken into account, the table shows that, in relation to miles driven, the driver involvement rate increases for age groups over 60, and in relatively higher for 17 to 20-year-olds. There has been little change in relative rates between age groups since 1985–96.

Rate of car driver involvement in road injury accidents

Age band	1985–86		1993–95
	Per thousand[1] car driving licence holders	Per million vehicle kilometres	Per thousand[1] car driving licence holders	Per million vehicle kilometres
17–20	30	3.3	27	3.4
21–29	15	1.4	14	1.3
30–39	11	0.9	10	0.8
40–49	9	0.7	8	0.6
50–59	7	0.6	7	0.5
60–69	6	0.7	5	0.6
70+	6	0.9	5	0.9

[1] The rates for each car driver age group are expressed as car driver involvements in injury accidents in relation to the number of full licence holders in each age group. The 17 to 20 year age group does not take into account provisional licence holders because their driving mileage is relatively very low, and accompaniment while learning could reduce their accident involvement risk. Inclusion could unduly bias comparisons between age groups.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the programme of bridge inspection and strengthening associated with the use of 40-tonne lorries will be completed by 1 January 1999; and what is the present estimate of the cost of this programme. [10903]

Mr. Watts: The current programme of assessment and strengthening of highway structures is not associated purely with the use of 40-tonne lorries; it is also aimed at ensuring that these structures continue to be safe for use by the large numbers of 38-tonne vehicles that now use them. It is not the case that every structure on every road must be strengthened by 1 January 1999. Our objectives are that all assessments should have been completed by that date and that routes carrying significant flows of international traffic, including all trunk roads, should be capable of bearing 40-tonne lorries.

The trunk road network is the responsibility of the Highways Agency. The agency's latest estimate of the cost of assessing and strengthening trunk road structures alone is £450 million.

Other public roads are the responsibility of local highway authorities. Since 1991–92, my Department has made some £700 million available to local highway authorities for assessment and strengthening and a further £112 million is to be provided under the 1997–98 transport policies and programmes settlement. It is not possible at the present to provide an accurate estimate of the cost of outstanding assessment and strengthening work for local authority structures.

HEALTH

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average salary by decile for NHS dentists. [9012]

Mr. Malone: General dental practitioners are largely paid through fees—such as item of service fees and continuing care—rather than salaries. The table shows average gross fee earnings by decile for dental rates study group, DRSG, dentists in England.

Average gross fee earnings[1] by the decile for DRSG[2] dentists in 1995–96 in England

Decile[3]	Average gross fee earnings[1] £
Bottom	8,000
2	26,000
3	43,000
4	61,000
5	75,000
6	87,000
7	99,000
8	112,000
9	131,000
Top	188,000

[1] These have been rounded to the nearest £1,000. Gross fee payments do not account for all NHS earnings, which can include other payments such as maternity payments, long-term sickness payments and seniority payments. These additional payments amount to about £2,000 per practitioner on average.
[2] DRSG dentists are those who have been in practice throughout 1995–96. Dentists who have joined or left during the year have been excluded, as well as some other small groups.
[3] There were 13,687 DRSG dentists in England in 1995–96. Each decile comprises about 1,369 dentists.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, columns 165–66, how many adult patients and children were registered with the highest paid NHS dentist in each year from 1991–92 to 1995–96. [11890]

Mr. Malone: The dentist with the highest level of gross earnings in each of the years 1991–92 to 1994–95 had a very small number of registrations, and was engaged mainly in orthodontic treatment. For 1995–96, the dentist with the highest level of gross earnings had 8,991 adult registrations and 2,258 child registrations.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 220, in which London postal district the practice of the highest earning NHS dentist was situated in 1991–92, 1992–93, 1993–94, and 1994–95. [11889]

Mr. Malone: Giving this information would be in breach of the open government code of practice, which exempts information which could facilitate an unwarranted invasion of privacy.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish for consultation draft proposals for making extensive and wholly unnecessary dental treatment a criminal offence. [11900]

Mr. Malone: Extensive and wholly unnecessary dental treatment can constitute an assault for the purposes of the criminal law and there is therefore no need to introduce any further legislation.

Pay Parity

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he has had with the Department for Education and Employment on the matter of pay parity between clinical and academic medicine. [10839]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment have discussed this issue. We fully support the arrangements announced by the Secretary of State for Education and Employment to enable pay parity to be maintained between clinical academics and their counterparts in the national health service.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he has had with the Treasury on the matter of pay parity between clinical and academic medicine. [10838]

Mr. Malone: None.

Anti-malarial Tablets

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department has made available about the side effects of mefloquine anti-malarial tablets. [11241]

Mr. Malone: Information on the side effects associated with mefloquine is provided to health professionals in the manufacturer's product information which is authorised by the Licensing Authority. An information leaflet for patients is also provided.

In July 1996, information on neurological and psychiatric side effects associated with mefloquine was published in a bulletin called "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance". This bulletin is distributed to all doctors and pharmacists and a copy is placed in the Library.

The British National Formulary also provides information on the side effects of mefloquine and the Department of Health pays for this to be sent to general practitioners twice a year. Information on mefloquine was circulated to all doctors in the chief medical officer's update—10 May 1996—and in the book "Health Information For Overseas Travel", a copy of which has been sent to every general practitioner.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the amount spent by each NHS trust on consultancy fees for every PFI project costing £5 million or more. [11255]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Dulwich (Ms. Jowell) on 25 November 1996, Official Report, column 119.

Acute Beds

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS from the blocking of acute beds by patients awaiting assessments or care arrangements from social services. [11195]

Mr. Burns: Information on costs is not collected centrally. An extra £16 million has been allocated to 69 health authorities for continuing care in 1996–97.

Queen Elizabeth Hospital

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if Greenwich Healthcare NHS trust will be required to pay for public transport arrangements to the Queen Elizabeth hospital. [11254]

Mr. Horam: Greenwich Healthcare NHS trust has agreed to underwrite the excess costs of certain specified public transport services to its new site at the Queen Elizabeth hospital, up to a fixed limit, for a maximum period of 18 months.

Damages and Ex Gratia Payments

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total sum paid out in damages and ex gratia payments by each health authority and trust in England for each of the last five years arising from litigation initiated against that health authority or trust and the total annual legal costs incurred in respect of such claims. [11078]

Mr. Horam: The information is not centrally available.

NHS Trusts (Joint Responsibilities)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many locations in England more than one NHS trust is responsible for activities taking place on the same site. [11252]

Mr. Horam: This information is not held centrally.

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11418]

Mr. Horam: None.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost to the NHS of purchasing the use of an MRI scanner for an NHS patient at a private hospital. [11883]

Mr. Horam: No details of the costs of magnetic resonance imager scanning are held by the Department of Health.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many MRI scanners are available in the NHS; and what estimate he has made of the number in the private health sector. [11884]

Mr. Horam: Data on the numbers of magnetic resonance imager scanners in the national health service and the private health sector is not held centrally by the Department of Health.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the (a) effectiveness and (b) risks of photo-refractive keratectomy; and if he will make a statement. [11822]

Mr. Horam: The effectiveness and risks of photo-refractive keratectomy have been the subject of considerable research both in the United Kingdom and abroad, and the results have been made widely available in the professional literature. The decision on whether to provide this treatment in an individual case is primarily a matter for the patient and doctor concerned.

Refugee Children

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the number of refugee children who have been taken into care or whose families have been supported by social services due to their prospect of destitution. [11178]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Drug Wastage

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his current estimate of the amount (a) in volume and (b) in value of drugs prescribed by doctors in the NHS and then not used by patients in the course of a year; and what plans he has to ensure that wastage is minimised. [11242]

Mr. Malone: This information is not collected. However, following publication last year of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys—now Office for National Statistics—report "Residual Medicines", the Department is currently engaged in setting up repeat dispensing trials to test whether this would reduce drug waste. The Department, thorough a variety of measures, seeks to encourage general practitioners to review and effectively control their repeat prescribing. Repeat prescribing has been identified as a priority area in the Department's research programme.

Mental Health

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 175, relating to funds returned to the general allocation for 1997–98, if he will provide the information separately in respect of patients with mental illness and patients with learning disabilities. [11638]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not available centrally.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what extra allocation has been given to health authorities for 1997–98 in respect of (a) mental illness and (b) learning disability; and if he will list the authorities receiving such extra funding; [11637]

(2) if he will list by health authority and other appropriate bodies the reductions in 1997–98 in the special allocation which funds (a) the care of patients with mental illness admitted before June 1970 and (b) patients with learning disabilities admitted before June 1970 in (i) hospital-based and (ii) community-based accommodation. [11639]

Mr. Horam: All health authorities have received increases in their general allocations for 1997–98. It is for individual health authorities to decide the level of resources to allocate to mental illness and learning disability.

In addition, £25 million has been set aside centrally to support the further development of mental health services, comprising a new challenge fund of £10 million, and £15 million for further facilities for mentally disordered offenders. Details of the health authorities that will benefit from this extra funding will be announced shortly.

Changes for 1997–98 in the level of funding to health authorities for the old long stay—OLS—special allocation, which funds the care of patients with a mental illness admitted before 1 January 1971 and patients with a learning disability admitted before 1 January 1970, are shown in the table.

Some 0.1 per cent. of the growth in health authority general allocations is in place of the net reduction in the OLS special allocation to ensure that spending on mental health and people with learning difficulties can be maintained. These increases are shown in the table.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the decisions of mental health review tribunals that are contrary to the advice of the responsible medical officer. [1,494]

Mr. Burns: Mental health review tribunals are independent judicial bodies and there is no provision in the Mental Health Act 1983 for review of tribunal decisions by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if mental health review tribunals are advised whether the patient has a history of violence. [11495]

Mr. Burns: Information on whether a patient has a history of violence is provided for mental health review tribunals in the context of the statements by the responsible authority and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State required under the Mental Health Review Tribunal Rules 1983.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to require mental health review tribunals to obtain the opinion of a doctor approved under section 12 of the Mental Health Act 1983 in addition to that of the responsible medical officer. [11496]

Mr. Burns: None.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if mental health review tribunals are required to ensure that proper provision and support, in accordance with the care programme approach, has been made before deciding to discharge a patient. [11497]

Mr. Burns: Legislation under the Mental Health Act 1983 provides for mental health review tribunals to receive up-to-date reports on the patient's medical condition and social circumstances. Such reports will include recommendations for continuing care. The tribunal must take account of this information in deciding whether a patient should be discharged, and may direct a patient's discharge on a future date to allow time for aftercare arrangements to be put in place.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what activities he has initiated in preparation for a review of the Mental Health Act 1983. [11498]

Mr. Burns: Officials will, from time to time, as with any other major policy area, meet individuals with a key interest to discuss issues relating to the operation of the Act.

Secure Accommodation (Young People)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average monthly cost of keeping a young person in secure accommodation in the last year for which figures are available. [10924]

Mr. Burns: Local authorities in England spent £31.5 million gross on the provision of secure accommodation during the year ending 31 March 1995, while the average number of children accommodated during the year was 245. The average monthly cost per child was therefore approximately £10,700.

Children's Health

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned into the occurrence in children of (a) tuberculosis, (b) rickets, (c) iron deficiency and (d) gastroenteritis. [11839]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food commissioned a comprehensive survey of diet and nutrition in pre-school children in 1993 entitled "National Diet and Nutrition Survey of Children Aged 1½ to 4½". This showed that no particular socio-economic group was malnourished, and that average heights and weights continue to increase.

The Department is aware of occasional cases of rickets, caused by vitamin D deficiency. To address this issue, vitamin D has been made available to pregnant women and new mothers, and children under the age of five. Asian infants are thought to be at the highest risk of rickets, and a current departmental survey, "Infant Feeding in Asian Families", will determine whether further action is needed. The results of the survey are due in February.

The Department's policy research programme—PRP—is funding a research initiative into improved nutritional health, with a budget of £2.4 million. Target groups covered by this include children. The research initiative is jointly managed by the Department and the Medical Research Council.

On a regional level, South West region has funded research into "Infant anaemia—who should be screened and when?", which was undertaken at the university of Bristol with a contribution of £50,000 from the NHS.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by month and year for each of the last five years the number of (a) diagnosed and (b) newly suspected cases of the new strain of CJD; to what extent the trends enable him to make assessments of future numbers; and what assessment he has made of likely future numbers. [11719]

Mr. Horam: The latest figures on the number of confirmed definite and probable cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in the United Kingdom, including the new variant, were published in a Department of Health press release on 6 January 1997, copies of which are available in the Library. Figures on suspected cases are not available. The classification of cases changes as the course of the disease proceeds and a definite diagnosis is usually possible only after death. In the past, about half the cases referred to the unit have turned out not to be CJD.

There is still very little known about new variant CJD, including important information on the incubation period, the route of infection, the level of exposure required to cause disease and the role of genetic susceptibility, so it is likely to be some years before we have sufficient information to make firm predictions of future numbers of cases.

Expenditure Statistics

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of expenditure on (i) intensive treatment units, (ii) surgical departments, (iii) non-surgical departments, and (iv) accident and emergency departments for each year since 1992 (a) nationally and (b) in the west midlands in (1) cash terms and (2) as a percentage change on the previous year. [10310]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 13 January 1997]: It is not possible to identify separately expenditure on intensive treatment units, because expenditure is measured by consultant specialty rather than type of treatment. The details requested of expenditure on other hospital services are in the table. It would be possible to provide data for the west midlands region only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by each regional health authority on (a) conference registration fees, (b) lease cars for managers, (c) United Kingdom and overseas air travel, (d) hospitality and (e) business travel within the United Kingdom in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1995–96. [11718]

Mr. Malone: The information is not held centrally.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Serious Fraud Office

34. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Attorney-General when he next plans to meet officials from the Serious Fraud Office to discuss the work of the office. [9942]

The Attorney-General: I meet the director of Serious Fraud Office regularly to discuss matters of departmental interest, including particular cases.

Court of Appeal (Judgments)

35. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Attorney-General what assessment he has made of the advantages, in cases considered by the Court of Appeal on grounds of undue leniency, of the reasons for judgments being given at the same time as or within a short time of the judgment. [9944]

The Solicitor-General: It is for the Court of Appeal to decide in each case what is the appropriate course. When the court wishes to formulate detailed reasons, for example, in an important guideline case, it may announce its decision at the conclusion of the hearing but promulgate its reasoned judgment later.

Rights of Audience

36. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General what proposals he has for securing rights of audience in the High Court for barristers employed by the Crown Prosecution Service. [9945]

The Attorney-General: An application by the Law Society for higher courts rights of audience for employed solicitors, including Crown prosecutors, is at present being considered by the Lord Chancellor and the designated judges. A decision relating to employed barristers has been postponed until this application has been determined.

Crown Prosecution Service

37. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Attorney-General how many qualified lawyers are employed by the Crown Prosecution Service. [9946]

The Attorney-General: As at 31 December 1996, the Crown Prosecution Service employed the equivalent of 2,010 full-time lawyers.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Veterinary Laboratory, Omagh

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the saving from the proposed closure of the veterinary laboratory at Omagh; and if he will make a statement. [10835]

Mr. Ancram: The proposed closure of the veterinary science division, Omagh laboratory, would have made an annual saving of up to £320,000 in departmental running costs and a one-off saving of approximately £250,000 for the installation of a new incinerator, to meet emission standards required by the anticipated legislation and stemming from Council directive 84/360/EEC.

WALES

Road Improvements

11. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total spending by central Government on roads in Wales since 1979; and how many miles of motorway and trunk roads have been constructed since that year. [9917]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Since 1979, total spending on the roads programme in Wales is nearly £3 billion, including £510 million transport grant, 36 miles of motorway and 171 miles of trunk road have been completed or improved. Three major improvement schmes totalling another 16 miles are under construction.

GP Fundholders

12. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many GP fundholders there are in Wales; and what plans there are to extend this scheme. [9918]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are 210 and a further 25 are expected to become fundholders from 1 April next. Fundholding now covers 52 per cent. of the population of Wales and I expect its popularity to continue to increase.

25. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the population in Wales is served by fundholding GPs. [9932]

Mr. Jones: Fifty-two per cent. of the Welsh population are now covered by fundholding GPs, and this will rise to 55 per cent. by next April.

NHS Expenditure

13. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent on the NHS in Wales in 1996 as a percentage of that spent in 1995. [9920]

Mr. Hague: In 1995–96, spending on the NHS in Wales as a percentage of that spent in 1994–95 was 105.8 per cent.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance was held on 16 December 1996.

Nursery Vouchers

15. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further representations he has had about the introduction and implementation of nursery vouchers in (a) Clwyd and (b) Wales. [9922]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Since my reply to the hon. Member's question on 15 July 1996 the Welsh Office has received some 1,700 further letters and some 20 petitions about the scheme, including some 60 letters and two petitions from the area covering the former Clwyd.

Roads Programme

16. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's road programme for 1997–98. [9923]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Details of improvements to the road network in 1997–98 will be published in the Welsh Office's departmental report in the spring.

Assisted Places Scheme

17. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the proposed expenditure on assisted places in 1997–98. [9924]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None.

Economic Prospects

18. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the prospects for the Welsh economy in 1997. [9925]

Mr. Hague: Prospects for the Welsh economy in 1997 are very good indeed. Employment is rising and unemployment continues to fall; independent forecasters expect GDP in 1997 to grow faster in Wales than in the UK as a whole; and for Wales to continue to have the strongest manufacturing growth of all regions. Business surveys show that businesses in Wales remain very confident.

Income Statistics (Carmarthenshire)

19. Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will express the income per head in Carmarthenshire as a percentage of the United Kingdom figure. [9926]

Mr. Hague: There are no official data on income per head in Carmarthenshire. However, in April 1996, the average gross weekly earnings of full-time employees in Carmarthenshire were 87 per cent. of the UK average.

Burgner Report

20. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will publish his response to the Burgner report; and if he will make a statement. [9927]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health published the Burgner report on 18 October 1996. On that date he announced the Government's response to some key recommendations of the report in a speech to the annual conference of the Association of Directors of Social Services. He also announced that a more detailed response will be included in a social services White Paper, which the Government expect to publish in February.

Meningitis (Cardiff University)

21. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with (a) university authorities and (b) Bro Taf health authority concerning meningitis at Cardiff university in autumn 1996. [9928]

Mr. Hague: I have asked for reports from the vice-chancellor at the university of Wales and Bro Taf health authority on the outbreak. Both reports are expected by the end of January.

Further Education Funding

22. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimates he has made of the trends in funding of further education between 1996–97 and 1997–98. [9929]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Following my right hon. Friend's announcement on 12 December regarding public expenditure in Wales for 1997–98, the Department's officials wrote to the chief executive of the Further Education Funding Council for Wales giving details of the council's grant for further education in 1996–97 and 1997–98 and indicative funding for the next two years. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Youth Unemployment

23. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about youth unemployment in Wales. [9930]

Mr. Hague: Claimant unemployment among under-25s in Wales fell by 3,900, 12.3 per cent., in the year to October 1996. The rate in Wales is significantly lower than those in France, Italy and Spain, as well as below the EU average.

Private Finance Initiative

24. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money he expects to be raised through PFI projects in the next three years. [9931]

Mr. Hague: I expect the initiative to bring about £350 million of private sector capital investment in Welsh Office schemes.

Local Government Services

26. Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the effect of the Budget settlement on local government services. [9933]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I discussed our proposals for the local government revenue settlement and capital spending plans for 1997–98 with representatives of local government at a meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance on 16 December 1996. In addition, my right hon. Friend and I have received around 20 written representations from the Welsh Local Government Association, Members of Parliament and individual local authorities.

Tai Cymru

27. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new units of social housing were provided by Tai Cymru in the past 12 months for which figures are available; and how many he forecasts for the next 12 months. [9934]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: During 1995–96, 3,802 dwellings were completed. Tai Cymru's target for 1996–97 is 3,500 dwellings.

Inward Investment

28. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he will take to ensure equity of distribution of job-creating inward investment between the east of Wales and the west of Wales; and if he will make a statement. [9935]

Mr. Hague: I will continue to work hard for the whole of Wales. Decisions on location are ultimately a matter for the companies concerned. I have, however, set targets for the Welsh Development Agency and the Development Board for Rural Wales to attract investment to areas outside the east of Wales.

A465 Construction

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he estimates the A465 Aberdulais to Glynneath road construction will be completed. [11034]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I shall be writing to the hon. Member shortly, inviting him to the opening ceremony for this scheme, which is planned for the end of February.

Health Authority Savings Targets

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 588, on savings by health authorities, if he will list the principal elements of the savings targets for the health authorities which will be achieved in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [11807]

Mr. Hague: It is a matter for health authorities to determine how to make the savings, and when, provided that they achieve the overall target by the end of 1998–99. Progress towards the £8 million savings will be monitored through health authority annual accounts when the information becomes available.

Health Service Car Leasing Schemes

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance his Department has issued to health authorities and health trusts on car leasing schemes for executive staff; and if he will make a statement. [11837]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Guidance was issued in March 1996 in circular DGM(96)59 and repeated in DGM(96)125 issued in June 1996. Copies will be placed in the Library as soon as possible.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received on the car leasing scheme of Dyfed-Powys health authority which was amended in 1996; and if he will make a statement on that scheme. [11836]

Mr. Jones: None. The scheme is a matter for the health authority.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what monitoring his Department has made of health authorities and health trusts, car leasing schemes for executive staff. [11838]

Mr. Jones: Statutory auditors examine schemes, and Welsh Office officials do not undertake any specific monitoring.

North Wales Cancer Treatment Centre

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress in the negotiations between his Department and the North Wales health authority regarding the operational running costs of the proposed cancer treatment centre at Glan Clwyd national health service trust. [11720]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Welsh Office officials are discussing revenue funding with the North Wales health authority and an announcement will be made shortly.

Sea Fisheries Committees

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will undertake to meet any future funding deficit of the South Wales Sea Fisheries Committee. [11782]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No. Provision for the funding of sea fisheries committees is included in the annual local government revenue settlement. The funding of committees is a matter for the participating authorities.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to support the South Wales Sea Fisheries Committee to allow it to fulfil its increased statutory responsibilities as manager of the marine environment. [11783]

Mr. Evans: Sea fisheries committees are one of a large number of fisheries and conservation groups which have been granted relevant authority status under EU conservative directives. It will be some time before the committees can assess what, if any, specific role they will agree to accept under these directives, and they have been advised that any resource implications will be discussed with them at the appropriate time.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the effects of the reorganisation of local authorities in Wales on the funding and effectiveness of sea fisheries committees. [11784]

Mr. Evans: Ministers and officials have met sea fisheries committees on several occasions to discuss this matter, and a further meeting is planned for this week. We have also written, on a number of occasions, to all the local authorities concerned, inviting them to advise us of any proposals they have for the future of sea fisheries committees. No proposals have come forward which have the support of all the authorities involved.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what additional resources will be made available if sea fisheries committees are given additional powers to develop regional management of fisheries as part of a review of the common fisheries policy. [11785]

Mr. Evans: There are no plans for sea fisheries committees to develop regional management of fisheries as part of a review of the common fisheries policy.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for his Department (a) how many people in total are employed, (b) how many of the total number of staff are (i) male and (ii) female and (c) how many (I) men and (II) women are employed on a (1) full-time and (2) part-time basis. [9491]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

97,966	30,948	855	49,335	16,828

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of incapacity benefit also receive disability living allowance. [10215]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: As at 31 May 1996, 641,000[1] claimants of incapacity benefit were also in receipt of disability living allowance.

[1] Five per cent. scan of the incapacity benefit and disability living allowance computer systems. Excludes a small number of cases paid clerically.

Benefit Fraud Hotline

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls received by the benefit fraud hotline can be related to the Sheffield area; and if he will make a statement. [10303]

Mr. Heald: The numbers of calls for each individual area are not recorded separately. However, for the Sheffield area, the number of referrals for fraud investigation, generated by calls to the hotline, is 1,169 as at 22 November 1996.

Invalid Care Allowance

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what guidance was issued in respect of new arrangements affecting maximum earnings and allowed expenses for those in receipt of invalid care allowance; and on what date; [10332]

(2) when the new arrangements for invalid care allowance come into effect. [10333]

Mr. Burt: The Social Security Benefit (Computation of Earnings) Regulations 1996 and Social Security (Invalid Care Allowance) Amendment Regulations 1996 came into force on 25 November 1996.

For those claiming invalid care allowance for the first time after this date, a leaflet explaining the changes has been inserted in the claim pack. After the regulations had been laid before the House, but before the changes came into force, the Benefits Agency issued a loose-leaf notice in copies of the autumn edition of "Touchbase" magazine. "Touchbase" goes to approximately 90,000 organisations and bodies including libraries, citizens advice bureaux and associations representing carers. Additionally, when a case is due for review, and it appears that the customer will be affected, the customer is notified of the changes.

National Insurance

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employers sought to avoid the payment of national insurance contributions by using shares and share options in ways which the Social Security (Contributions) Amendment (No. 6) Regulations 1996 will prohibit in the last year. [10415]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. However, these provisions are expected to increase contributions revenue by about £30 million a year.

Centenarians

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women who are over 100 years of age living in the United Kingdom are in receipt of a state retirement pension. [10883]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

As at 31 March 1996, there were 1,440 men and 7,960 women who were over 100 years of age living in Great Britain and in receipt of a state retirement pension.

For the numbers of men and women who are over 100 years of age living in Northern Ireland I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Notes:

1. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample.

2. State retirement pension comprises contributory retirement pension, non-contributory retirement pension and graduated retirement benefit.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to publish the results of the survey of service standards in the Benefits Agency medical services. [10992]

Mr. Burt: A copy has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual running cost of the Benefits Agency medical services. [10995]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 5 November 1996, Official Report, column 555.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy that weather stations situated in Wales be used for monitoring in respect of cold weather payments for all postcode areas in Wales. [11425]

Mr. Roger Evans: No. Postcodes are linked to specified weather stations based on expert advice from the Meteorological Office as to similarity of climate and not according to administrative boundaries.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what work has been carried out for his Department to determine the effect of wind chill on buildings; what has been the role of the Building Research Establishment executive agency in this work; and if he will make a statement. [11277]

Mr. Evans: Traditionally, wind chill is a concept designed to show the impact of wind on humans in the outside air and not its impact on buildings.

Advice received from the Meteorological Office—recommendations by the Meteorological Office for the summer of 1996 review of the cold weather payment scheme (August 1996)—placed in the Library, October 1996—suggested that, for much of the country, the effects of wind are too small and highly variable for there to be merit in reviewing the cold weather payment scheme for it, but invited the Government to decide whether further work was appropriate.

As said—to the Sixth Standing Committee on Delegated Legislation (18 December 1996, Official Report, column 10) and in the Cold Weather Payments (Wind Chill Factor) Bill Second Reading debate (17 January 1997, Official Report, column 593)—the merits of this approach will be considered as part of this summer's review.

Benefits Agency (Property Sales)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the Benefits Agency offices which have been assessed as (i) core, (ii) flexible and (iii) surplus in his Department's proposal to sell the property estate. [11002]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information has been placed in the Library.

The proposed transfer of responsibility for the DSS estate aims to improve value for money, increase ability to match accommodation to changing operational needs, and bring in private sector expertise in managing estates, leaving the Benefits Agency to concentrate on benefit delivery.

The Benefits Agency has reviewed its future estates needs and, for the purpose of the procurement, categorised its accommodation in three ways:

Core means an expected continued need for accommodation over the full 20-year duration of the proposed contract;

Flexible means that the agency will be able, but not committed to, vacate such property over a period of years should that reflect operational needs. It does not mean a formal decision to leave the accommodation at any particular time;

Surplus means it is not required from the start of the contract. The agency is currently paying for a considerable amount of unoccupied space.

Any proposed office closures continue to be subject to the normal consultation process, including ministerial approval.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which of the bidders for the Benefits Agency's property estate are led by British companies. [11003]

Mr. Evans: The three consortiums bidding to provide the DSS with serviced accommodation are:

Mapley Holdings Ltd.

Partnership Property Management Ltd. (PPM)

OPUS.

The first two are led by American banks, Goldman Sachs and Nations bank, and the third by the Japanese bank, Nomura. However, each consortium bidding to provide the Department with serviced accommodation, includes property and facilities management companies, many of which are British and all the consortiums have appointed British chairman and are likely to appoint British chief executives.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultations he has had with trade unions regarding the sale of the Benefits Agency's property estate. [11004]

Mr. Evans: The departmental trade unions have been consulted on the outcome of the feasibility study regarding the potential for such a transaction, the decision to implement the transfer of the estate to the private sector and the progress of the project since that decision.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultation period he has provided before determining the nature of the sale of the property estate of the Benefits Agency; what estimate he has made of the revenue accruing from the sale; and what redundancies he estimates will ensue. [11005]

Mr. Evans: In September 1995, the Department commissioned a feasibility study to identify and consider options for the future ownership and management of the departmental estate and announced the decision to implement the transfer on 28 June 1996. The details of the transfer, which is part of the Department's estate transaction, are part of the on-going negotiations with three consortiums and will continue following the identification of the single preferred supplier.

The successful consortiums will be required to pay £250 million on completion of the contract to realise the immediate underlying value of the estate and the remaining value will be achieved through reduced running costs.

If jobs transfer to the private sector, it is envisaged that the Transfer of Undertaking (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 will apply. It will be necessary to reorganise the contract management arrangements and we will always seek to redeploy staff. Compulsory redundancies will be avoided wherever possible.

Income Support (Mortgage Interest)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the Treasury's current assumed rate of interest on mortgage repayments used to assess payments for people in receipt of housing benefit on their mortgages. [11052]

Mr. Roger Evans: The standard rate of interest used to calculate payments of income support mortgage interest is currently 6.89 per cent. This figure is the weighted average of the rates charged by the main building societies; it is based on statistics provided monthly by the Office for National Statistics. Movements of plus or minus 0.25 per cent. trigger a change in the standard rate.

Help with mortgage interest is paid with income support and not as housing benefit.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the dates and changes made in the Treasury assumed rate of interest on mortgage repayments used to assess housing benefit over the past 12 months. [11053]

Mr. Evans: Changes in the standard interest rate set by the Department and used to calculate income support mortgage interest—not housing benefit—over the past 12 months are as follows:

Rate (per cent.)	Date of commencement
8.00	21 January 1996
7.74	21 April 1996
7.48	23 June 1996
7.16	25 August 1996
6.89	15 December 1996

War Pensions

Ms. Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the proposals to change the rules on backdating of awards to war pensioners in respect of ex-military service men who face a disablement not originally recognised as being caused by military service where medical evidence proves at some later date that military service was the cause of the disablement with particular reference to Gulf war syndrome. [11362]

Mr. Heald: Under the war pensions scheme, awards may be made in respect of any disablement which is attributable to service. Where a claim is made within seven years of termination of service—which is the case for all claims received so far in respect of service in the Gulf—the onus is on the Secretary of State to show beyond reasonable doubt that service has played no part in the cause or course of the claimed disablement. The benefit of any reasonable doubt is always given to the claimant.

Where a claim has been rejected solely on the ground that medical opinion is that the aetiology of particular condition is such that it is not caused by service, and there is a subsequent change in medical opinion on that issue, the Secretary of State may review his decision and make an award. He has the discretion to make the award for any period preceding the date of his review.

In order to simplify administration of the scheme and reduce the cost of delivery, it is proposed that where there is a change of medical opinion, any resulting award will be backdated for a maximum of one year preceding the review. No final decision on this proposal will be taken until comments from members of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions—who have been consulted on the change— have been fully considered. Any amendment to the law will apply to all changes of medical opinion, including any which affect conditions claimed due to service in the Gulf.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Land Registration Act 1925

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the report of the joint working party on the possible reform of the Land Registration Act 1925 will be finalised; and when it will be published. [12026]

Mr. Streeter: The joint working party hopes to complete its report in the early part of 1998 and it will be published shortly thereafter.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Child Sex Offenders

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his best estimate of the number of previously convicted child sex offenders who will not be required to register under the terms of the Sex Offenders Bill. [10755]

Mr. Maclean: This is a highly complex matter. No precise estimate is available of the number requested. Officials are preparing a paper containing estimates of various categories of sex offender which I will send to the hon. Member. Copies of the paper will be placed in the Library.

Domestic Burglaries

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the number of domestic burglaries in the London borough of Barnet during each of the last five years and the trend during 1996–97. [10777]

Mr. Maclean: The available information has been provided by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. No estimates for the trend for 1996–97 are available. However, the latest published recorded crime statistics relate to 12 months to June 1996 and the number of recorded domestic burglaries in Barnet for this period is 3,438. The available information for the last five calendar years is contained in the table; during this period there has been an 18 per cent. fall in the number of domestic burglaries in Barnet.

Offences of domestic burglaries recorded in the London borough of Barnet, 1991–95:

1991: 4,209

1992: 4,425

1993: 3,892

1994: 2,532

1995: 3,450

Surveillance Operations

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times per year he estimates that chief constables will exercise the powers granted to them in part III of the Police Bill; and if he will make a statement. [11236]

Mr. Maclean: Figures are not held centrally on the number of authorisations. However, an exercise undertaken to inform debate on the Police Bill confirmed that, in 1995, there were approximately 2,100 chief officer authorisations by police and customs of intrusive surveillance operations in the United Kingdom.

Lethal Toxicity Tests

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which lethal toxicity tests other than the LD50 are included in the category, acute and sub-acute quantitative whole body lethal toxicity tests, in the 1990 to 1994 statistics on scientific procedures on living animals in Great Britain. [11170]

Mr. Sackville: Any tests requiring a quantitative estimate of the lethal dose were included: LD50/LC50 tests, LD10/LC10 tests, fixed dose procedure tests and any other test methods—mainly sub-acute, repeat dose tests—considered to fall within the following definitions:

(a) dose ranging or limit setting lethal toxicity tests (including indicator tests);

(b) lethal toxicity tests (including tests in which a statistically valid quantitative result was required); and

(c) non-lethal clinical sign toxicity tests.

Criminal Conviction Certificates

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to refund the cost of obtaining criminal conviction certificates to individuals who are in receipt of a jobseekers's allowance; and what is the cost of obtaining such a certificate. [11061]

Mr. Maclean: We have no such plans. We envisage that the cost of obtaining a criminal conviction certificate will be in the region of £5 to £6.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal conviction certificates he estimates will be issued annually if the Police Bill is enacted. [11059]

Mr. Maclean: Once the new system for criminal record checks is fully functioning, we estimate that up to 5 million criminal conviction certificates will be issued each year.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement concerning the production of criminal conviction certificates by motorists, when they renew their motor insurance, in order to demonstrate to insurers that they have not been convicted of offences which could be associated with road rage. [11060]

Mr. Maclean: Criminal conviction certificates will be available to individuals. It will be for them to decide whether to show a certificate to anyone who may request it.

Damages and Ex Gratia Payments

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total sum paid out in damages and ex gratia payments by each police force in England for each of the last five years arising from litigation initiated against the police force and the legal costs incurred in respect of such claims. [11079]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not held centrally.

Office of the Data Protection Registrar

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost to public funds for each of the next three financial years of (a) the Office of the Data Protection Registrar and (b) the Police Information Technology Organisation. [11237]

Mr. Sackville: The gross estimates are:

(a) Office of the Data Protection Registrar:

1997–98: £4 million

1998–99: £4 million

1999–2000: £4 million

The implementation of the European Community directive on data protection by October 1998 may affect the figures for 1998–99 and 1999–2000.

(b) Police Information Technology Organisation:

1997–98: £51 million

1998–99: £38 million

1999–2000: £43 million

Police Bill

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the consistency of the provisions of the Police Bill, with United Kingdom obligations under the European convention on human rights; and if he will make a statement. [11235]

Mr. Maclean: I have received representations from hon. Members of both Houses as well as members of the public and the legal profession. I believe that the provisions of the Police Bill are fully consistent with our obligations as signatories to the convention.

Cheltenham Festival

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in respect of the inquiry established by the racing authorities into events at the Cheltenham festival in 1996 referred to in his answer of 26 March 1996, Official Report, column 495; and if he will make a statement. [11080]

Mr. Sackville: None

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11592]

Mr. Howard: Ministers of the Crown are able to make use of the child care facilities provided by their Department on the same basis as civil servants working for the Department.

Taylor Inquiry

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will place in the Library a list of those people whose statements were considered by the Taylor inquiry into the Hillsborough disaster but who were unable to be called to give verbal evidence; [11429]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the list of the people who gave evidence to the Taylor inquiry into the Hillsborough disaster. [11322]

Mr. Maclean: Information about the persons and organisations who gave or submitted evidence to the inquiry is contained in the appendices to the interim report, Cm 765, and the final report, Cm 962, of the inquiry by Lord Justice Taylor, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the findings of the Taylor inquiry into the Hillsborough disaster. [11321]

Mr. Maclean: The final report of the inquiry by Lord Justice Taylor, Cm 962, was presented to Parliament in January 1990 and is available in the Library.

Fire Authorities

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers he has to, and in what circumstances he can, hold a public inquiry into a fire authority's fire cover provisions and proposals. [11335]

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. and learned Friend's approval is required under section 19(4) of the Fire Services Act 1947 when any reduction in the number of fire stations, fire appliances or firefighting posts in a brigade is proposed. Under section 19(8) of that Act, he may, for the purposes of his functions under section 19, hold such public local inquiries as he thinks fit. He also has certain other powers under the Act to order public local inquiries in particular circumstances.

Dronabinol

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what considerations led him to reschedule dronabinol under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 to allow it to be used medicinally. [11877]

Mr. Sackville: The amendment to permit the medical use of dronabinol reflected its rescheduling under the United Nations convention on psychotropic substances.

The rescheduling under the United Nations conventions was based on advice from the World Health Organisation that dronabinol had been demonstrated to have a specific medical use as an anti-nausea drug for patients undergoing chemotherapy treatment for cancer.

Casinos

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to implement his proposed changes to the permitted areas for casino operation. [11875]

Mr. Kirkhope: On 12 November, we issued revised proposals on expanding the list of casino permitted areas. The consultation period ends on 31 January.

In considering the responses, we will also wish to take account of local authority boundary changes in areas such as Teesside.

We will make our final decisions when we have evaluated all the responses to the consultation.

Cautions (Costs)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average monthly cost of cautioning plus schemes in the last year for which figures are available; [10927]

(2) what was the average cost of administering a caution in the last year for which figures are available. [10931]

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 20 January 1997]: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 20 January 1997]: The following forces participated in the CS spray trials which took place between 1 March and 31 August 1996:

Avon and Somerset Constabulary
Cambridgeshire Constabulary
Cleveland Constabulary
Dorset Police

Dyfed-Powys Police
Greater Manchester Police
Kent Constabulary
Leicestershire Constabulary
Merseyside Police
Metropolitan Police
Northumbria Police
North Yorkshire Police
West Mercia Constabulary
West Midlands Police
West Yorkshire Police

Sandwich Panels (Fire Safety)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned into the fire safety implications of the presence of lightweight polymer-cored sandwich panels in the food processing industry and by which organisations this research has been carried out. [11262]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 20 January 1997]: The fire research and development group of the Home Office commissioned the Building Research Establishment to undertake an initial review of the fire safety of large insulated sandwich panels. Small-scale laboratory tests have been carried out to examine the ignitability and general fire behaviour of the panels with a view to more detailed and extensive tests being commissioned by the Department of the Environment.

Indonesia (Police Training)

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what concerns were expressed by his Department in 1984 about the involvement of Bramshill police college in the national police management training bilateral aid project in Indonesia; and what information his Department had about the involvement of United Kingdom trained Indonesian policemen in human rights abuses following their training. [11644]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 20 January 1997]: Concerns expressed in 1984 about the project related to the possible involvement of Indonesian police officers in abuses of human rights in Indonesia; and the need to ensure that the normal work of the police staff college was not adversely affected by any one programme of overseas training. No information was available about the activities of Indonesian police officers following their training.

Behaviourally Disturbed Young People

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies his Department has evaluated into the correlation between attention deficit hyperactivity disorder and juvenile crime; if he will make it his policy to ensure that juveniles convicted of more than three crimes should be assessed for ADHD by a medical practitioner competent in the pharmacological treatment of this condition; and if he will make a statement. [11539]

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

The Cambridge study of delinquent development, which was largely funded by the Home Office, found, among other results, that the incidence of hyperactivity, attention deficit and impulsivity at ages eight to 10 years independently predicted future juvenile convictions. However, the causes of juvenile delinquency are complex and wide ranging, and hyperactivity is only one of many. The Government have no plans to amend their policies in the manner suggested by the hon. Member.

Housing (Northamptonshire)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many housing association houses were (a) built, (b) acquired and (c) restored to use in each local authority in Northamptonshire, in each of the last five years. [11065]

Mr. Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many dwellings were owned by each district in Northamptonshire at the time that the right to buy was introduced; how many are owned at the latest date; what percentage that is of the original figure; and what receipts, net of discount, have been raised. [11067]

Mr. Clappison: Information is not available on stock numbers at the time of or receipts since the introduction of the right to buy—October 1980. The available data are set out in the table.

	Dwelling stock owned by local authorities at 1 April[1] 1980	1996	Percentage change in stock April 1980 to March 1996	Receipts from sales (net of discounts) April 1980 to March[2] 1996 £ thousand

[2] Source: quarterly P1B returns; figures include receipts from voluntary sales as well as right to buy.
[3] The receipts figures exclude receipts between January and March 1987 which were not reported by the authority.
[4] The increase in Northampton's stock reflects the 6,400 dwellings that it acquired from Northampton new town in April 1985. Adding an estimate of the new towns stock in April 1980 would produce a fall over the period of around 25 per cent. The receipts figures exclude receipts between January and March 1986 which were not reported by the authority.

Council Housing

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the housing waiting list, on 1 January, in each of the London borough council authorities; and if he will make a statement. [11313]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their housing waiting list at 1 April each year in their annual housing investment programme—HIP1—returns.

The numbers reported as being on by London borough councils' lists at 1 April 1996 were as follows:

Bed-and-breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were in bed-and-breakfast accommodation in each of the London boroughs on 1 January. [11314]

Mr. Clappison: Information is published on households accommodated under statutory homelessness provisions in a quarterly information bulletin, entitled "Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985: England". The bulletin includes a table on homeless households temporarily accommodated and this identifies those in bed-and-breakfast accommodation.

In the Library are copies of the bulletin, the latest of which provides statistics for the third quarter of 1996.

Revenue Support Grant (Sunderland)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the revenue support grant for the borough of Sunderland at current prices in each year since 1990. [11336]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is as follows. The figures in real terms in 1995–96 prices have been rebased using the gross domestic product deflator.

Year	Revenue support grant (£ million)
1990–91	86.326
1991–92	82.395

Environmental Protection Act 1990

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the sections of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 which are not in force. [11521]

Mr. Clappison: The Department does not hold information centrally on those provisions of Acts which are not in force. However, the annex to Statutory Instrument No. 3056 of 28 November 1996 sets out the provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 which have been brought into force by commencement orders. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Granny Annexes (Council Tax)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 17 December to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) Official Report, column 551, on changes to the payment of council tax for granny annexes, what estimate he has made of (a) the number of elderly and disabled people who will gain financially from the changes, (b) the number of households which will face a higher council tax banding following the changes and (c) the total fall in income for local councils from the changes; and what plans he has to compensate local councils for the fall in income. [11430]

Sir Paul Beresford: We estimate that up to 50,000 dwellings will be removed from valuation lists as a result of this measure, with an offsetting one-band increase in banding in around one quarter of cases. This would reduce the tax yield by around £15 million to £20 million, or less than 0.2 per cent. We do not expect the impact on local authorities to be significant. None the less, future rate support grant settlements will take into account the change in yield.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11595]

Sir Paul Beresford: Ministers' eligibility to use available child care facilities supported by my Department could be considered on the basis of value for money, in accordance with the Department's delegated responsibility for establishing and maintaining such schemes.

Household Estimates (Tyne and Wear)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the mid-year population and household estimates for each district in Tyne and Wear for each year from 1986 to 1996; and how changes in these estimates have affected the projections for 2016. [11613]

Sir Paul Beresford: Mid-year population estimates for 1986 to 1994—the latest data available from stated sources—are reproduced in the following tables. Population projections for 1997 and 2016 are also given together with projected change between those two dates.

Latest household projections data collated are from 1991. These data are similarly reproduced in the following tables. Projections data for 1981 and 2016 are also included. Projected change between 1996 and 2016 is illustrated.

Abandoned Mines

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent communications his Department has had with the Environment Agency in respect of the implementation of plans to clean up contaminated waters from abandoned mines. [12097]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My officials are in regular contact with the Environment Agency regarding proposals for remedial work and the remediation of sites where minewater pollution has a serious impact on the aquatic environment.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will require the Environment Agency to update the report prepared by the National Rivers Authority in 1993 on the pollution of water in abandoned mines. [12066]

Mr. Jones: There is no specific requirement for the Environment Agency to update its report. However, the agency is constantly collecting new information on water pollution from abandoned mines, and it may wish to issue reports or other communications from time to time.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what meetings (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department have held with the Coal Authority since 31 October 1994 in regard to pollution and decontamination of abandoned coal mines. [12067]

Mr. Jones: Ministers in my Department have held no meetings with the Coal Authority since it was set up. Officials have held a small number of meetings to discuss issues related to water pollution from abandoned coal mines, and they continue to maintain regular contact with the authority. The Environment Agency works closely with the Coal Authority and has held seven meetings in the period. These have dealt with the production and review of a memorandum of understanding between the two organisations and, more recently, joint work to identify sites affected by discharges form abandoned coal mines where remediation is necessary and feasible.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what visits (a) he and (b) officials of his Department have made to assess the levels of pollution in abandoned mine workings during his term as Secretary of State. [12068]

Mr. Jones: The assessment of water pollution in abandoned mines is a responsibility of the Environment Agency, which maintains an extensive monitoring programme for that purpose. Officials of the Department of the Environment have made a small number of informative visits to sites affected by minewater pollution, and maintain regular contact with the Environment Agency on this issue.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department collates on (a) the levels of contamination and (b) the methods adopted to clean up polluted water from abandoned mines (i) previously in private ownership and (ii) currently in private ownership. [12069]

Mr. Jones: The Environment Agency is responsible for the collection and collation of information regarding water pollution from abandoned mines and it collects all relevant data on water chemistry and stream biology. Discharges from abandoned mines are highly site specific but, in general, the parameters recorded are pH, dissolved oxygen, total and dissolved iron, other metals, salinity, flow and biological diversity. Where minewater pollution is being treated, the methods vary according to the nature of the discharge and of the site itself. The current or former ownership of the abandoned mine is not relevant to the approach adopted.

Isocyanate Compounds

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct the Health and Safety Executive to review the safety precautions for the use of isocyanate compounds; if he will instruct them to (a) review the use of isocyanate by Scottish Power employees in the depots in (i) Kilmarnock and (ii) Motherwell and (b) evaluate other recent experience and research; and if he will make a statement. [11927]

Sir Paul Beresford: Control of exposure to isocyanates is regulated by the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988. These regulations are kept under constant review by the Health and Safety Executive. The HSE also produces guidance on implementing these regulations with respect to isocyanates.

In 1993 the HSE investigated a report of occupational asthma in an employee of Scottish Power in Motherwell. As a result, controls by Scottish Power were improved. A review of those controls at both the Kilmarnock and Motherwell depots by the HSE is currently under way.

The HSE's enforcement activities and links to industry and trade unions ensure that any new evidence and research is identified and addressed for any regulatory implication.

Satellites

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to announce the outcome of his recent consultation exercise on possible changes to the permitted development rights for satellite and other antennas. [12303]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Last year, we consulted on some possible minor amendments to the present rights to install satellite dishes and other antennas without the need to submit a planning application. The changes were intended to keep the legislation up to date with developments in telecommunications. They attracted considerable support and we have therefore decided to proceed with them.

The main change is bringing the permitted size of satellite dishes in the south and east of the country into line with the rest of the country. The slight increase in permitted dish size in the south and east will then enable householders in these areas to access more readily the choice of satellite channels currently enjoyed by the rest of the UK and allow the different satellite TV companies to compete on a more equal basis.

We will also be giving a new freedom to telephone users who wish to change to a radio fixed-link service enabling them to install a small antenna on their building—or two in the case of a large building. This will widen the choice of telephone services available to the consumer. And finally, there will be a new flexibility to install a satellite antenna rather than a terrestrial antenna on large buildings, helping businesses to communicate more easily.

These changes will increase consumer choice and promote further competition in the telecommunications industry, but will have a minimal impact on the appearance of towns and the countryside. Planning applications will continue to be required in a range of circumstances in conservation areas, national parks and areas of outstanding natural beauty. We are now preparing the necessary order.

SCOTLAND

Housing Associations

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what access (a) the public and (b) tenants are allowed to the minutes of housing associations; and if copies of those minutes are provided to Scottish Homes. [11330]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The publication and circulation of minutes are matters for individual housing associations and practice varies between associations. As the regulating body for housing associations, Scottish Homes has access to minutes of association meetings and requires associations to provide copies of these for all meetings held in the six months prior to a monitoring visit.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what powers Scottish Homes has to monitor the operation of housing associations in Scotland. [11331]

Mr. Robertson: The Housing Associations Act 1985 and the Housing (Scotland) Act 1988 give Scottish Homes a range of regulatory responsibilities, including the maintenance of a register of housing associations and the supervision and control of registered housing associations in Scotland. Scottish Homes publishes an annual report of its monitoring activities.

Irvine Housing Association

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will request the registration and monitoring section in Scottish Homes to investigate delays by the Irvine Housing Association in giving its tenants membership of the association. [11703]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Responsibility for the supervision and control of registered housing associations in Scotland lies with Scottish Homes. I have asked its chairman, Mr. John Ward, to investigate the matter and respond directly to the hon. Member.

I have asked to see a copy of the report.

Science Centre

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had concerning plans for the establishment of a Scottish science centre; and if he will make a statement. [11659]

Mr. George Kynoch: My right hon. Friend and I have had various discussions on this matter. The Scottish Science Trust and the associated network of science centres are the subject of applications for funding by the Millennium Commission. Decisions on those applications are a matter for the commission.

Prior Options Review

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the (a) profit-related pay and (b) bonus given to the chief executive of each Government research institution currently being considered under the prior options review in 1996 and 1995; and if he will make a statement. [11941]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Prior option reviews were conducted on the five Scottish agricultural and biological research institutes—SABRIs—the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency—SASA—and the Scottish Office Fisheries Research Services—FRS.

The SABRIs are non-profit-making organisations. The pay of the directors is determined within the terms and conditions of service applying to staff at the institutes. Pay is performance-related but bonuses are not paid.

The SASA and FRS are parts of the Scottish Office. The pay of the directors of each is determined within the standard pay arrangements for the senior civil service and is neither profit-related nor in the form of a bonus.

East Ayrshire Community Hospital

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he received the alternative proposals for the funding of the East Ayrshire community hospital; what discussions have taken place between his Department and officers of the Ayrshire and Arran Community NHS trust about the plans; what recommendations have been made to him by the trust; when he expects to decide on the proposals; and if he will make a statement. [11926]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Further negotiations between the trust and the preferred private finance initiative bidder are currently under way and are covered by commercial confidentiality. Once the outcome of the negotiations is known an announcement will be made.

Education (Fees and Awards) (Scotland) Regulations

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will link the home fee status classification of students and the rules of eligibility that may be adopted for awards specified in the Education (Fees and Awards) (Scotland) Regulations 1983, as amended, to those who are settled in the United Kingdom under the immigration laws. [12351]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Revised Education (Fees and Awards) (Scotland) Regulations will be laid before Parliament to consolidate the 1983 regulations. An amendment will be laid thereafter to the consolidated regulations to add a requirement of being settled in the United Kingdom under the immigration laws to the existing criteria for establishing a "relevant connection" for the purpose of student fee classifications by institutions and to the rules of candidate eligibility for certain awards which may be adopted under the regulations.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Nelson

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if her Department will assess the advantages of making millennium fund money available for preparations for the commemoration of the battle of Trafalgar and the death of Nelson. [10866]

Miss Virginia Bottomley: The Millennium Commission is currently inviting proposals for activities which will unite and inspire people throughout the United Kingdom in celebration of the millennium. A proposal to commemorate the battle of Trafalgar and the death of Nelson could be made in that context, although it would be for the commission to determine whether such a scheme was appropriate for its funding. It may also be possible for such a proposal to be put to the heritage lottery fund, which would assess it against its published criteria.

Greenwich Exhibition

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement in her capacity as Secretary of State on the role of public finance and management in the proposed London exhibition at Greenwich in 2000. [10766]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The exhibition at Greenwich will be a national exhibition, sited in London, forming the focal point of a national festival which will last throughout the year 2000. It will be funded by a combination of a national lottery grant from the Millennium Commission, private sector sponsorship and revenue generated by the exhibition itself.

The precise structure of the operating company which will run the exhibition is being finalised but the commission will, through the terms and conditions of grant, ensure that the operating company delivers a superb exhibition which represents value for money. Expenditure of grant from the Millennium Commission is subject to the financial directions which I have issued to it.

National Lottery (Northamptonshire)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list each national lottery award made to each constituency in Northamptonshire since 20 March 1995. [11194]

Mr. Sproat: There have been 80 awards totalling £8,864,423 to projects in Northamptonshire. A breakdown of awards by constituency, up to the end of December 1996, is shown in the following table:

[11540]

Heritage Lottery Awards

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many of the heritage lottery awards made to date have been claimed in full; and what proportion this represents of the total awards in terms of (a) number and (b) amount. [10824]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 20 January 1997]: To date the heritage lottery fund has announced awards to 605 projects totalling £370,912,187. Full payments have been made to 77 projects worth £31,071,205—that is, 13 per cent. of the total number and 8 per cent. of the total amount.

A further 294 projects have received first payments totalling £92,655,186.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimates she has made of the amount spent on external consultants by her Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10158]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 13 January 1997]: No such estimates have been made. However, the available information provided by my Department's non-departmental public bodies is given in the following table:

Financial year	Expenditure in £ million
1991–92	9.2
1992–93	9.2
1993–94	11.4
1994–95	12.5

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Behaviourally Disturbed Young People

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Attorney-General if he will introduce measures to ensure that (a) the police and (b) the Crown Prosecution Service obtain an assessment for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder for children and adolescents convicted of more than three crimes; and if he will make a statement. [11535]

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

The Cambridge study of delinquent development, which was largely funded by the Home Office, found, amongst other results, that the incidence of hyperactivity, attention deficit and impulsivity at age eight to 10 years independently predicted future juvenile convictions. However, the causes of juvenile delinquency are complex and wide ranging, and hyperactivity is only one of many. The Government have no plans to amend their policies in the manner suggested by the hon. Member.

Discontinued Cases

Mr. Cox: To ask the Attorney-General (1) what is the number and percentage of cases that have been (a) discontinued and (b) written off in magistrates courts in England and Wales in each year since 1986; and if he will make a statement; [10920]

(2) what assessment he has made of the reasons for the increase in the number of cases written off in table 6.2 of "Criminal Statistics England and Wales for 1995"; and if he will make a statement. [10921]

The Attorney General: The information requested is available in a consistent format only from 1991 when the present method of recording was adopted. Figures since that date were as follows:

Year ending September	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Discontinued	187.399	185.824	159.085	158.594	153.468
Percentage of completed cases	12.8	13.4	11.9	11.9	12
Written off	84.379	103.323	119.598	133.303	110.454
Percentage of completed cases	5.8	7.4	8.9	10	8.6

A case "written off" is not thereby terminated. The majority occur when defendants cannot be traced by the police or a warrant for arrest remains unexecuted. Such cases can recommence if and when the defendant can be traced.

In most cases the reason for discontinuance is that it becomes impossible to proceed further because, for example, key witnesses fail to appear at court, refuse to give evidence or change their story; because defendants produce driving documents at court and so establish their innocence; or because of evidential gaps in the prosecution case which cannot be filled by the police. Whenever possible, in practice in around 75 per cent. of such cases, the Crown Prosecution Service will consult the police before discontinuance and a survey in 1994 showed that the police objected initially to discontinuance in only 4 per cent. of cases when consulted.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EU Parliamentary Building

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations his officials have made to other EU Governments about the necessity of a new EU parliamentary building in (a) Brussels and (b) Strasbourg; and if he will make a statement; [11105]

(2) what representations he and his officials made to monitor the spending of United Kingdom public funds on the new European Union Parliament building in Brussels; and if he will make a statement. [11107]

Mr. David Davis: The United Kingdom has consistently pressed for value for money and sound financial practice in all European institutions. Overall ceilings for expenditure are set by the Council, but within that, spending by the European Parliament on building and other programmes is a matter for the Parliament in the first place, subject to scrutiny of its spending by the European Court of Auditors. We have not made separate representations.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list an inventory of internal fixtures and fittings and building costs, in sterling, of the new European Union Parliament in Brussels; what has been the cost to United Kingdom public funds; and if he will make a statement. [11106]

Mr. Davis: Title 2 of section 1 of the general budget of the European Union for the financial year 1996—Official Journal of the European Committees, volume 39 of 29 January 1996—gives details of the "buildings, equipment and miscellaneous operating expenditure" of the European Parliament.

The United Kingdom's contribution to the 1996 EU budget represented 15 per cent. of the budget.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is (a) the total cost and (b) the cost to British public funds of building the new European Union Parliament building in Brussels; and if he will make a statement. [11108]

Mr. Davis: The total cost of the new European Parliament building in Brussels was estimated to be 831 million ecu, or £612.7 million, by the European Commission on 29 October 1996.

The UK's contribution to the 1996 EU budget represented 15 per cent. of the budget.

Angola

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future of the United Nations mission in Angola. [11840]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The UN Security Council will discuss soon the future of the UN mission in Angola—UNAVEM III. We envisage that following the progressive withdrawal of UNAVEM III at the end of its mandate—28 February 1997—a residual UN presence will continue to be needed. This will probably include a political component, human rights monitors and military and police observers.

Arms Trafficking

Sir Alan Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the committee established by the Government to inquire into controls and procedures relating to trafficking in arms reported; what are its main conclusions; and if he will make a statement. [12263]

Mr. Rifkind: Following media reports linking British companies to the supply of arms in contravention of UN embargoes to Rwandan extremists in Zaire, the Government announced on 19 November that they had established an inter-departmental committee to examine rigorously the United Kingdom's procedures in relation to trafficking in arms and to determine whether there had been a gap in controls, and if so what action needed to be taken. The committee's terms of reference were given to the House in a written answer from the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs Official Report, 11 December 1997, columns 270–71.

The committee's report was submitted on 17 December. It notes that Customs investigators are seeking to establish whether there have been any illegal acts coming within the United Kingdom's jurisdiction. It would not be appropriate to comment further on Customs and Excise investigations at this stage.

The UN arms embargo on Rwanda was not implemented in the Crown dependencies, and there was also a delay in its implementation in the dependent territories. The gap in controls, which the report notes was a narrow one, has already been put right as recommended by the committee. Consideration is also being given to whether the precise terms of the existing Orders in Council implementing the UN arms embargo against Rwanda are adequate.

The committee reached four main conclusions: first, that there had been a lack of consistency in implementing embargoes in the UK, its dependent territories, and the Crown dependencies; secondly, that there were no structured arrangements for ensuring the timely and accurate imposition of embargoes; thirdly, that there was a need for greater clarity and transparency on the scope of the embargoes; finally, that under current UK legislation, trafficking could be prohibited only in relation to binding UN arms embargos.

The committee recommended that:

(a) The UN arms embargoes against Rwanda, Somalia and Liberia should be implemented in the Crown dependencies as soon as possible. The necessary orders were made on 19 December.

(b) All future binding UN arms embargoes should be applied promptly in the UK and in Crown dependencies and the dependent territories, in accordance with HMG's international obligations.

(c) As a matter of policy, all other arms embargoes should be applied promptly in the UK, the Crown dependencies and the dependent territories, in consultation with the dependent territories concerned.

(d) An inter-departmental committee, chaired by the Cabinet Office, should co-ordinate the introduction, application, amendment and lifting of all arms embargoes, including their scope and announcement.

(e) This committee should also consider the preparation of a public document, which would set out the basis and scope of all current arms embargoes and which would be kept up to date.

(f) It should be determined, as a matter of priority, whether the precise terms of the Order in Council implementing the UN arms embargo against Rwanda are adequate and any necessary remedial action taken.

(g) A considered assessment of the advantages and disadvantages of primary legislation to prohibit arms trafficking, taking account of the factors identified in this report, should be conducted as part of the current Government review of strategic export controls.

The Government have endorsed the committee's report, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House, and will be implementing its recommendations.

TREASURY

Bowel Cancer

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new cases of bowel cancer were diagnosed on average in each of the last 10 years; and how many people died of carcinoma of the bowel in 1995. [10833]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The number of deaths that occurred in England and Wales in 1995, together with aged standardised rates per 100,000 population, and the data on new cases of bowel cancer are given in the following tables:

Landfill Tax

Sir David Steel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to permit a temporary exemption to landfill tax for those local authorities which are forced to dispose of unsold paper for recycling, which was collected to meet the Government's target for recycling waste by 2000. [11165]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have no plans to do so.

Bathability Services

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been received by HM Customs and Excise about the application of VAT to bathability services; and if he will make a statement. [11585]

Mr. Oppenheim: Supplies of bathing services in the home when provided by a public body as a welfare provision otherwise than for profit are not liable to VAT. One representation has been received by HM Customs and Excise.

Inland Revenue Office, Salisbury

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the future of the inland revenue local office in Salisbury. [11008]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 20 January 1997]: The board of Inland Revenue is currently considering reorganisation proposals from its network controllers which include the creation of a new-style office in Salisbury.

Insurance Premium Tax (Holiday Insurance)

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenue forecast from the imposition of a rate of insurance premium tax of 17.5 per cent. on holiday insurance sold by travel agents; and what account it takes of switching of the purchase of holiday insurance from travel agents to insurance brokers in order to incur the lower rate of insurance premium tax. [11451]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 January 1997]: Around £70 million of the estimated £235 million revenue yield in 1998–99—published in the 1997–98 "Financial Statement and Budget Report"—is from charging the higher rate of insurance premium tax on travel insurance; the remaining £165 million is from charging the higher rate of insurance premium tax on mechanical breakdown insurance of various types and insurance sold with TV and car hire. The travel insurance costing incorporates assumptions about changes in behaviour in response to the increased rate of IPT and this includes the option to buy travel insurance direct from insurers or through insurance brokers.

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what submissions or correspondence he has received from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in respect of holiday makers going abroad uninsured as a result of the proposed 17.5 per cent. rate of insurance premium tax on holiday insurance sold by travel agents; and if he will place copies of such submissions or correspondence in the Library. [11452]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 January 1997]: No such submissions or correspondence have been received.

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the VAT currently lost to the Exchequer as a result of travel agents selling higher margin insurance with a high holiday discount instead of a low holiday discount and a lower insurance margin. [11453]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 January 1997]: VAT lost to the Exchequer is not dependent on the practice of holiday price discounting by travel agents. The usual pricing structure of the industry is that low margins are applied to holidays and high margins are applied to the associated sales of VAT exempt insurance.

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made by his Department of the commercial impact on travel agents of the proposed imposition of a higher rate of insurance premium tax on holiday insurance sold by travel agents than on similar insurance sold by insurance brokers and agents. [11679]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 January 1997]: Current pricing differentials and marketing practices in this sector, coupled with the fact that insurance provided free by travel agents will not be subject to the higher rate of insurance premium tax, suggest that the proposed tax differential in favour of other insurance agents and brokers is unlikely to have a significant effect on purchasing behaviour.

Work Force (Barrow)

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the size of the work force in the Barrow travel-to-work area in (a) 1990 and (b) 1996. [11022]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 16 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. John Hutton, dated 21 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the size of the workforce in the Barrow-in-Furness travel-to-work area in 1990 and 1996.

The workforce is made up of the workforce in employment (employees, self-employed, armed forces and government-supported training participants) plus the claimant unemployed. However, information at travel-to-work area is available only for employees in employment and for claimant unemployment. The available information, closest to the dates requested, is provided in the following table:

Barrow in Furness travel-to-work area (at September)

	Employees	Claimant unemployed
1989	42,700	2,452
1991	36,100	3,749
1993	32,500	4,921

1995 information for travel-to-work areas is expected shortly, and I will write to you when it is available.

Non-departmental Public Bodies (Expenditure)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of total expenditure by non-departmental public bodies in each year since 1993–94; and what projections he has made for future years. [11442]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 January 1997]: No information is held centrally on the total expenditure of non-departmental public bodies, or of projections for their total expenditure in future years. We do not do so because the annual public expenditure survey does not distinguish explicitly between direct expenditure by Departments and expenditure of the NDPBs they sponsor. "Public Bodies 1996", published by the Cabinet Office in December 1996, includes information about the gross expenditure of executive non-departmental public bodies in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1996, Official Report, column 642, relating to VAT, if he will provide equivalent information on VAT registrations and deregistrations for 1996. [11447]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 17 January 1997]: The registration and deregistration information for 1996 is in the attached schedule.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by her Department. [11597]

Mr. Robin Squire: Ministers of the Crown are able to make use of the child care facilities provided by the Department.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on trends in teachers' premature retirement over the past 10 years; and what reports she has evaluated into advice issued by local education authorities relating to premature retirement over this period. [11588]

Mrs. Gillan: The following table shows the number of premature retirements for each of the last 10 years. The figures vary, but the peak number in 1995–96 was 44 per cent. above the number in 1986–87. My right hon. Friend has made no evaluation of research into advice issued by LEAs relating to premature retirement over this period.

Year of retirement	Number of retirees
1986–87	9,087
1987–88	7,559
1988–89	12,346

1993–94	12,233
1994–95	10,608
1995–96	13,055

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the total sum paid out in enhanced pension payments to teachers taking early retirement in Kirklees metropolitan council area in each of the past 10 years. [11790]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is given in the following table, which has been derived from the Department of Environment's RO1 return. The figures for years 1985–86 to 1988–89 are drawn from memorandum line 2 and are for premature retirement compensation only. Those for subsequent years are for premature retirement and Crombie compensation payments, and it is not possible to split them down further.

Student Loans

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many students applied for student loans in each year since 1993; and if she will make a statement; [11337]

(2) how many students who graduated in each year between 1989 and 1995 are still in debt to the Student Loans Company; and if she will make a statement. [11338]

Mr. Forth: These are matters for the Student Loans Company. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Career Development Loans

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her latest estimate of current expenditure on and take-up of career development loans in (a) the Eastwood constituency, (b) Renfrewshire and (c) Scotland. [11658]

Mr. Paice: Expenditure estimates on CDLs are not available below national level. The number of approved CDLs in Scotland for the year 1996–97 as at 31 December is 617. Figures below Scotland can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Education and the Community (MORI Research)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what questions relating to, and mentioning, marriage were included in the research conducted by MORI on behalf of the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority. [11660]

Mrs. Gillan: Recipients of the questionnaires issued to the samples surveyed by MORI were asked to refer to the consultation document, which set out both the values statements and the view of some of the members of the forum on values that a reference to marriage should be included in the statement on the family. They were asked for views on whether any of the values statements required strengthening. Focus group discussions were prompted in a similar fashion.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons the consultation document on the national forum for values in education and the community issued by SCAA did not specify the date for the end of the consultation period; when it was sent; and if she will make a statement. [11661]

Mrs. Gillan: The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority will take into account all comments received by 10 January when it considers what recommendations to put to Ministers. SCAA initially failed to notify some of those who requested its consultation document that the deadline for responses was 29 November. In the light of concerns expressed to it, it subsequently notified all who had requested the document and had not yet responded that they had until 10 January to do so.

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) parents, (b) head teachers and heads of personal and social education and (c) school governors were involved in the qualitative research conducted by MORI on behalf of the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority. [11559]

Mrs. Gillan: The MORI research included a quantitative and a qualitative element. The quantitative research comprised: an omnibus survey of a representative sample of 1,455 adults, including 597 parents; a postal survey of some 700 organisations with an interest, including teacher associations, parents' and governor's organisations; and a postal survey of a random sample of 3,200 schools—1,200 secondary and 2,000 primary schools. The qualitative research comprised four focus group discussions, each involving five to 10 parents; four focus group discussions, each involving six to eight school governors; and six focus group discussions, each involving four to eight head teachers or heads of PSE. In addition, anyone could request a copy of the document "Consultation on values in education and the community" and respond to it.

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons the concept of marriage was not included in the main body of the report arising from the consultation exercise on the national forum for values in education and the community conducted by SCAA. [11560]

Mrs. Gillan: The consultation document set out the draft statement of values agreed by the vast majority of forum members and quoted a more tightly drawn reference to family values, preferred by five forum members, which made specific reference to marriage.

Marriage is mentioned several times in MORI's consolidated report on the consultation, discussed by the forum at its meetings on 6 January. The forum approved, with slight amendment, a revised reference to the family in the draft values statement which gives greater prominence to marriage.

Adult Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she will make available the findings of the latest Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development study on adult literacy and numeracy skills. [11185]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 20 January 1997]: The national report for the international adult literacy survey will be published as soon as possible after the Office for National Statistics receives the data from Statistics Canada, the body co-ordinating the survey, and checks and analyses have been carried out to ensure we are satisfied with the accuracy and quality of the figures. We expect this to be by the autumn of this year, which is in line with the time scale originally planned for this complex international survey.

Medical School (Southern England)

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to announce the proposed location of a new medical school in the south of England; and if she will make a statement. [11102]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 20 January 1997]: My right hon. Friend has no plans to announce the setting up of a new medical school. It is the Government's view that the planned increases in medical student intakes recommended in the 1995 report of the Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee can be accommodated within the existing medical schools.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the performance of TECs in England and Wales to date in respect of achieving the 100 per cent. plan target in relation to financial systems management information, the collection of evidence, audit and supplies. [11367]

Mr. Paice: TECs have made significance progress in addressing the former shortcomings in financial control relating to training and enterprise programmes identified by the Comptroller and Auditor General in reports on the Department's appropriation accounts up to 1991–92. It was these which gave rise to the commitment to the Public Accounts Committee in January 1992 that the Department would institute a plan to achieve 100 per cent. effectiveness in financial control in TECs and, through them, their providers of training and other activities. All TECs in England are currently assessed as low risk for financial control purposes. The Comptroller and Auditor General's latest report[1] acknowledges that the priority given by the Department to financial control has resulted in a substantial reduction in incorrect and uncertain payments to TECs and their providers. The Government continue to set rigorous financial control standards for TECs to safeguard the large amounts of public funding provided to them and to refine these standards to build upon the progress made through the original 100 per cent. plan. The responsibility for the TECs in Wales falls to the Secretary of State for Wales. The Welsh Office has confirmed that, on the most recently completed risk assessment audits, all the TECs in Wales had also achieved low-risk status.

[1]Report by the Comptroller and Auditor General: "Department for Education and Employment: Financial Control of Payments made under the Training for Work and Youth Training Programmes in England" (HC 402 Session 1995–96, published 12 June 1995).

Class Sizes (Primary Schools)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children in primary schools are currently in classes of more than 30 pupils. [11895]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is shown in the following table.

National Funding Formula

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make it her policy not to introduce a national funding formula. [12065]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government published a discussion paper on national funding for grant-maintained schools in May 1996. The Government are analysing the responses, which have raised a number of issues.

Education (Fees and Awards) Regulations

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to link the home fee status classification of students and the rules of eligibility that may be adopted for awards specified in the Education (Fees and Awards) Regulations 1994, as amended, to those who are settled in the United Kingdom under the immigration laws. [12262]

Mr. Forth: Further to the account of the outcome of the programme of work arising from the scrutiny on enforcement of the immigration laws on 24 October 1996 by the Minister of State, Home Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Maidstone (Miss Widdecombe), Official Report, column 2, I confirm that revised Education (Fees and Awards) Regulations will be laid before Parliament to add a requirement of being settled in the United Kingdom under the immigration laws to the existing criteria for establishing a "relevant connection" for the purpose of student fee classifications by institutions and to the rules of candidate eligibility for certain awards which may be adopted by education authorities and other specified bodies.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Public Appointments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the individuals appointed by his Department to public positions in the last year were first identified by the public appointments unit. [8534]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 10 December 1996]: None of those appointed in the last year were first identified by the public appointments unit.

Chief Medical Officer

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many times he has met the chief medical officer over the last six months; and if he will list the issues discussed. [9634]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I and my officials have regularly met the chief medical officer over the last six months to discuss issues of importance to human health and food safety.

Personalised Number Plates (Executive Agencies)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11411]

Mr. Boswell: The executive agencies operated by this Ministry do not have any personalised number plates.

Wash Shrimp Fishery

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has commissioned on the impact of dredging on the Wash shrimp fishery; and if he will assess the advantages of allocating alternative dredging areas to evaluate the impact of dredging on the shrimp fishery. [11641]

Mr. Baldry: An intensive dredging operation is being carried out in a licensed area known as area 107, well outside the mouth of the Wash, to provide sand to replenish the beaches along 22 km of the Lincolnshire coast.

When asked to contribute to a Government view on the necessary increase to the quantity licensed for extraction, I insisted on an extensive monitoring programme. Work undertaken has confirmed that the shrimp population in the general area has declined, but has shown no evidence as yet to link this with the dredging operations and studies of the area have shown that a healthy benthic community has been maintained even quite close to the dredging area. There are no scientific grounds therefore, at present for moving the dredging to a different area.

Vitamin B6

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he or his officials have to meet Consumers for Health Choice and other consumer and practitioner organisations to discuss the work of the Food Advisory Committee in connection with vitamin B6. [11501]

Mrs. Browning: Officials will shortly be inviting Consumers for Health Choice and other organisations representing consumer, nutritional therapy and industry interests to meetings to discuss the Food Advisory Committee's recommendations on vitamin B6.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what scientific peer-reviewed studies were considered by the Food Advisory Committee and the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment in connection with their recent conclusions on the use of vitamin B6; and to what extent those committees took note of comments on studies of vitamin B6 supplementation by Alan Gaby MD in 1990; [11499]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the published results of studies of vitamin B6 supplementation undertaken by Brush MG and Perry M, by Baker H and Frank O, by Pauling L and by Mitwalli A, Blair G and Oreopoulos DG; and whether these papers were considered by the Food Advisory Committee and the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment in connection with their recent conclusions on vitamin B6. [11500]

Mrs. Browning: The Food Advisory Committee's recommendations were based on advice on the toxicity of vitamin B6 provided by the Department of Health's

Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment. The COT considered 31 publications from international scientific journals, one chapter from a book on vitamin B6 and three reports from other committees, including one from the EC Scientific Committee for Food. The Department of Health has arranged for a list of the papers considered to be deposited in the Library of the House. The papers referred to by the hon. Gentleman were not among those considered.

Beef Producers

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now take action to ensure that beef producers are not more greatly disadvantaged by the effect of the BSE problem than are dairy farmers. [11845]

Mr. Baldry: Inevitably, not all producers will have been affected equally by the BSE problem over the last 10 months, or benefited equally from the wide range of measures which the Government have introduced. While the dairy industry has benefited from the calf processing aid scheme and from the over-30-months scheme for cattle, the beef industry is also receiving direct aid which will be worth over £250 million. The key point is that the survival of the UK beef and dairy industries has been assured. For the longer term, we are committed to ensuring that the beef export ban is lifted and that all other economic conditions are in place to provide both industries with a viable future.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further assessment he has made of the difficulties faced by smaller beef producers.[11846]

Mr. Baldry: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member on 6 November, Official Report, column 582, other than to note that the total of EU and Exchequer funds being made available in direct support to UK beef producers now stands at over £250 million.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which strains of Newcastle disease have been recorded in the current (a) Ross on Wye and (b) East Sussex outbreaks; and if he will make a statement. [12095]

Mrs. Browning: The central veterinary laboratory, which is an international reference laboratory for Newcastle disease, has given these outbreaks a designation of C1. This classification records the way that monoclonal antibodies react to the virus isolate in cell structure.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Child Welfare

Ms Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 127, on the health of British children, what factors underlay his rejection of the Health Visitors Association's survey. [11601]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The "Health Visitors' Association Centenary Survey: Return of Diseases and Social Conditions of the 19th Century" was published on 25 November 1996 without details of the survey's design, methodology, sampling technique or response rate. Without these, it is not possible to assess the validity of the conclusions.

DEFENCE

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the 800 documents on Gulf war illness to which reference is made at paragraph 1.B.17 of his Department's organophosphate pesticide investigation team report D/OPPIT/3 of 6 December. [9593]

Mr. Soames: The documents referred to in paragraph 1.B.17 of the organophosphate pesticide investigation team's report are a miscellaneous collection of papers related to the issue of illness of personnel who served in the Gulf war contained in files located in one particular area of my Department. From the records of the team, the collection comprises internal minutes, notes, briefs and submissions; external letters and faxes; draft PQ material, Hansard extracts and a parliamentary petition; press releases, clippings and media transcripts; and published research papers and reports. The team's report does not suggest that this material in any way represents a coherent or comprehensive picture of my Department's consideration of this issue. The team made this reference simply to indicate the scale of the task which faced them in carrying out their work against very tight deadlines.

By its nature a good deal of the material is already in the public domain. The remainder would need to be checked document by document against the requirements of the "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information", though most if not all of it is likely to be covered by the internal discussion and advice exemption in the code. Checking of the material to provide the information requested could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Gulf War (Vaccinations)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which vaccines on the list of vaccines placed in the Library were administered to personnel serving during the conflict with Iraq. [11293]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the memorandum "UK vaccination programme during the Gulf Conflict (1990–1991)" which was placed in the Library of the House on 10 December 1996, and to the document D/SG(Hlth) 2/3/2/9 dated October 1993 "Report on the vaccines used for Operation Granby", which is also available in the Library of the House.

Service Personnel (Hong Kong)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many British service personnel have been charged with disorderly conduct by (a) the military and (b) the civil police authorities in Hong Kong in each of the past three years; [11317]

(2) if he will make a statement on recent disturbances in Hong Kong caused by British service personnel; and if he will make a statement on the (a) damage caused and (b) compensation sought; [11318]

(3) what recent discussion he has had with (a) the Governor of Hong Kong and (b) the senior military officer in Hong Kong regarding the behaviour of British service personnel stationed in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement; [11316]

(4) how many British service personnel were arrested for disturbances caused in Hong Kong over the Christmas period. [11315]

Mr. Soames: On 21 December 1996, a number of soldiers intervened in a fight between two groups of European construction employees who had been drinking in a bar. One soldier was subsequently arrested for fighting, along with seven civilians. I am not aware that any damage was caused by the soldiers or that compensation is being sought from them. Indeed, the Royal Hong Kong police later praised the soldiers for attempting to intervene in a difficult situation.

The matter is in the hands of the Royal Hong Kong police, who are now considering charges against those arrested.

Over the past three years the number of personnel charged and convicted of disorderly conduct—an offence covering fighting, drunkenness, causing a disturbance and disorderly conduct within barracks—was:

	Civilian authorities		Military authorities
	Charged	Convicted	Convictions
1994	18	14	[1]36
1995	7	4	10
1996	12	6	26

[1] Records of cases brought under military law, but dismissed, are not held centrally.

Four service personnel were arrested for such offences between 20 December 1996 and 4 January 1997, three of whom are included in the 1996 figures.

Commander British Forces, Hong Kong is responsible for all disciplinary matters concerning British service personnel in Hong Kong. He liaises directly with the governor, and with the Royal Hong Kong police where appropriate. The maintenance of discipline is taken extremely seriously. The British garrison in Hong Kong has an excellent record and we are determined that this will continue to be maintained until the garrison leaves in June.

Personalised Number Plates (Executive Agencies)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11421]

Mr. Soames: None.

Gibraltar

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a timetable for the rundown of his Department's jobs on Gibraltar and make a statement on measures taken to assist in the retraining of military personnel for alternative employment. [11819]

Mr. Soames: The 1994 review of the Gibraltar garrison, which identified the core tasks in Gibraltar and associated manpower levels required, made reductions in military and civilian strengths possible. The reduction in military posts is now virtually complete. The reduction in civilian posts will take place over the next few years, primarily in 1998 and 1999; precise details have yet to be established. There are no military redundancies specifically related to this rundown but my Department is working closely with the Gibraltar Government and the trades unions on providing suitable re-training of civilian personnel for alternative employment.

Service Accommodation

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further changes to the terms of the non-movers package 1993 originally on offer to entitled officers Her Majesty's Treasury has authorised his Department to make. [11907]

Mr. Soames: The non-movers package was introduced by the Treasury as an aid to relocating key staff. The responsibility for determining relocation expenses was transferred to Government Departments in 1993. Under that delegation the MOD decided to make the non-movers package more widely available in order to assist those affected by the major relocations that have been taking place in the Department. We have no plans to make major changes to current arrangements.

Mutual Defence Agreement

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of implementing the US-UK 1958 mutual defence agreement for co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for defence purposes since it was last amended. [12090]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many times he has made requests to the United States Government for permission to transfer nuclear weapons information of United States provenance provided under the US–UK 1958 mutual defence agreement for co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for defence purposes to France; [12082]

(2) on how many occasions there have been requests by the United States Government for permission to transfer nuclear weapon information of British provenance provided under the US–UK 1958 mutual defence agreement for co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for defence purposes to France. [12083]

Mr. Soames: We are not aware of any such requests by either party.

Service Redundancies

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the costs incurred by his Department as a result of redundancies in each of the three services in each of the past six years. [11456]

Mr. Soames: The "Options for Change" redundancy programme began in financial year 1992–93. In that year redundancy payments of £232 million were made. In 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 the payments totalled £509 million, £453 million and £187 million respectively.

These costs are split between the three services as follows:

£ million

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	[1]1996–97
RN	12	95	75	28	41
Army	209	328	281	16	5
RAF	11	86	97	143	138
Total	232	509	453	187	184

[1] Estimate.

The payments include special capital payments, early payment of terminal grants, commuted pension payments and the first year's payment of immediate pensions.

The figures for 1996–97 are an estimate as the RAF redundancy programme will not be completed until the end of the year.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the costs of recruitment in each of the services in each of the past six years. [11457]

Mr. Soames: The costs of recruitment in each of the services for each of the last six years is as shown. Total army recruitment costs for the first year are not available as they cannot be identified separately.

£ million

Year	RN	Army	RAF
1990–91	23.48	n/a	26.33
1991–92	26.83	42.20	27.98
1992–93	19.00	42.60	27.45
1993–94	21.10	48.61	27.60
1994–95	19.50	45.91	27.87
1995–96	21.88	56.20	26.88

Armed Service Personnel

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the strength of (a) uniformed personnel and (b) civilian employees within each of the armed services as at 1 January 1997. [11847]

Mr. Soames: The most recent figures available relate to 1 December 1996 and are published by the Defence Analytical Services Agency in "Service and Civilian Personnel Statistics Monthly Return (SCPS) 1", which is available in the House of Commons Library. Figures for 1 January 1997 will be available in the first week of February 1997. The breakdowns of regular armed forces and permanent UK based civilian staff as at 1 December 1996 are as follows:

	Navy personnel	Army personnel	RAF personnel	All service personnel	Civilian employees
Navy budget areas	42,321	988	193	43,502	22,444
Army budget areas	168	98,348	294	98,810	34,426
RAF budget areas	110	192	54,689	54,991	16,690
Central budget areas	3,082	10,221	5,437	18,740	21,471
Trading funds	136	96	206	438	14,960
Service LEPs (including Gurkhas)	206	4,620	—	4,826	—
All	46,023	114,465	60,819	221,307	109,993

In accordance with civilian headcount conventions, part-timers are counted as the proportion of full-time hours they work. Totals may not equal the sum of the parts due to rounding. Included in the 114,465 Army personnel are 1,183 reserves serving in the former Yugoslavia.

Territorial Army

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the size of the Territorial Army in each of the last five years; and what is his Department's estimate of the figure in each of the next three years. [11454]

Mr. Soames: The size of the Territorial Army over the last five years is as follows:

Size of the Territorial Army[1]

Year	Establishment	Strength
1 April 1992	[2]71,000	70,100
1 April 1993	71,000	67,200
1 April 1994	63,500	63,600
1 April 1995	59,000	58,400
1 April 1996	59,000	57,300

[1] Figures exclude non-regular permanent staff.

[2] This is an estimate figure reflecting the drawdown of the Territorial Army to its post-"Options for Change" structure.

The planned establishment of the Territorial Army at 1 April for 1997, 1998 and 1999 will be 59,000. The actual strength in each of the three years will depend largely on recruitment and retention patterns.

Military Provost Guard Service

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Military Provost Guard Service personnel are planned to be stationed at (a) Chicksands, (b) Chilwell-Chetwynd barracks, (c) BOD Donnington and (d) Land Command Wilton from 1 April 1997. [11289]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 20 January 1997]: The Military Provost Guard Service pilot scheme will involve a total of 118 Military Provost Guard Service soldiers stationed at Chicksands, Chilwell-Chetwynd Barracks, BOD Donnington and Wilton. Given the potential implications for the security of military establishments, I have decided to withhold the details of the specific number of security personnel deployed at specific sites under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to Government information relating to defence, security and international relations.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has commenced recruitment for the Military Provost Guard Service. [11287]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 20 January 1997]: Recruitment to the Military Provost Guard Service has commenced, but no soldiers will be enlisted until parliamentary procedures are completed.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to introduce Military Provost Guard Service at (a) Woolwich garrison, (b) Catterick garrison, (c) Dishforth, (d) Arborfield, (e) Grantham and (f) Weeton barracks. [11288]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 20 January 1997]: Should the trial prove successful at pilot sites, it would be the intention to replace Ministry of Defence police officers with Military Provost Guard Service soldiers at other military locations where Ministry of Defence police officers are complemented for armed guarding rather than constabulary duties. The locations will be the subject of consultation with the Defence Police Federation and the trade unions concerned nearer the time.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Military Provost Guard Service personnel are to be issued with SA80 assault rifles. [11290]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 20 January]: The SA80 5.56mm service rifle is the standard issue rifle for the British Army. As such, it will be the primary weapon used by Military Provost Guard Service soldiers whilst carrying out armed guarding duties, as it currently is for Ministry of Defence police officers and full engagement soldiers. In appropriate cases, the 9mm Browning pistol may be issued.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the rules of engagement to be employed by the Military Provost Guard Service personnel. [11291]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 20 January 1997]: I have decided to withhold the information requested under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to Government information relating to defence, security and international relations."

NORTHERN IRELAND

Targeting Social Need Policy

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the role of the targeting social need policy initiative in education in respect of community differentials. [10941]

Mr. Ancram: The Department's targeting social need policy focuses on the targeting of additional resources at those schools with the greatest need in terms of social and educational disadvantage, regardless of the community to which those schools or their pupils belong. Just over 60 per cent. of TSN funding allocated to schools under the local management of schools arrangements goes to Catholic maintained schools, and that is a reflection of the additional identified need in those schools.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision has been made for the costs of redundancies under his proposals for the incorporation of further education colleges; and upon whom such costs will fall. [10942]

Mr. Ancram: Discussions are taking place with education and library boards on the transfer of resources and functions; these include the staffing implications of the transfers. Decisions have yet to be made on the financial arrangements in the event of any redundancies.

School Rolls

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the current total school rolls at (a) primary and (b) secondary level; and what forecast he has made of school rolls at primary and secondary level in (i) five and (ii) 10 years time. [10944]

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

	Primary enrolments	Secondary enrolments
1995–96 (actual)	185,413	150,888
2000–01 (projected)	173,721	154,223
2005–06 (projected)[1]	n/a	n/a

[1] School population projections are made only for seven years beyond actual enrolments.

Motor Cyclist Fatalities

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to record and publish the age of motor cyclist fatalities and the size of motor cycle involved. [11201]

Sir John Wheeler: The number of motor cyclist fatalities, broken down by age and gender, is published in the Royal Ulster Constabulary's "Road Traffic Accident Statistics" annual report. The relevant breakdown by age from the 1995 report is given below.

The size of the motorcycles involved in the fatalities are not currently published although the following categories are held on the RUC traffic database and are available on request: moped, motorcycle under 125cc and motorcycle 125cc or above. It is not the intention to publish this as a separate entry.

Northern Ireland Water

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to privatise Northern Ireland water. [11167]

Mr. Moss: Privatisation of water and sewerage services in Northern Ireland remains the Government's ultimate goal, although it is not practicable for several years. As an interim step, the Water Service has been established as an executive agency from 1 April 1996 which will enable it to improve its commercial orientation.

Public Bodies

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the changes he has made in the financial provision for the headquarters administration of non-departmental public bodies. [10984]

Sir John Wheeler: The planned provision for administration for the main non-departmental public bodies is expected to fall overall by about 2 per cent. next year compared with the previous 1997–98 plans. I expect these reductions to be absorbed through improved efficiency, without affecting services.

Central Appointments Unit Central Register

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if a copy of the central appointments unit central register has been made available to (i) the Irish side of the Anglo-Irish secretariat at Maryfield and (ii) the Irish Government. [11199]

Sir John Wheeler: No. The list has never been made available to the Irish side of the Anglo-Irish secretariat or to the Irish Government.

Libraries Budget

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the budget for libraries in cash and constant price terms for 1996–97 and 1997–98; what consequences this will have for the provision of services; and if he will make a statement. [10982]

Mr. Ancram: Each education and library board receives a block grant and decides on the resources which the library service should be given having regard to the Government's priorities. The budget for libraries in 1996–97 is £25.139 million and the boards will submit their proposals for 1997–98 expenditure to the Department for approval by 31 January.

In its announcement on funding for the education service, the Government have made it clear that they intend that schools, and the classroom in particular, should continue to receive priority, but in giving priority to the classroom some reductions in provision are assumed for the library service which may include a cut equivalent to £1.9 million or 50 per cent. of the budget for book purchasing for public libraries compared with 1996–97. However, the precise effect on the library service cannot be measured until the budget figures have been agreed.

Air Freight

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the extent to which the present level of air freight services between Northern Ireland and Great Britain meets the needs of Northern Ireland industry; and if he will make a statement. [10954]

Mr. Ancram: A comprehensive assessment of the extent to which the present level of air freight services between Northern Ireland and Great Britain meets the needs of Northern Ireland industry has not been made. The present level of air freight services has not been raised as a general issue of concern by local industry.

Marches and Parades

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the cost of policing marches and parades during 1996. [10978]

Sir John Wheeler: Marches and parades are largely policed as part of normal police duties, and separate costings are not held centrally; where the public order situation demands, it may be necessary to deploy additional resources, and so incur additional costs. Costs arising from the main marching season in 1996 have been estimated at some £13 million.

Fluoridation

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to fluoridate Northern Ireland's drinking water. [11168]

Mr. Moss: All four health and social services boards in Northern Ireland have sought approval to proceed with proposals to have the water supplies for their resident populations fluoridated. I am currently considering these requests with a view to making a recommendation to my right hon. and learned Friend in the very near future.

Gallaher Ltd.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what Government assistance has been given to the cigarette manufacturers Gallaher Ltd. in support of the relocation of its factory in Hyde, Tameside to Ballymena in Northern Ireland. [11162]

Mr. Ancram: Gallaher Ltd. has been offered grant assistance amounting to £9,957,000 towards its rationalisation and investment costs of £46.5 million in Northern Ireland.

Personalised Number Plates (Executive Agencies)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11410]

Sir John Wheeler: None.

TRANSPORT

Road Traffic (New Drivers) Act 1995

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the implementation date for the Road Traffic (New Drivers) Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [12261]

Mr. Bowis: I am pleased to announce that this Act will be fully in force by 1 June 1997. It will be partially commenced on 1 March to allow regulations to be made in advance. Any person who first passes a British driving test on or after 1 June 1997 will be subject to a two-year probationary period. A driver who incurs six or more penalty points on the licence from offences committed before the end of that period will lose entitlement to a full driving licence and revert to learner status until passing another driving test, theory and practical.

Rail Services (West Coast Line)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains travelling along the west coast line to London Euston from Coventry were diverted via Northampton, for the last three months that figures are available; and if he will express the figures as a percentage of the total number of trains running on the service. [11010]

Mr. Watts: This is a matter for the train operators concerned and the information is not available in the exact form requested. In the period 13 October 1996 to 24 December 1996 inclusive, of 2,004 InterCity West Coast London and West Midlands services run to London Euston on Mondays to Saturdays, 42.2 per cent.—were diverted via Northampton.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains travelling along the west coast line to (a) London Euston, (b) Birmingham and (c) Coventry (i) failed to arrive at the time advertised in the timetable and (ii) were delayed by more than 15 minutes, in the last three months for which figures are available; and if he will express the figures as a percentage of the total number of trains running on the service. [11009]

Mr. Watts: This is a matter for the train operators concerned. Most of the data requested for InterCity West Coast's train services are given in the table, except where it is not available in that form.

Reliability and punctuality for InterCity West Coast train services (London and the West Midlands) 13 October–24 December 1996 inclusive

	Euston	Services to Birmingham	Coventry
Number of trains run	2,004	2,014	2,058
Number (percentage) of trains run which arrived at time advertised	1,224 (61)	1,123 (56)	831 (40)
Number (percentage) of trains run which arrived within one to 10 minutes of time advertised	443 (22)	490 (24)	809 (39)
Number (percentage) of trains run which arrived more than 10 minutes after time advertised[1]	337 (17)	401 (20)	418 (20)

All data given relate to Monday to Saturday services; data for Sunday services are not readily available.

All percentages are rounded to nearest whole point.

[1] Data are not readily available on services arriving more than 15 minutes after the time advertised.

Motor Cyclists

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which organisation his Department consulted over the implementation of the new compulsory basic training regulations for motor cyclists. [11458]

Mr. Bowis: The organisations listed were sent a copy of the August 1995 consultation paper which first announced the proposed change.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice organisations, consulted on the CBT regulation for motor cyclists, gave as to the amount of time needed for rider training agencies to train and test those motor cyclists and moped riders who are affected by the recent change in legislation. [11459]

Mr. Bowis: Consultees did not know the number that would be directly affected by the change, but some motor cycle industry bodies supported giving a year's notice before the change was implemented. In the light of these representations, we deferred implementation for six months until 1 January 1997, 17 months after the change was originally proposed.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures were taken to publicise the changes in the CBT regulations; what information was given; when it was disseminated; and to which bodies. [11460]

Mr. Bowis: Advice about the change was included in the Department of Transport's factsheet about motor cycling from February 1996, "The Driving Test" handbook from July, "The Motorcycling Manual" handbook from October, leaflets issued with driving licences since August and with vehicle tax renewals from October. Meetings were held with motor cycle industry representatives in March and July to discuss publicity arrangements. A leaflet was prepared and bulk copies supplied in May to motor cycle dealers, trainers and road safety officers. Copies were also supplied to motor insurance companies. Advice was sent to organisations teaching the "knowledge" to learner London taxi drivers in August and October. There has been considerable coverage on the television, including a piece during prime time in September, and in the national newspapers and the specialist press. Letters were sent at the start of December to some 283,000 registered keepers of small motor cycles and mopeds. We recognised that many of these would be unaffected as they held a full licence or had already taken CBT, but the letter would provide guidance were others to wish to use the motor bikes.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what extra resources his Department has made available to deal with the number of people needing to take their CBT. [11461]

Mr. Bowis: The Department of Transport does not directly provide CBT courses. These are provided by approved training bodies which may be commercial organisations, voluntary bodies or local authorities.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for further consultations relating to improving safety for learner motor cyclists; and if he will allow an additional three-month period for existing riders who do not have CBT to undertake training without having their licence revoked. [11462]

Mr. Bowis: In October we consulted interested parties about measures to improve safety for learner motor cyclists and we are currently considering the responses. I have no plans to reintroduce a distinction in CBT rules between those who obtained their licence before 1 December 1990 and those who obtained their licence after.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will repeal the one-year ban on learner motor cyclists who fail to pass their full test within two years of being granted a provisional licence. [11463]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 12 November 1996, Official Report, column 115.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further changes to the motor cyclist licensing requirements he proposes to introduce; and what form these will take. [11464]

Mr. Bowis: A wide-ranging consultation paper about motor cycle training was issued in October 1996 and I shall consider possible changes to training in the light of responses.

Land Compensation Act 1973

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will amend the Land Compensation Act 1973 to lay a statutory duty on county councils to invite individual claims for compensation from persons whose property may be diminished in value by physical factors arising out of public infrastructure works. [11878]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

The interdepartmental working group on blight is currently looking at a range of issues related to losses arising during the various stages of major infrastructure development. I will look with care at any recommendations for changes to legislation which it may make.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

United Nations Industrial Development Organisation

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held recently with his EU counterparts regarding the future of UNIDO. [11892]

Dr. Liam Fox: Officials from EU missions met last week in Vienna in order to make a preliminary assessment of UNIDO's core activities. The conclusions of the group will be considered by the EU working group on the UN in Brussels on 23 January.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons he commissioned an Overseas Development Administration report on UNIDO in 1996; and what was the cost of that report. [11894]

Dr. Fox: We commissioned an external assessment of UNIDO's policies and performance in order to help us reach a view on its continued relevance and value as a development agency. The assessment cost £75,500.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received regarding UNIDO. [11891]

Dr. Fox: Following the announcement on 9 December of our intention to withdraw from UNIDO, we have received communications from the chair of the G77 and China in New York, the representative of the British staff in UNIDO and the Federation of International Civil Servants' Associations. Four letters from hon. Members of this House have also been received.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the value of the work of UNIDO. [11893]

Dr. Fox: As we made clear in our letter of withdrawal to the Secretary-General of the UN, and in a parallel letter to the Director-General of UNIDO, we recognise the value of some of the work of UNIDO but have concluded that there is no longer a case for a separate UN institution for industrial development. We believe this work should be carried out in a more broadly based UN development agency.

Angola

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the progress of the peace process in Angola. [11841]

Dr. Liam Fox: The peace process is at a crucial stage. During her recent visit, my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development urged the Angolan Government and UNITA to complete the outstanding provisions of the Lusaka protocol. We hope that a Government of unity and national reconciliation will be formed on 25 January.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the reasons for UNAVEM III's withdrawal—the United Nationals Angola verification mission—from Angola. [11842]

Dr. Fox: UN Security Council resolution 976 of 8 February 1995, which authorised the establishment of UNAVEM III, envisaged completion of its mandate by February 1997. The Security Council's decision in resolution 1087 of 11 December 1996 to authorise the gradual and progressive withdrawal of UNAVEM reflected the recent positive steps in the peace process including the UN Secretary-General's special representative's declaration in December 1996 that UNITA had completed its military commitments under the Lusaka protocol.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he makes of the effect of the withdrawal of UNAVEM III on the peace process in Angola. [11843]

Dr. Fox: We are working with other Security Council members to ensure that UNAVEM III and any successor UN presence remains in place for long enough to safeguard the success of the peace process.

Bangladesh

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance has been given by Her Majesty's Government to (a) the Government of Bangladesh and (b) (i) British and (ii) international non-governmental organisations working in Bangladesh to assist the Biharis in Bangladesh; and if he will make a statement. [11247]

Dr. Liam Fox: Since 1990, Her Majesty's Government have provided bilateral assistance totalling £770,000 for health and education projects involving Bihari communities in Bangladesh. As part of the Overseas Development Administration's support for the fourth health and population project of the Government of Bangladesh, £164,596 has been spent in support of reproductive health and child nutrition activities by the Al-Falah model clinic in the Geneva camp. Through ODA's joint funding scheme, the British non-governmental organisation Concern Worldwide had received £607,957 for primary education projects.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Accord Information Technology System

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimated (a) start-up costs and (b) annual costs for the new accord information technology system. [10513]

Mr. Burt: The information is not yet available as work to define the new systems has not yet reached the stage where service providers can submit technical solutions, and thus predict costs.

Income Support

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of error in the calculation of income support for mortgage interest payments were identified in the 1994 review of such cases; and what was the average and total amount of error involved. [10815]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Denham, dated 20 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking, how many cases of error in the calculation of Income Support for mortgage interest payments were identified in the 1994 review of such cases; and what was the average and total amount of error involved.

As a result of the National Audit Office report a full review of the housing cost element of all Income Support cases was undertaken in 1994.

At the end of June 1995 the review exercise had identified 308,590 cases in error, the total value being £85,505,632. Of that £77,865,018 were overpayments and £7,640,614 underpayments. Therefore the average value of error was £277.08.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Family Credit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers gaining from reducing the family credit taper to (i) 60 per cent. and (ii) 50 per cent. [10989]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Estimated cost/saving and numbers gaining from reducing the family credit taper (1997–98)

Taper	Family credit	Housing benefit	Council tax benefit	Income support/jobseeker's allowance (income-based)	Net cost	Number of gainers
60 per cent.	+£290 million	–£20 million	–£5 million	–£5 million	+ 260 million	585,000
50 per cent.	+£730 million	–£40 million	–£10 million	–£5 million	+ 675 million	770,000

1. Estimates are based on the 1994–95 family resources survey, uprated to 1997–98 prices and benefit levels.
2. Estimates of costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million.
3. Estimates of gainers are rounded to the nearest 5,000.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the savings to his Department resulting from each of the changes to (a) restrict the amount of housing benefit payable on rents above the local reference level of 50 per cent. of the difference, (b) calculate housing benefit on the basis of single room rent levels for people aged under 25 years and (c) introduce payment of housing benefit in arrears. [10974]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

£ million

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Restricting the amount of housing benefit payable on rents above the local reference level of 50 per cent.	58	113	141
Calculating housing benefit on the basis of single room rent levels for people aged under 25	13	57	62
Paying housing benefit in arrears	105	120	75

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average amount of (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit payable to claimants (i) with earnings from employment, (ii) also receiving family credit and (iii) also receiving disability working allowance. [10975]

Mr. Evans: The information is as follows:

Average amount of housing benefit/council tax benefit (May 1995)

	Housing benefit £	Council tax benefit £
With earnings from employment	31.99	4.98
Also receiving family credit	30.98	4.49

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the most recently available figure for the housing benefit live load in each district of Northamptonshire; and what are the costs involved. [11076]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a month by month breakdown of the benefit savings achieved by the Child Support Agency from April 1994 to the latest month available using the same headings as in his answer of 19 July 1995, Official Report, columns 501–502. [9961]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from A. Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 20 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency benefit savings.

In my reply to you of 12 June 1995, Official Report, col 492, I gave a breakdown of the benefit savings collected from 1 April 1994 up to 31 March 1995. I then wrote to you on 22 November 1995, Official Report, col 231-232, where I gave updated figures to 30 September 1995. In my further reply of 7 December 1995, Official Report, col 435-438, I provided a month by month breakdown of benefit savings for the period 1 April 1994 to 30 September 1995.

In preparing this response, it has become apparent that some figures previously quoted now require amendment. The attached tables show the revisions where necessary, covering the full period specified in your question. In 1995/95, Departmental statisticians examined benefit savings arising from reductions in Family Credit as a result of CSA assessments, and from the withdrawal of Income Support claims within four weeks of CSA action. They concluded that in each case the savings were being under counted. As a consequence, it has been necessary to make retrospective adjustments to the 1995/96 figures in those two categories.

You should also note that 1995/96 and 1996/97 figures for Family Credit and Housing Benefit are now available on a month by month basis. (This was not the case for 1994/95.)

I hope this is helpful.

[9965]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from A. Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 20 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about that element of child support maintenance that is paid via the Agency.

The available information on maintenance scheduled for payment and collected by the Agency is set out in the attached table, together with how much of the maintenance collected by the Agency each month has offset benefit spending.

In addition, between October 1995 and March 1996, £76.89 million arising from Agency assessments was paid directly between parents who do not use the Agency's collection service. The figure for the current financial year, to the end of November 1996, is £95.68 million.

Information on the amount of revenue attributable to Type 'A' interim maintenance assessments is not currently available.

I hope this is helpful.

Cold Weather Payments

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cold weather payments have been made during the recent cold spell to recipients in Northamptonshire. [11786]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Sir Peter Fry, dated 20 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question requesting information on how many Cold Weather Payments have been made during the recent cold spell to recipients in Northamptonshire.

The information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are kept for Benefits Agency (BA) Districts and not by regions. The Northamptonshire District consists of the BA offices at Northampton, Corby and Wellingborough.

During the recent cold spell 51,611 automatic payments were issued to those customers covered by the Northamptonshire District.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Fireworks

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the meetings he held between 21 November and 19 December 1996 with individuals and organisations making representations for or against proposals to ban aerial shells and similar fireworks from general sale to the public. [11041]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 16 January 1997]: In addition to considering a large volume of representations relating to aerial shells, I met two representatives form the firework industry between 21 November and 19 December.

Carpet Sales (Measurement)

Mr. Keen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he introduced legislation requiring carpets to be sold only by the square metre. [11770]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Price Marking Order 1991 was amended in 1994 by the Price Marking (Amendment) Order 1994 to require the unit price of products sold by area to be given by reference to the square metre. The unit price may also be given in imperial units, provided that they are not displayed more prominently than the metric units.

Out-of-town Supermarkets

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the impact on small,independent traders of the increase in the number of out-of-town supermarkets. [11957]

Mr. Page: The number of small retailers has declined in recent years, with some of this reduction being the result of the increase in out-of-town shopping facilities.

However, the Government have taken steps to assist small retailers in many ways, including through tougher retail planning policy guidelines, help with inner-city regeneration and security such as closed circuit television, and the general measures of deregulation and support for small firms. Many small retailers have also shown that they are able to compete and succeed in competition with bigger retailers.

Telecommunications

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to implement a telecommunications key escrow in the United Kingdom. [12018]

Mr. Ian Taylor: As stated in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Luff) on 10 June 1996, Official Report, columns 13–14, I published a paper outlining Government policy on the provision of encryption services on public networks.

Officials within my Department are currently preparing a more detailed consultation paper which we intend to publish early this year. A consultation period will precede proposals for legislation.

EU Funding

Mrs. Currie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the total payments made to the UK under the European Union's European regional development fund and the European social fund in each year since 1988. [11789]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 20 January 1997]: Payments made to the UK under the European Union's European regional development fund and European social fund in each year since 1988 are shown in the table.

Inward Investment

Sir John Stanley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the number of jobs that have been created directly and indirectly as a result of direct inward investment into the United Kingdom since 1979, or since some later date in respect of which an estimate can be made. [11490

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 17 January 1997]: According to figures notified to my Department's Invest in Britain Bureau for the financial years 1979 to 1996, over 366,000 new jobs are associated with decisions to invest in the UK. The Department does not have complete and accurate information on the additional number of indirect jobs created as a result of inward investment over this period.

WALES

Grants to Businesses

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the value of grants awarded to (a) inward investors, (b) existing indigenous Welsh companies and (c) new indigenous Welsh companies in the last three years for each constituency in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [11184]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested. Regional selective assistance is the main form of grant aid available for companies wishing to pursue investment projects in Wales. The following table lists the value of RSA grant paid to United Kingdom owned and foreign owned companies between January 1994 and December 1996, for those constituencies which lie either wholly or partly within the assisted area. The figures include residual grant payments to projects which are located in area which are no longer assisted, following the revision of the assisted area map in August 1993.

Meningitis

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many cases of (i) A, (ii) B, (iii) C and (iv) Y-type meningitis were diagnosed in Wales last year; and how many were fatal; [9758]

(2) how many cases of (i) A, (ii) B, (iii) C and (iv) Y-type meningitis within the Bro Taf health authority area (a) were diagnosed last year, (b) have occurred in the current year to date and (c) were fatal in each year. [9759]

Mr. Hague: A total of 251 cases of meningococcal disease were reported to the communicable disease surveillance centre, Wales in 1996, of which 138 were meningococcal meningitis and 113 were meningococcal septicaemia.

Data from the meningococcal reference laboratory on the typing of cases from Wales are available only to 12 December 1996. They are shown in the following table for the 115 samples which were referred.

2. Laboratories and clinicians are encouraged to report promptly, before sub-typing is necessarily known.
3. In some cases sub-typing is not possible.
4. Data for period 1 January 1996 to 31 March 1996 are combined data for Mid and South Glamorgan health authorities.

Laboratories do not know whether a case has resulted in fatality. Fatalities would normally be around 10 per cent. of cases. However, data notified to the Office for National Statistics based on death certificates report one death in 1995 and one during the period January to June 1996.

The latest available Office for National Statistics data, taken from death certificates, are as follows:

North Wales Cancer Treatment Centre

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to meet representatives of the North Wales health authority to discuss revenue funding for the proposed north Wales cancer treatment centre; [11207]

(2) what assessment he has made of the ability of North Wales health authority to fund the revenue costs of the proposed cancer treatment centre. [11205]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet the health authority. Welsh Office officials are discussing revenue funding with the health authority and an announcement will be made shortly.

North Wales Ambulance Service

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the performance targets set for the North Wales Ambulance Service. [11670]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The standard set for Conwy, Gwynedd and the Isle of Anglesey is that in response to a 999 call an emergency ambulance should arrive at the scene of the incident within eight minutes for 50 per cent. of calls and within 21 minutes for 95 per cent. The corresponding times for Denbighshire, Flintshire and Wrexham are eight minutes and 18 minutes.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the percentage of general practitioners who are fundholders in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [11673]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Fifty-two per cent. of general practitioners in Wales are fundholders covering 52 per cent. of the population.

Bishops (Expenses)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what has been the Church Commissioners' expenditure for the payment of bishops' capital expenses in each year since 1986. [10948]

Mr. Alison: The following figures for diocesan bishops' houses, which include both a chapel and office accommodation for bishops' staff, show the total capital expenditure, excluding fees, from 1986 to 1995, the last year for which figures are currently available. The figures, at December 1995 prices, are net of sale proceeds of any surplus property and also include the purchases of property where appropriate.

As suffragan and full-time assistant bishops' houses are owned by diocesan boards of finance full details of all capital expenditure are not available, but capital grants made by the commissioners are shown.

No new moneys were made available for grants for the housing of suffragan and full-time assistant bishops from 1991.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what has been the Church Commissioners' expenditure for the payment of bishops' revenue expenses in each year since 1986. [10949]

Mr. Alison: The table shows the total revenue expenditure from 1986 to 1995, the last date for which figures are currently available, at December 1995 prices. The figures for diocesan bishops' houses include expenditure on furnishings and gardens, but exclude fees and are net of rental income for accommodation not occupied by bishops.

The figures for suffragan and full-time assistant bishops' houses show half of the total expenditure on periodical outgoings e.g. rates, insurance and repairs, the other half of which were borne by dioceses.

The figures for bishops' administrative costs include their working expenses and staff salaries and pensions, as well as support for the archbishops' appointments secretary, the clergy appointments adviser, the archbishops' adviser for bishops' ministry and the bishops' officer for urban priority areas.

PRIME MINISTER

Bletchley Park

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the current ownership of Bletchley park. [12031]

The Prime Minister: The freehold of Bletchley park is owned in part by the Secretary of State for the Environment and in part by British Telecommunications.

Sellafield

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Prime Minister when he was first notified of the current proposals by UK Nirex Ltd. to build a rock characterisation laboratory near Sellafield. [11915]

The Prime Minister: I was made aware of the proposals in September 1992. UK Nirex Ltd. made them public in October 1992 when it published a consultative document outlining the rock characterisation facility concept.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 21 January. [10662]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 21 January. [10663]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Nuclear Tests

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Prime Minister how much money to date has been paid to the Australian Government in compensation for the nuclear testing carried out by the United Kingdom in the 1950s; what work Her Majesty's Government are currently carrying out with the Australian authorities in this area; and if he will make a statement. [11455]

The Prime Minister: No such compensation has been paid. In 1968, Australia signed an agreement with the UK confirming that the clean-up of all test sites had been completed satisfactorily. However, in the interests of wider Anglo-Australian relations, in 1993, the UK agreed to make an ex gratia payment of £20 million, and now regards the matter as closed.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the dates he has visited Wales since 10 April 1992 in his official capacity. [12098]

The Prime Minister: I have visited Wales on official business on the following occasions since 10 April 1992:

3–4 September 1992

11 June 1993

28 October 1994

13–14 June 1996

In addition to these, I have visited Wales on a number of occasions.

HEALTH

Performance Targets (Ambulance Services)

11. Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the performance targets set for ambulance services. [10366]

Mr. Horam: The patients charter standard is that a person dialling 999 for an ambulance can expect it to arrive within 14 minutes in an urban ambulance service area or 19 minutes in a rural service area. In 1992–93 ambulances reached 2 million calls within the patients charter target, and by 1995–96 this had increased to some 2.6 million, which is 91.4 per cent. of emergency calls.

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Cunningham) on 3 December 1996, Official Report, column 642.

Evidence-based Medicine

25. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to promote evidence-based medicine; and if he will make a statement. [10380]

Mr. Malone: The improvement of the clinical and cost-effectiveness of national health service services is a priority for the NHS as set out in the annual priorities and planning guidance. The NHS strategy White Paper, "A Service with Ambitions" reinforces the Government's commitment to support the NHS in bridging the gap between research findings and routine clinical practice.

Executive letter (96)110 about "Improving the effectiveness of clinical services" was sent to all health authorities and NHS trusts in December 1996. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Fundholders (Northamptonshire)

26. Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of fundholding general practices in Northamptonshire in each year since fundholding commenced. [10381]

Mr. Malone: The available information on the number of fundholding practices in Northamptonshire is:

Fundholding practices in Northamptonshire FHSA[1] at 1 April

Emergency Call Services

27. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of lives which could be saved every year through prioritisation of emergency 999 calls. [10382]

Mr. Horam: The steering group on ambulance performance standards suggested that prioritisation of 999 calls could help to save the lives of an additional 3,200 cardiac arrest victims a year.

Haemophiliacs

28. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about creating a hardship fund for haemophiliacs infected with hepatitis C. [10383]

Mr. Horam: Since my answer to my hon. Friend on 5 December 1995, Official Report, columns 130-31, representations have included six parliamentary questions and three early-day motions. There have also been two debates in this House. In addition, Ministers have received 334 letters, one of which included a petition.

West Middlesex University Hospital

29. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of the scheme to rebuild the West Middlesex university hospital. [10384]

Mr. Horam: Progress on this scheme is a matter for the West Middlesex University Hospital national health service trust. The NHS executive is awaiting the full business case from the trust.

Paramedics

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by region the number of qualified paramedics per head of population. [8077]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is in the table. These figures are based on the number of ambulance paramedics recorded by the Department of Health's September 1995 non-medical work force census—the first year in which ambulance paramedics were separately identified in the census.

The regional figures shown in the table should be interpreted with caution because the population figures take no account of the relative needs of the people within each region and in some cases the population served by organisations within a particular region can be greater than the population of the region itself.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Service ambulance paramedics per 10,000 head of population by NHS executive regional office areas; England 1995

	Ambulance paramedics per 10,000 head of population

[1] Based on revised figures. The Department of Health's statistical bulletin: NHS hospital and community health services non-medical staff in England 1985–1995, reported that there were 6,760 ambulance paramedics in England at September 1995. However, subsequent investigation shows that figures for the London Ambulance Service included staff with partial paramedic training. With these staff excluded, there were 6,000 paramedics at September 1995.

[2] Figures for North and South Thames NHS executive regional office areas have been combined to allow the inclusion of figures for the London Ambulance Service.

Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each year his Department has sponsored research into transmissible spongiform encephalopathy, (a) the number of projects sponsored, (b) the resources committed to the research and (c) the number of publications arising from the research; and if he will place in the Library a list of titles of all published conferences, research papers, monographs and other research reports on transmissible spongiform encephalopathy produced by or on behalf of his Department. [10627]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health and the Scottish Office department of health jointly fund the national Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit in Edinburgh, which was set up in 1990. To date, expenditure on the unit has totalled some £1.4 million and future needs are being reviewed. The unit published an annual report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Since 1993, the Department of Health has spent £0.5 million on research into transmissible spongiform encephalopathy. A list of projects which have received funding from the Department of Health up to 16 January 1997 is shown in the table. A new strategy for research and development into the human health aspects of TSEs has been developed since March 1996. Details were published on 11 November and have been placed in the Library.

The directed programmes of relevant funders are being commissioned against the strategy, for which the Department of Health plans to make £9.5 million available over the next three years. A joint Medical Research Council-Department of Health call for proposals was advertised in the academic press in May 1996. Projects successful after shortlisting by the DH/MRC TSE research advisory group have been invited to submit full proposals, some of which have been approved and are on the point of being funded.

A list of Government publications on TSEs has been placed in the Library. All researchers are expected to publish the results of their work but, in view of the long time scale of TSE research, it may be some time before projects which are current or just getting under way will be in a position to publish.

Mr. Malone: No such allocations have been made. The costs of prescribing beta interferon are expected to be met from within health authority general allocations, having regard to local priorities.

School Milk

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will meet the school milk campaigners to discuss the "Hunger Within" report. [11603]

Mr. Horam: Officials met representatives of the school milk campaign on 22 October 1996 when aspects of the then forthcoming report were discussed. The SMC is in regular correspondence with the Department and with my colleagues from the Department for Education and Employment and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. SMC is aware of the Government's position and a further meeting at this stage is not planned.

Behaviourally Disturbed Young People

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure the representation of (a) his Department and (b) the chief medical officer's office at the meeting arranged under the auspices of the British Association for Psychopharmacology in London on 27 January regarding prescription of medicine for behaviourally disturbed young people; and if he will make a statement. [11510]

Mr. Burns: This will depend on the availability of relevant officials. The Department arranges to keep in touch with all meetings on professional matters of significant concern.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve the detection rate of children suffering from attention deficit hyperactivity disorder by child psychiatrists and paediatricians; and if he will make a statement. [11508]

Mr. Burns: Matters concerning clinical performance and effectiveness are for the bodies—including the royal colleges—responsible for professional training, accreditation and development programmes and for clinical audit at local level. The Department has funded and supported a number of initiatives aimed at highlighting the importance of identifying and treating attention deficit hyperactivity disorder.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11590]

(2) what is the total budget for speech therapy services in (a) Tower Hamlets, (b) Newham and (c) City and Hackney. [11485]

Mr. Burns: Assessment of need and the allocation of funding are matters for the health authorities concerned. We do not hold details centrally.

Prescribed Cannabis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much cannabis in (a) tincture and (b) other forms was prescribed by qualified medical practitioners in each year from 1967 to 1970. [11526]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available.

GP Prescription List

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what period of notice was given to GPs in England and Wales in respect of the deadline for comments on the recent list of drugs to be removed from GP prescription; how many representations were received; and what discussions his officials have had with the British Medical Association about the period of notice. [11320]

Mr. Malone: On 25 November 1996, a press release was issued announcing consultation on recommended changes to the list of products which general practitioners may not prescribe on the national health service. Comments were invited by 9 January 1997. About 200 representations have been received in response. A copy of the press release was sent to the General Medical Services Committee of the British Medical Association and to the Royal College of General Practitioners. There have been no discussions with the BMA about the period of notice. In responding to the proposals, the BMA has asked us to notify GPs as soon as possible of any changes which may be made to the list of non-prescribable items.

Nutrition

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the findings of the Southampton university health education report, "Children Who Have No Breakfast"; and if he will make a statement. [11602]

Mr. Horam: We have not seen the report referred to. We are aware of work from Southampton university addressing the number of children who do not eat a nutritious breakfast. Breakfast can make an important contribution to the nutritional requirements of both adults and children as part of a healthy balanced diet.

Agency Nurses

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what checks his Department conducts on the qualifications of agency nursing personnel; [11709]

(2) what assistance his Department gives to (a) hospital trusts and (b) health authorities in checking the qualifications of agency nursing staff. [11708]

Mr. Malone: This is a matter for local managers.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the proposed study on the outcome measures for MS will begin. [11879]

Mr. Malone: A final decision on starting this study will be made once a satisfactory protocol for outcome measures has been finalised.

Asthma

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) incidence and (b) prevalence of asthma (i) by region and (ii) nationally in each of the last five years. [12041]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available. The best available information was brought together in "Asthma: An Epidemiological Overview", produced by the central health monitoring unit of the Department of Health and published in March 1995. Copies were placed in the Library.

Public Health Laboratory Service

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the report on the future of the public health laboratory service. [12043]

Mr. Horam: It is not the Government's practice to publish prior options review reports. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health will make an announcement to the House on the outcome of the public health laboratory service review as soon as it has been agreed with ministerial colleagues, following which he will lodge a memorandum in the Library.

Dioxin Emissions

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the health hazards associated with dioxin emissions; and if he will make a statement. [10423]

Mr. Horam: The expert advisory Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment has reviewed the toxicology of dioxins on a number of occasions. A tolerable daily intake for dioxins of 10 picograms per kilogram of body weight per day was set in by the committee in 1991. Following a United States Environmental Protection Agency draft report on dioxins in September 1994, COT reviewed all the available data and concluded that the new information continued to support its earlier advice and the TDI remained unchanged.

The results of the first review on dioxins were reported in "Pollution Paper No. 27: Dioxins in the Environment"—HMSO: London, 1989. Pollution papers are available in the Library.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the recent Ecoli epidemic; what plans he has to introduce new measures to prevent such epidemics; and if he will make a statement. [10424]

Mr. Horam: An assessment of the outbreak in Scotland is being made by an expert group under the chairmanship of Professor Pennington. I refer the hon. Member to the statement made to the House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland on 15 January 1997, Official Report, columns 323–26.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the annual number of cases of food poisoning in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement. [10463]

Mr. Horam: The number of cases of food poisoning notified to the Office for National Statistics is published in "Series MB2 Communicable Disease Statistics", copies of which are available in the Library.

Edgware General Hospital

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the letter from the hon. Member for Harrow, East sent to him on 6 December, if he will invoke his powers under National Health Service Acts to secure from the Barnet district health authority an extension of the range of emergency services available at Edgware general hospital, in accordance with the terms of his written undertaking to the hon. Members for Hendon, North (Sir J. Gorst) and for Harrow, East submitted on 11 June; and if he will place a copy of this letter in the Library. [10537]

Mr. Dorrell: I do not intend to publish private and confidential correspondence between myself and hon. Members; I have no intention of using my reserve powers under the National Health Service Acts in respect of current proposals for Edgware hospital; I believe that the decisions reached by Barnet health authority at a meeting on 25 September 1996 reflect the real commitment of the NHS to respond to the concerns of the people of Edgware.

Life Expectancy

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent life expectancy has changed since 1979. [10661]

Mr. Horam: Life expectancy at birth in England has increased in men from 70.4 years in 1979 to 74.3 years in 1995 and in women from 76.4 years in 1979 to 79.6 years in 1995.

GP-prescribed Drugs

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the expenditure on general practitioner-prescribed (a) tranquilisers and (b) anti-depressants in each health district in England over the last three years and for the half year to October 1996 in cash terms as expenditure per head of resident population in each district. [11612]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 22 July 1996, Official Report, column 112. Information before 1995–96 is not held and available information for the half year to September 1996 will be placed in the Library.

Suicides

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many suicides occurred in (a) each health district in England, and (b) NHS institutions in the last three complete years, and for the half year to October 1996; and if he will express these figures as a rate per head of the population. [11616]

Mr. Burns: Details of the number of suicides in (a) each health district in England and (b) NHS facilities in the last three complete years will be placed in the Library. Data for the first half of 1996 are not yet available. For (b) it is not possible to calculate population rates because there are no hospital populations available to use as denominators.

Ambulance Trusts (Staff)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) paramedics, (b) technicians and (c) staff in total were employed by ambulance trusts in each of the last five years. [8505]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 12 December 1996]: The information available centrally is shown in the table. Ambulance technicians are not separately identified in the Department of Health's annual non-medical work force census and paramedics were not separately identified until 1995—the latest year for which census information is available.

The figures exclude staff not employed in trusts e.g. directly managed units (including the London Ambulance Service).

[2] Ambulance staff include ambulance men and women, ambulance officers and control assistants.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Experiments (Greyhounds)

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the suppliers of the six greyhounds used in scientific procedures during 1995. [11298]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 January 1997]: The establishment concerned purchased the greyhounds from racing kennels and from show breeding kennels.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many project licences issued since 1 June 1994 under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 are still valid for the use of non-purpose-bred greyhounds in research. [11299]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 January 1997]: One—for the study of osteoarthritis in greyhounds. The six dogs were purchased by the establishment concerned to form a control group and were used solely for blood sampling purposes.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many exemptions have been granted under article 10(3) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 to allow the use of non-purpose-bred greyhounds in research since 1 June 1994. [11300]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 January 1997]: One.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the greyhounds used in scientific procedures in 1995 were former National Greyhound Racing Club registered greyhounds. [11301]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 January 1997]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Child Abuse

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the average number of convicted paedophiles released in each of the last three years, by category of conviction; and what proportion of each category have received treatment (a) prior to and (b) after release. [11711]

Mr. Maclean: From information available centrally on the release and treatment of sex offenders, separate estimates of paedophiles cannot be made with any accuracy.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions have been obtained in each of the last 10 years for (a) enticing children into prostitution and (b) living off the earnings of child prostitution. [11779]

Mr. Maclean: Court proceedings data collected centrally on the number of offenders convicted of living on immoral earnings do not identify the age of the prostitute.

Available information on the number of convictions for enticing children into prostitution is given in the table:

Number of persons convicted at all courts for an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 section 28[1] 1985–1995

England and Wales

	Convictions
1985	—
1986	3
1987	3
1988	1
1989	1
1990	2
1991	2
1992	—
1993	1
1994	—
1995	3

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of convictions for paedophile offenders have related to offenders with previous convictions in the last three years. [11712]

Mr. Maclean: Estimates are available centrally from samples of offenders[1,2] convicted in 1994 and 1996. These are given in the table. However, estimates for these two years are not directly comparable[1,3]. In particular, improvements in offence recording since 1994 have made it possible to include offenders convicted of rape or buggery with a child victim in the 1996 estimates, whereas these are excluded from the 1994 figures.

Percentage of offenders convicted of a sexual offence with a child victim who had a previous conviction, by type of previous conviction and year

Type of previous conviction	Percentage of offenders[1,2] convicted of a sexual offence with a child victim in:
	1994	1996
All offences[2]	54	52
Any sexual offence	15	18
Sexual offence with a child victim[3]	10	12

Notes:

[1] Figures are based on a sample, from the Home Office offenders index, of those sentenced in each year. For 1994, the sample comprised the court disposals in three weeks. In 1996, two weeks were selected.

[2] Convictions prior to the setting up of the offenders index in 1963 are not included, but only a small number of offenders with convictions in 1994 or later are likely to have a last previous relevant conviction in 1962 or earlier. The offences covered by the offenders index are those on the "standard list". This includes all indictable offences, including those triable either way, and some more serious summary offences.

[3] Prior to 1995, statistics supplied to the Home Office for the offences of rape and buggery did not generally indicate the age of the victim. Since 1995, this has been the case for a more limited range of offences.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police authorities in England and Wales have specific units dealing with (a) child pornography and (b) child prostitution. [11778]

Mr. Maclean: This specific information is not held centrally. Forty two police forces in England and Wales have units dedicated to work on child/family protection. Many forces also have specialised units to deal with all forms of pornography and prostitution. All forces have officers specifically trained to deal with all these issues. The allocation of staff and resources for tackling child pornography and child prostitution is an operational matter for each chief officer.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's latest evaluation of the success of treatment programmes for convicted paedophiles (a) in prison, (b) in residential treatment centres and (c) in day centre treatment centres. [11702]

Mr. Maclean: The Prison Service has commissioned an evaluation of sex offender treatment programmes delivered in prison. The findings are due to be reported in June this year.

The findings of a Home Office evaluation of community-based sex offender treatment were published in October 1996.

These two evaluations are not concerned exclusively with the treatment of paedophiles, but a large proportion of the offenders receiving treatment fall within this category. Copies of the reports will be placed in the Library.

Immoral Earnings

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many convictions there have been for living on immoral earnings in each of the last 10 years; [11780]

(2) how many successful prosecutions were made against those accused of living of immoral earnings in each of the last 10 years. [11781]

Mr. Maclean: Available information is given in the table.

England and Wales

Police Bill

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Data Protection Registrar concerning the protection for individuals in the provisions of the Police Bill; and if he will make a statement. [11346]

Mr. Maclean: The Data Protection Registrar commented on the Government's proposals for access to criminal records for employment and other purposes which were set out in the White Paper, "On the Record", and which are now being taken forward in part V of the Police Bill. She welcomed the Government's intention to put arrangements for access to criminal records for employment related purposes on a statutory footing, commented that the proposed arrangements go a long way towards setting up a framework acceptable from a data protection perspective and noted that appropriate action should be taken to discourage or prevent enforced subject access to criminal records. As indicated during Report state of the Police Bill, the Government intend to consider whether it might be possible to amend the Police Bill to prevent this practice. The Registrar has also written to the Home Office about the future role of the National Criminal Intelligence Service as our national unit for liaising with Europol.

Interception of Communications

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been investigated by the Interception of Communications Tribunal; how many of these investigations detected a breach of the Interception of Communications Act 1985; how much compensation has been paid; and how many staff are employed by the Interception of Communications Tribunal. [12021]

Mr. Howard: The tribunal has investigated 486 complaints since the Interception of Communications Act 1985 came into force on 10 April 1986. On no occasion has the tribunal concluded that there has been a contravention of the Act; the question of compensation has not therefore arisen. The Interception of Communications Tribunal is supported by one member of staff on a part-time basis.

Police Numbers

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the increase in police numbers in England and Wales in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [12540]

Mr. Maclean: It is for chief constables to decide on the allocation of their resources and the recruitment of officers. On the basis of estimates, chief constables have said that they expect police numbers to increase by around 1,000 in England and Wales in the 12 months ending March 1997. This would deliver a total of about 128,000 officers.

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the numbers of police officers released for operational duties in England and Wales in 1996–97 following civilianisation. [12585]

Mr. Maclean: Chief constables have estimated that between 1 April 1996 and 31 March 1997 an additional 1,151 police officer posts will have been civilianised, enabling those officers to be released for operational duties.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Business Licences

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many different types of business licence currently exist; and if he will list them. [11809]

Mr. Freeman: A total of 365 types of business licences, licensing regimes and registrations are being looked at as part of the Government's review of business licensing. I have placed in the Library of the House a full list of these licences.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what child care facilities are supported by his Department; and who is entitled to use them. [11589]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The child care facilities available within the Departments and agencies, and those entitled to use them, are as follows:

	Facilities	Available

Departmental Public Relations Budgets

Mr. Alton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what are the public relations budgets for each Government Department for 1996–97; and what were the equivalent figures in 1993 and 1988. [11502]

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not held centrally.

Public Appointments

Mr. Alton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many salaried positions are currently within the gift of the Prime Minister and Ministers of the Crown. [11503]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Information is not held centrally in the form requested. However, "Public Bodies 1996", published by the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service, shows that as at 1 September 1996, out of a total of 40,056 public appointments, 34,864 were made by HM the Queen or her Ministers. Entries for individual sponsor Departments show which public appointments are remunerated.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress on the Government's response to the recommendations made by Sir Richard Scott following his inquiry into the export of arms and arms-related goods to Iraq. [12443]

Mr. Freeman: Consideration of the Government's response to all recommendations in Sir Richard Scott's report is virtually complete. A summary of the responses is set out in the table.

Issue	Scott Report section	Action
(a) Inquiry Procedures	K1	Completed—The Government referred Sir Richard Scott's recommendations on public inquiries to the independent Council on Tribunals, following a period of public consultation. The Lord Chancellor, in a statement to the House on 21 November [WA 149] accepted the Council's advice and said that it will be of considerable value when setting up inquiries. Copies of the advice were placed in the Libraries of both Houses.
(b) Export Controls and Licensing Procedures	K2 and K3	Continuing—The President of the Board of Trade issued a public consultation document on the power of Government to control strategic exports and licensing procedures on 24 July. It was announced by way of a written Parliamentary answer [WA 481], and copies of the consultation document were placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The closing date for receipt of comments was the end of October. The responses are currently being considered and will form part of the wider consideration by the Government of the way ahead on strategic export controls. The Foreign Secretary announced to the House on 21 January [WA 536–537] the conclusions and recommendations of the Inter-departmental review into the supply of arms of Rwanda. This work will also be taken into account in the further consideration being given to strategic exports controls. The Government is likely to need to undertake further more detailed consultation with directly interested parties as detailed proposals are developed.
(c) Role of Customs and Exercise in Export Control	K4	Completed—The Government agreed to increased supervision by the Attorney General of certain Customs and Excise export prosecutions. Details were announced in a written Parliamentary Answer on 17 June [WA 337] and a paper placed in the Libraries of both Houses. On recommendations relating to Customs and Excise legislation and procedures, the Government has accepted these as they stand, or in a few cases, will meet the concerns reflected in an alternative manner. This was announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in a written Parliamentary

		Answer on 4 July, [WA 490] and a paper providing fuller details was placed in the Libraries of both Houses.
(d) Prosecution Producers	K5	Completed with the exception of one small aspect—The Government announced by the way of a written Parliamentary Answer on 6 June [WA 554–555] that the concerns raised by Sir Richard Scott would be addressed by the provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act and the code of practice to be promulgated under the Act. A paper giving fuller details was placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Booklets giving guidance to civil servants and other Crown servants on the procedure to be followed in relation to the disclosure of information relevant to an investigation or prosecution of a criminal offence will be published shortly.
(e) Public Interest Immunity	K6	Completed—Following public consultation, the Government announced in the House on 18 December that the division into class and contents claims would no longer be applied by the Government and that public interest immunity would be claimed only when it was believed that disclosure would cause real damage or harm to the public interest [cols. 949–958]. A paper setting out the Government's approach was placed in the Libraries of both Houses.
(f) Use of Intelligence by Government Departments	K7	Completed—A paper setting out the improvements Government departments have made, or are in the process of making, on the handling of intelligence was sent to the Intelligence and Security Committee on 14 May. The Government awaits the Report of the Committee which is expected to be published early in 1997.
(g) Informing Parliament about Arms Sales	K8	Completed—Following consultation the Government announced to Parliament on 23 July [WA 212–213] that in future it would answer questions about defence exports as fully as possible. Any exceptions will meet the test in the "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information" that the harm or prejudice which might arise from disclosure outweighs the public interest in making such information available. A paper providing fuller details was placed in the Libraries of both Houses.
(h) Ministerial Accountability	K8	The Government provided a Memorandum to the Public Service Committee on 29 March [HC 313-III], setting out the Government's understanding of the requirements of Ministerial Accountability and the provision of information to Parliament, as part of the Committee's consideration of Ministerial Accountability and Responsibility. Following receipt of the Committee's report, the Government published its response on 7 November [WA 594] reaffirming its commitments to arrangements under which it will remain open and fully accountable. Annexed to the response [HC 67] was "New Guidance to Officials on Drafting Answers to Parliamentary Questions" which makes clear that when information is refused in response to Parliamentary Questions reasons should be given relating to the exemptions laid down in the "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information".

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make it her policy to establish a national disaster fund from the proceeds of the national lottery. [11723]

There are no plans to establish a national disaster fund from the proceeds of the national lottery.

Legal Aid

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions in each of the last five years legal aid certificates have been discharged by the Legal Aid Committee or legal aid department of the Law Society of Northern Ireland when evidence that incorrect information was supplied by claimants for the purpose of legal aid was established. [10955]

Mr. Streeter: Since 1 April 1994, 13 legal aid certificates have been revoked on account of false statements being made on applications. One was revoked in 1994–95, 11 in 1995–96 and one in the current financial year.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many prosecutions having been initiated against persons who succeeded in obtaining legal aid certificates were later discharged when it was established that the award was based on incorrect information supplied by applicants, in each of the last five years in Northern Ireland. [10956]

Mr. Streeter: Records relating to the requested information have been maintained by the legal aid authorities since 1 April 1994. Since that time, there has been one case in which a legal aid certificate was revoked and the application for legal aid was referred for investigation by the police. The case is under investigation.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been paid by the legal aid fund during the last three years and so far this year to help in respect of cases under the Asylum and Immigration Acts. [11215]

Mr. Streeter: The information requested is not available since the data gathered by the Legal Aid Board does not identify separately cases brought under the Asylum and Immigration Acts.

Assistance for people in immigration and nationality matters is provided through the legal aid scheme in two ways. First, advice and assistance is available through the green form scheme and secondly through the civil legal aid scheme by way of a judicial review of an administrative decision.

Figures for the number of claims for green form advice and assistance paid by the Legal Aid Board over the last three financial years are as follows:

Year	Amount (£000)
1993–94	11,295
1994–95	14,572
1995–96	23,929
1996–97 to January 1997	20,039

It is not possible to give figures for civil legal aid expenditure relating to immigration and nationality matters since the Legal Aid Board does not record judicial review cases by category of proceedings.

TREASURY

Incomes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of income was paid in tax, including national insurance and VAT, by a family with two children earning (a) £10,000, (b) £15,000 (c) £20,000 and (d) £45,000 in each of the last five years. [10817]

Mr. Jack: The table provides figures for the percentage of earnings paid in tax by a one-earner couple with two children earning (a) £10,000, (b) £15,000, (c) £20,000 and (d) £45,000 in cash in each of the years 1991–92 to 1997–98.

Estimates of indirect taxes are very approximate. The margin of error is particularly high outside the central range of earnings so even illustrative estimates cannot be made at the top and bottom of the range.

[1] Income tax and NICs.

1. Income tax payments are calculated on the assumption that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. The earner is assumed to pay class 1 national insurance contributions at the contracted-in rate. Child benefit is deducted from income tax.

2. Figures for indirect taxes include estimates of the effects of the main intermediate taxes on households as well as the impact of taxes on final goods and services. Estimates of the impact of taxes on final goods and services assume that these taxes are fully incident on households. Estimates of the impact of intermediate taxes are based on the relation between intermediate production costs and final consumption derived using input–output techniques.

3. Figures for indirect taxes since 1994–95 are estimated from expenditure patterns in the 1994–95 family expenditure survey uprated to later years using forecasts of aggregate tax receipts. For years before 1994–95 the 1985 family expenditure survey was used. All estimates are based on the illustrative assumption that 10 per cent. of disposable income is saved.

4. Estimates of indirect taxes are very approximate, even where figures are shown, because spending patterns vary widely between households with the same composition and income. Because of sampling variation, there can be substantial differences between estimates obtained from family expenditure surveys for different years, so reliable comparisons cannot be made between the estimates for different years.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to reply to the letter of 12 November from the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding a constituent. [10997]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 January 1997]: A reply was sent on 21 January.

Schedule A Income Tax

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on revenue from inheritance tax of treating assets giving rise to schedule A income as assets comprised in a business carried on by the owner of those assets qualifying for business property relief. [11825]

Mr. Jack: The full year cost of extending inheritance tax business property relief to assets giving rise to schedule A income is tentatively estimated at £100 million.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on (a) revenues from capital gains tax and (b) revenues from corporation tax on capital gains of treating assets giving rise to income taxable under schedule A as assets occupied and used for the purposes of a trade carried on by the recipient of the schedule A income. [11827]

Mr. Jack: The full year cost of treating assets giving rise to schedule A income as business assets qualifying for relief from capital gains tax and corporation tax on gains is tentatively estimated at £150 million.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on (a) revenues from income tax and (b) revenues from corporation tax of taxing income currently taxed under schedule A as trading income taxed under case 1 of schedule D instead. [11826]

Mr. Jack: The estimated full year cost of taxing schedule A income as schedule D case 1 trading income is £50 million in respect of revenues from income tax and £250 million in respect of revenues from corporation tax charged on company incomes.

Charity Donations

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for changes in relation to the tax position on weekly covenanted charity donations; and if he will make a statement. [11940]

Mr. Jack: The strict application of the provisions governing lower rate taxpayers making covenants on which charities can claim relief at the basic rate from the Inland Revenue could mean that more tax may be due from taxpayers whose marginal rate is the lower rate. In practice, however, the Revenue exercises its judgment in determining what priority should go to recovering relatively minor amounts where such a shortfall arises, and the covenantor will often not be asked for the difference. I have no plans to change procedures.

Central Bank Independence

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy regarding central bank independence for the United Kingdom. [12013]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government currently have no plans to make the Bank of England independent.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the change in manufacturing investment in each G7 country in the last year. [12025]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 21 January 1997]: Figures for investment growth in 1996 compared with 1995 are not yet available for any G7 country.

The latest available international comparisons of investment do not cover manufacturing but rather investment by institutional sector and by type of capital good. Figures for each G7 country for 1995 can be found in the OECD publication, "Quarterly National Accounts", which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Pesticides and Fertilisers (Excise Duty)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the annual revenue which would be raised from introducing an excise duty of (a) 1 per cent., (b) 5 per cent. and (c) 10 per cent. on pesticides; and if he will make a statement; [10540]

(2) what estimate he has made of the annual revenue which would be raised from introducing an excise duty of (a) 1 per cent., (b) 5 per cent. and (c) 10 per cent. on fertilisers; and if he will make a statement. [10541]

Mr. Oppenheim: No estimates have been made recently of revenue which might be raised by introducing excise duty on pesticides and/or fertilisers.

SCOTLAND

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9385]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of visits made by Scottish Office Ministers during 1996 is as follows:

	Number
Secretary of State	255, including four overseas visits
Minister of State	134
Mr. George Kynoch	118
Mr. Raymond Robertson	134, including 10 overseas visits
The Earl of Lindsay	188, including 10 overseas visits

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11423]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

Ardrossan, Saltcoats and Stevenston Bypass

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects consideration of the objections lodged against the draft road orders for the Ardrossan, Saltcoats and Stevenston bypass to have been completed; and when he expects that these proposals will be included in the Scottish Office's trunk road programme. [11329]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Consideration of objections lodged against the draft road orders is expected to be completed within the next three months. During that time objectors will be contacted by officials from the Scottish Office to determine what can be done to alleviate their concerns. The timing of construction will depend on the satisfactory completion of the statutory procedures and the relative priority of the scheme against competing demands for available resources when decisions on future starts are made.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what savings he estimates have been made as a result of local government reorganisation; and how these figures were calculated (a) in total and (b) for the financial year 1997–98. [11435]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government's view of the costs and savings associated with local government reorganisation are based on the report, "The Structure of Local Government in Scotland: Financial and Qualitative Appraisal of Options for Change" by Touche Ross, published in October 1994. Provision has been made, and is planned to be made, in the relevant local government finance settlements as shown in the table. It is too soon to estimate actual savings which will depend on decisions made by individual councils regarding their management and staffing structures.

M74–M6

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the cost involved in renaming the M74 the M6. [11860]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The A74, A74(M), M74 route will be renamed the M6 on completion of its upgrading to full motorway status. A detailed cost estimate for the necessary signposting changes is not as yet available. Costs will, however, be kept to a minimum by overplating of existing signs wherever practicable.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the construction of the M74 to begin from the Scottish borders to junction 44 on the M6; and if he will make a statement. [11774]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The orders for the A74 Carlisle to Guardsmill improvement scheme are now being prepared for making. Once statutory procedures have been completed, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport will decide on the future programme for this scheme, taking into account the merits of including it in the M6 design, build, finance and operate contract.

Local Authority Employment

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of employees, by category, in each local authority in Scotland and the totals at the latest available date. [11869]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer the hon. Member to table 8 of the press release "Joint Staffing Watch—July 1996 Return—Scotland", which shows the total full-time equivalent number of local authority employees by category of service in each local authority in July 1996. Tables 13(a) to 13(k) show, for each authority the total full-time equivalent number of employees by category of service by salary band. A copy of the press release is in the Library. Information on the number of employees in September 1996 will be published shortly.

Pensioners (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of (i) male and (ii) female pensioners resident in the city of Glasgow. [11863]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Registrar General's latest—mid-1995—population estimates show that there were (i) 35,912 men aged 65 and over, and (ii) 77,138 women aged 60 and over in the city of Glasgow council area.

Health Boards (Finance)

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the forecast (a) income and (b) expenditure at the end of the 1996–97 financial year for each health board. [12046]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The table shows the forecast income and expenditure for hospital and community health services for each health board as at the end of the 1996–97 financial year.

Marshall Food Group Ltd.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial assistance has been provided to Marshall Food Group Ltd. in each of the last 10 years in relation to their production plant at Coatbridge; on what terms; and if he will make a statement. [11848]

Mr. Kynoch: The following financial assistance has been provided by the Department:

Since 1987, a total of £2,857,500 has been paid under the regional selective assistance scheme. These payments related to offers made in 1987 and 1990 and the last payment of grant was made in 1993. Additionally, regional development grant of £679,942, offered in 1987, was paid in association with the RSA offers, the last payment being made in 1991.

The purpose of these offers was to assist the company in undertaking a capital investment programme at Coatbridge involving the safeguarding and creation of jobs at that location. The company has met its obligations under the terms of the offers.

The above grants represent all but a small part of the assistance provided in relation to this company's Coatbridge plant. Additional support has been provided by the Scottish Enterprise network in recent years; I will ask the chairman of that organisation to write to the hon. Member with details of this as soon as possible.

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many admissions were made to intensive care beds in Scotland in 1978–79 or the most recent year thereafter for which figures are available. [11332]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of patients discharged from intensive care beds in the year ending 31 March 1979 was 8,137.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many admissions were made to intensive care beds in each health board area in Scotland during 1995–96. [11333]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table.

Prescription Drugs

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what period of notice was given to general practitioners in Scotland in respect of the deadline for comments on the recent list of drugs to be removed from GP prescription; how many representations were received; and what discussions his officials have had with the British Medical Association about the period of notice. [11319]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: On 25 November 1996, the Department of Health, on behalf of the UK health departments, issued a press release announcing consultation on recommended changes to the list of products which GPs may not prescribe on the NHS. Comments were invited by 9 January 1997. About 200 representations have been received in response. There have been no discussions with the BMA about the period of notice.

Employment (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by category the estimated total number of jobs located within the city of Glasgow and the estimated number of vacancies in each category. [11868]

Mr. Kynoch: The table sets out the latest estimate of the number of employees in employment in the former City of Glasgow district council area and vacancies registered with the Employment Service.

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the annual salary and employment costs for the communications manager recently appointed by Ayrshire and Arran health board. [11920]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally. Health boards have delegated responsibility for recruitment and for terms and conditions of their staff.

Stone of Destiny

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 731, relating to costs in connection with the return of the Stone of Destiny, when he expects to have collated the costs; and if he will notify the hon. Member for East Lothian of the figures as soon as they are available. [9968]

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to have finalised the collation of all of the costs involved in relation to the return of the Stone of Destiny; if he will send details of the costs to all hon. Members representing Scottish constituencies; and under which budget heads the costs will be covered. [10660]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answers 22 and 13 January 1997]: The Scottish Office has already indicated that the costs incurred were expected to be in excess of £50,000. The cost of the ceremonies marking the return amounts to £34,434.15. In addition, the Scottish Office will meet £27,708.50 incurred by the armed services. All these costs will be met, as planned, from the Scottish Office administration budget.

PRIME MINISTER

Scotch Whisky Industry

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his discussions with the Indian Prime Minister in respect of the Scotch whisky industry. [12144]

The Prime Minister: Although the Scotch whisky industry was not discussed during my meeting with the Indian Prime Minister, it was covered in the meetings between the Indian Finance Minister and my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade, at one of which representatives of the Scotch whisky industry were present. The Indian Minister indicated that whisky would be involved in a wider programme of liberalising imports of consumer goods into India, although the timing was not yet clear. The Government will continue to press for improved access for Scotch whisky to this potentially very important market.

UN Special Session (Environment)

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Prime Minister which Government Minister will be attending the United Nations General Assembly special session on the environment in June. [12442]

The Prime Minister: I shall be attending the United Nations General Assembly special session in June.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Export Licences

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what stage of the special procedure which was used in respect of the sale of police and security requirements an export licence application was made; by whom the application was made; and at what stage of the procedure the decision to grant a licence was decided. [11834]

Dr. Liam Fox: Where the export of goods is prohibited without an export licence, such a licence must be obtained from the Department of Trade and Industry before the goods may be exported.

Bahrain

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will review the procedure by which the Bahrain Public Security Directorate was able to buy a proportion of its police and security requirements through the Crown Agents; and on how many occasions similar procedures have been used in respect of other countries. [11804]

Dr. Liam Fox: The functions of the Crown Agents when acting as agents for the procurement of goods and services are set out in the Crown Agents Act 1979. The Government have laid down no special procedures for purchases for Bahrain. Crown Agents have operating procedures which apply to all their work as agents. An indication of the extent of this work and the clients involved is given in the Crown Agents' annual report and accounts, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the police and security requirements provided to Bahrain through the Crown Agents and (b) the British companies which supplied the goods and services. [11833]

Dr. Fox: The Crown Agents provide services to the Government of Bahrain on commercial terms; provision of information about specific goods and services is a matter for the Crown Agents' clients.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances were (a) asked for by the UK Government and (b) given by the Government of Bahrain that the equipment supplied through the special purchase procedure will not be used for internal repression. [11806]

Dr. Fox: The Crown Agents' functions when acting as agents for procurement of goods and services are set out in the Crown Agents Act 1979. Where the export of goods is prohibited without an export licence, the Government would not licence equipment assessed as likely to be used for internal repression.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the procedure which enabled the Bahrain Public Security Directorate to buy police and security equipment through the Crown Agents began; and if the arrangement still exists. [11805]

Dr. Fox: The British Government have specified no special procedure for purchases for Bahrain. The Crown Agents have always acted as procurement agents for overseas principals. Their powers to do so are currently set out in the Crown Agents Act 1979; that Act is still in force.

Police, Security and Paramilitary Bodies

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which police, security and paramilitary bodies have enjoyed similar arrangements in the last 10 years with Crown Agents to that enjoyed by the Government of Bahrain; and which bodies continue to enjoy such arrangements. [11835]

Dr. Liam Fox: A list of Crown Agents' clients is published each year in the Crown Agents' annual report and accounts, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House.

Yemen

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests the United Kingdom Government have received from (a) the Yemen Government, (b) the Aden port authority and (c) other organisations (i) to tender for projects and (ii) to assist (1) financially and (2) technically with the Aden port redevelopment programme; and if he will make a statement. [11684]

Dr. Liam Fox: The United Kingdom Government have received no requests to tender for projects. All requests for technical assistance are channelled through the Government of Yemen.

In 1995 the Overseas Development Administration provided assistance to the Government of Yemen in evaluating competing proposals for the development of the Aden container terminal. In late 1996, the ODA received a request for assistance in undertaking an impact study including preparation of programme specifications for the future of the port development programme. Consultants began their work on this assignment in early January.

The Aden port and free trade zone development project is a large commercial undertaking where the lead is predominantly taken by the private sector company Yeminvest. The World bank is providing limited assistance to the Yemeni authorities on the public sector aspects of the project. ODA grant-funded consultancies form an important part of the planning phase of this project.

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the United Kingdom aid programmes to Yemen during the current financial year for (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral aid indicating the amount of funding; and if he will make a statement. [11685]

Dr. Fox: Figures are not yet available for expenditure in this financial year, but the outturn is expected to be similar to 1995–96.

The bilateral programme is funding the Liverpool Port Consultancy Portia to undertake an impact study and preparation of programme specification on Aden port. Other activities this year include British partnership scheme funded projects. These range from support for the electronic engineering faculty at Hadramawt university and for the Central Statistical Office to English tuition at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The ODA also commissioned an appraisal of the Al Gamhouria hospital in Aden. This assignment was completed in the first half of 1996. The balance of the budget for this year is meeting the cost of continuing postgraduate education commitments in the UK. Following very heavy flooding in eastern Yemen in May and June, the ODA funded nearly £500,000 of emergency assistance which was delivered through the Red Crescent and other non-governmental organisations.

Figures are not available for multilateral aid expenditure in this financial year. In the past six years, approximately £22 million—UK share £5 million—has been committed by the EC in the form of economic and development assistance to Yemen. It is expected that commitments and disbursements should continue at roughly the same level and pace over the next two years.

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each year since 1991 the total aid support for Yemen, indicating the amount spent on (a) bilateral aid, (b) emergency aid, (c) pensions and (d) the United Kingdom contribution to multilateral aid programmes. [11683]

Dr. Fox: Aid to Yemen since 1991 has been as follows:

Total aid to Yemen 1990–91—1995–96

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11593]

Mr. Hanley: Yes, although we are not aware of any Minister ever having made a call upon this service for his or her children.

Gibraltar

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those European Union countries that have refused to accept Gibraltar-issued identification cards as valid travel documents between EU countries. [11817]

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response the Spanish Government have made to his Department about the validity of British dependent territories passports used by Gibraltar citizens for travel between Gibraltar and Spain. [11816]

Mr. Davis: The Spanish Government's response to our request for clarification of their position does not meet our concerns. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary will therefore be raising this issue when he meets the Spanish Foreign Minister in Madrid on 22 January, and he will be looking for a cast-iron assurance that the Spanish Government will continue to accept British passports issued in Gibraltar.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be on the agenda for the meeting between himself and the Foreign Minister of Spain on 22 January, under the provisions of the 1984 Brussels agreement. [11818]

Mr. Davis: The issue of passports will be high on the agenda. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary will be looking for a cast-iron assurance that the Spanish Government will continue to accept British passports issued in Gibraltar. We also expect the scope for greater cross-border co-operation to be discussed.

Council of Europe

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conclusions were reached in respect of the Council of Europe at the Dublin EU summit. [11823]

Mr. David Davis: Part VII of the "Presidency Conclusions" (document ref. SN 401/96) which was placed in the House Library on 15 December, records the views of European Council on the Council of Europe as follows:

> "The European Council believes that the Council of Europe has a crucial role in upholding human rights standards and supporting pluralist democracy.
> It sees advantage in using to the fullest, in co-operation with other international institutions, and expertise and mechanisms of the Council of Europe to advance these objectives. The summit meeting of the Organization, in 1997, will provide a significant opportunity to review the progress made in these areas."

EU-Israel Trade Agreement

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he estimates the UK will ratify the EU-Israel trade agreement. [11704]

Mr. Hanley: The Order in Council is currently being drafted, and we expect the agreement to be laid before Parliament shortly and debated next month.

New Delhi	19	99
Total	1,720	1,309

Statistics for Madras are still being prepared. I shall write to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the longest period of time a person had been waiting for an interview to join (a) their husband and (b) their wife, in the United Kingdom at high commission offices in (i) Pakistan, (ii) Sri Lanka, (iii) India and (iv) Bangladesh on 1 January; and if he will make a statement. It is not possible to prepare equivalent figures for applicants already in the UK.

Pillar Point Refugee Centre (Hong Kong)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future of Pillar point refugee centre in Hong Kong and its residents. [11824]

Mr. Hanley: The Pillar Point refugee centre in Hong Kong is funded and managed by the office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. It was opened in 1989 and there are no plans to close it.

Some 620 Vietnamese refugees and 540 non-refugees are accommodated in the centre. UNHCR continue to seek resettlement places for the refugees. The non-refugees' closest links remain with Vietnam and we are seeking to negotiate with the Vietnamese authorities for their repatriation, in accordance with the comprehensive plan of action.

Far East

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) companies and (b) universities assessed by his Department to be assisting planning in (i) education and (ii) research in the far east; and if he will make a statement. [12023]

Mr. Hanley: Neither this nor any other Department carries out such assessments. We do, however, welcome the involvement of British companies and universities in this kind of work.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Fraud Hotline

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls have been made on the benefit fraud hotline to date; how many of those have been found to provide information that was substantiated; and if he will separately distinguish the figures between England and Wales. [9690]

Mr. Heald: The national benefit fraud hotline has received in excess of 125,000 calls up to 12 December 1996.

Information is not collected to show numbers of calls where the information was substantiated—where our investigations entirely confirm the caller's allegation. The results of investigations from referrals generated by the hotline are only starting to emerge. However, of the 25,942 investigations initiated by the end of November, 11,180 have been completed. Of these, 3,082 investigations have achieved benefit savings of £11,760,635.

Fraud investigations take some time to follow through, depending on the complexity of the investigation. Therefore in time, the volume and rate of investigations completed will increase until a steady state is achieved.

It is not possible to give separate figures for England and Wales as the information is not collected in this format.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what representations his Department has made to the Home Office to resolve difficulties concerning the prompt payment of benefit to eligible asylum seekers arising from the absence in form IS96 of a sign as to whether a claim for asylum has been made; and if he will make a statement; [10790]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to resolve problems in the Benefits Agency concerning delays in the issuing of benefit payments to eligible asylum seekers arising from the fact that form IS96 does not show that a claim for asylum has been made. [10791]

Mr. Roger Evans: Form IS96 is issued to any person from abroad granted temporary admission under the written authority of an immigration officer. Officials from this Department and from the Home Office have met to discuss this issue and have concluded that it is not appropriate to annotate form IS96 issued to an asylum seeker because it is not a secure document and does not lend itself to be adapted for that purpose.

An adjudication officer must be satisfied as to the true identity of a claimant before a benefit claim can be actioned. The bearer of form IS96: may not be an asylum seeker; may have been issued with more than one IS96 at different times, or may already have been refused leave to enter this country and granted temporary admission pending removal. Therefore, form IS96, annotated or otherwise, is unsuitable for use as a trigger for the payment of a social security benefit.

Departmental officials are in regular discussion with officials from the Home Office to improve the exchange of information between the two departmens, to enable adjudication officers to verify the circumstances of asylum seekers' claims promptly.

War Widows' Pensions

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensions are curently being paid to war widows; and how many of these relate to service up to (a) 30 September 1921 and (b) 31 December 1945. [11075]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available is as follows:

A war widow's pension may be awarded where the death of the husband is due to service in the armed forces at any time. The number of war widows pensions in payment at 31 December 1996, the latest date for which figures are available, is 59,611. At 31 December 1995, a total of 1,544 awards were in respect of service up to 30 September 1921.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cold weather payments were made in (a) December 1996 and (b) January 1997 to date. [11607]

Mr. Roger Evans: An estimated 1,410,720 payments were made in December. The number of payments so far in January, up to and including 17 January, is estimated to be 3,687,380.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which of the weather stations triggered cold weather payments in December 1996 and January 1997 to date; and how often each station triggered payments during this period. [11859]

Mr. Evans: The information is as follows:

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average size of area covered by the weather stations responsible for triggering cold weather payments. [11858]

Mr. Evans: The average size of area covered by the 70 weather stations used in the cold weather payments scheme this winter is about 1,250 sq miles per station.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will arrange for the entitlement for cold weather payments in the Caernarfon constituency to be triggered by the temperature readings in the village of Deiniolen rather than at RAF Valley; and if he will make a statement. [11961]

Mr. Evans: No. Only weather stations which meet Meteorological Office requirements are suitable for the cold weather payments scheme. There are no such facilities at Deiniolen of which the Meteorological Office is aware or which meet its requirements.

Personalised Number Plates (Executive Agencies)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11419]

Mr. Burt: None.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11591]

Mr. Burt: Yes.

Maternity Leave

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many small employers reclaimed money under the small firms relief scheme for statutory maternity leave in 1995–96; [11810]

(2) how much money was reclaimed by small employers over each of the last five years under the small employers relief fund for statutory maternity pay. [11813]

Mr. Heald: The statutory maternity pay small employers' relief scheme was introduced from 4 September 1994 when the reimbursement rate for SMP was changed to 92 per cent. The scheme allows small businesses paying £20,000 or less annually in national insurance contributions to continue to receive full reimbursement of their SMP costs.

Employers are not required to distinguish in their end-of-year returns between reimbursement under small employers' relief and the 92 per cent. rate. In 1994–95, £443 million was reclaimed by all employers this includes 100 per cent. reimbursement for all employers for the first six months.

Information about employers' payments for 1995–96 will be available from May 1997 when employers' end-of-year returns have been assessed. It is estimated that around 38 per cent. of firms paying SMP were able to recover payments in full in 1995–96.

Appeal Tribunals (Membership)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which former hon. Members are now members of social security appeal tribunals or disability appeal tribunals. [12145]

Mr. Burt: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Computers

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the nature of the design faults in his Department's national computer which necessitate its being closed down when a claimant's partner's claim is being considered; [10917]

(2) who was responsible for the design of the computer system operated by his Department; and who operates it; [10918]

(3) when the faults in his Department's computer system will be rectified. [10919]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 21 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what is the nature of the design faults in his Department's national computer which necessitated it being closed down when a claimant's partner's claim is being considered; who was responsible for the design of the computer system operated by his Department, and who operates it and when the faults in his Department's computer system will be rectified.

I have assumed your question refers to the recent incident at the Benefits Agency (BA) Hull District on 29 October 1996 when a customer was incorrectly informed that a payment could not be made due to a fault on the computer system which would not allow acceptance of a partner's National Insurance number.

This is not a design fault of the income Support Computer System (ISCS) but is specifically included as a measure to prevent duplicate payments of benefit. The office has now informed all relevant staff of the procedures to enable clerical payments to be considered at an early stage where appropriate.

I apologise that the information given previously to one of our customers was incorrect and for the inconvenience caused.

Information Technology Services Agency (ITSA) is an Executive Agency of the DSS. ITSA provides, either internally or through contracts with the private sector, the information technology services required to support social security provision. ITSA, in partnership with the BA and companies from the private sector is responsible for the design and operation of the ISCS.

When any potential problems on ISCS are reported they are investigated by a combined support team of BA and ITSA staff. If a fault in the system is discovered as the cause of a problem, instructions are given to the users on how to deal with the matter whilst the fix to the system is scheduled. The resolution of identified faults is prioritised according to specified criteria.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Capital Spending Projects (Schools)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the value of the capital spending projects in schools which have taken advantage of the private finance initiative. [11340]

Mrs. Gillan: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Local Government announced on 8 October 1996 that the Government would make available additional revenue support for £50 million of PFI investment in the local education authority schools sector between then and 31 March 1998. A good number of LEAs are very keen to reap the benefits of PFI partnerships with the private sector, and the are developing projects covering a wide range of asset-based services for schools. Provision is also available for grant maintained and voluntary-aided school PFI projects.

Clinical and Academic Medicine (Pay Parity)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors underlay her decision to end pay parity between clinical and academic medicine. [11771]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has taken no such decision. Indeed, she announced at the time of the Budget statement that a new condition of grant would be placed on the Higher Education Funding Council for England from 1997–98 requiring the council to enable universities and colleges to meet any additional costs for medical schools arising from any pay increase awarded by the Government to NHS clinicians.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice she has issued to the Funding Agency for Schools in respect of the proposed changes to the early retirement provisions in the teachers's superannuation arrangements. [12072]

Mrs. Gillan: The Funding Agency for Schools has received a copy of the Department's consultation letter of 22 October on this matter. Advice on these changes was also set out in the annual grant letter to the agency, setting out the planned funding for the grant-maintained sector in 1997–98 and beyond. A copy of that letter was placed in the Library on 28 November 1996.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list those who have responded to her consultation document on the proposed changes in the teachers pension fund. [11959]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend has so far received written representations from 33 consultees in respect of the proposed changes to early retirement provisions for teachers. They are listed in the table.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of teachers in Devon who have taken early retirement; and what percentage did so on the grounds of ill health, in each of the past five years. [12009]

Mrs. Gillan: The following table shows the information for teachers taking early retirement from the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special sector in Devon.

Financial year	Number of early retirements[1]	Percentage retiring on ill-health grounds
1991–92	167	47
1992–93	196	42
1993–94	243	40
1994–95	216	54
1995–96 (provisional)	300	34

[1] Excludes those last recorded as in sixth form colleges.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what guidance the Funding Agency for Schools has issued to head teachers of grant-maintained schools in respect of premature retirements in 1997–98 and beyond; [12073]

(2) what estimate has been made of the resources available to the Funding Agency for Schools to fund the cost of premature retirements following changes to the regulations. [12074]

Mrs. Gillan: The Funding Agency for Schools will offer assistance towards the cost of premature retirement in GM schools in 1997–98 and beyond on a case by case basis, according to criteria set by the agency, from within the total allocation set aside for special purpose grants. It is for the Agency to determine what advice and financial assistance is made available to GM schools in respect of premature retirements having regard to the proposed changes in the regulations. I have asked the chairman of the Funding Agency for Schools to write to the hon. Member with this information.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place copies of the responses to her consultation document on teachers pension fund in the Library. [11960]

Mrs. Gillan: I will place copies of the responses from consultees to our proposals for the reform of early retirement arrangements for the teachers' superannuation scheme in the Library, except for any where the consultee has asked for the response to remain confidential.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total number of teachers who have retired before the age of 60 years for reasons of health or disability during the last four years. [11850]

Mrs. Gillan: The numbers of teachers who have retired on grounds of ill health before the age 60 in each of the last four years is given in the table.

Year	Number of retirees
1992–93	4,900
1993–94	5,730
1994–95	6,303
1995–96	5,980

Local Education Authorities (Finance)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the capital allocations for 1997–98 to each local education authority (a) in cash terms and (b) at 1995–96 prices together with the average allocation at 1995–96 prices for the five years between 1992–93 and 1996–97 for each authority. [11958]

Mrs. Gillan: The table lists each local education authority's 1997–98 annual capital guideline in cash terms and at 1995–96 prices. It also lists, at 1995–96 prices, the average capital allocation—annual capital guideline plus any supplementary credit approvals—for each LEA for the period 1993–94 to 1996–97. Comparable data for 1992–93 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

We expect to issue further supplementary credit approvals in 1996–97, and to issue supplementary credit approvals totalling about £66 million—or £63 million at 1995–96 prices—in 1997–98. The table does not include allocations under capital challenge.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each local education authority (a) its percentage of the national school population and (b) the percentage of extra resources from the increase in the latest standard spending assessment allocated to it. [11942]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table sets out the percentage for each authority of the national total of pupils underlying the provisional education standard spending assessment calculations for 1997–98 and the provisional percentage for each authority of the £592 million increase in the national total of education standard spending assessments, net of specific grants. The further additional resources available through the specific grant programmes are not included in this analysis, as they are not necessarily allocated on the basis of pupil numbers.

Some care must be taken in drawing conclusions from this table. Each authority's share of the extra resources will reflect the year on year change in its pupil numbers and therefore may not be proportionate to its share of the national total of pupil numbers. Variations in the shares of the extra resources are also affected in particular by year-on-year changes in the proportion of children in each authority who are entitled to free school meals.

Training (Small Firms)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement regarding the provision of training to small firms. [10591]

Mr. Paice: Many small firms will benefit from the £49 million Government support for employers training this year through local training and enterprise councils, and from provision aimed at young people and the work of their local further education colleges. In addition, nearly 13,000 small firms have been helped in the last 18 months through skills for small businesses, skills challenge, and the small firms training loans initiative.

Following a comprehensive review of the Government's support for businesses, local provision will be available through the local competitiveness budget from April 1997. This will continue to provide wide ranging advice and support to small firms through TECs and business links. Any small firms wanting guidance on skills and training should contact its local TEC or business link.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement regarding the adequacy of training available to small firms. [10604]

Mr. Paice: Small firms can access training through local employer-led bodies such as training and enterprise councils and business links. TECs' specific small firms initiatives have helped nearly 13,000 small firms develop their training effort in the last 18 months alone. Recently published statistics show that, nationally, 84 per cent. of smaller firms have provided training for their employees, using a variety of methods to suit their circumstances.

As a direct response to business needs, the Government undertook a comprehensive review last year, aimed at simplifying support to businesses. A key outcome for my Department of this review is the establishment of the local competitiveness budget from April 1997. This will continue to provide wide-ranging advice and support to local firms through TECs and business links.

Education and Business Links

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the initiatives her Department is taking to develop links between small businesses and colleges of higher education. [10606]

Mr. Forth: This Department has responsibility for supporting the development of closer links between education and business, including in particular those between higher education and employment.

The enterprise in higher education programme has initiated a range of links between employers and higher education institutions, and the Department also funds various development projects. I am placing a copy of the "Higher Education and Employment Projects Digest" in the Library.

Two new suites of projects have been started in 1996–97 specifically to develop links between higher education institutions and small and medium-sized enterprises.

The "using graduate skills" projects will develop strategies and tools to increase graduate recruitment by SMEs, and assist employers in making better use of the graduates they recruit; and

The higher education business partnerships projects have similar aims, but the focus is more sharply on forming permanent employer-led partnerships between higher education and the SME sector.

The teaching company scheme enables firms to take advantage of the wealth of scientific, engineering, technological and business knowledge available in our universities with graduates working in a company for two years on projects central to the company's needs;

The postgraduate training partnerships initiative, which is jointly supported by DTI, involves the annual recruitment into each partnership of up to 10 postgraduate students to undertake industrially relevant research;

The Shell technology enterprise programme is a Shell UK national placement scheme, part-funded by the DTI, which provides undergraduates with relevant industrial experience; and

The focus technology programme, run in association with business links, aims to help research and technology organisations and higher education institutions to improve the contact they have with small firms and the technological services they provide to them.

Education Welfare Service

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultation she undertook with members of the education welfare service, in drawing up the exclusion measures currently before Parliament. [11567]

Mr. Forth: The Department is in regular contact on a wide range of issues with the Association for education welfare managers and the National Association of Social Workers in Education. Consultations on specific measures in the current Education Bill included the local authority associations, which are representative of those responsible for the education welfare service.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average pupil-teacher ratio in reception classes in the phase 1 areas of the nursery voucher scheme. [11563]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information about pupils and teachers in reception classes it not collected centrally.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the providers that have withdrawn from the nursery voucher scheme, indicating in each case (a) the reason for their withdrawal and (b) if they are in the public, voluntary or private sector; [11570]

(2) if she will list the providers that were initially validated in the nursery voucher scheme, but have subsequently closed, stating in each case (a) the reason given for their closure and (b) whether they are in the public, voluntary or private sector. [11571]

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of providers in the nursery education voucher scheme will fluctuate for a variety of reasons. Of the 1,142 providers who joined phase 1 of the scheme, 40—3 per cent.—have subsequently withdrawn; a list has been placed in the Library. Twenty of these did not redeem any vouchers in either the summer or autumn terms. I understand that nine providers have closed and given as their reason for closure that too few parents chose to redeem their vouchers there. The providers who have withdrawn exchanged 446 voucher parts in respect of 122 children—less than 0.2 per cent. of the total.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when data on term 2 of the pilot phase of the nursery voucher scheme will be available. [11568]

Mr. Squire: Detailed information on the operation of phase 1 of the nursery education voucher scheme in the first half of the autumn term has been sent to the House of Commons Education and Employment Select Committee and placed in the Library. Information about the issue and redemption of vouchers in the second half of the autumn terms will be available shortly.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many hours of provision per (a) week and (b) day voucher-bearing children receive on average in each of phase 1 areas and overall. [11569]

Mr. Squire: Information is not available in this form.

Tables 6.5 and 6.7 of the Department's report on phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme show the numbers of sessions attended by voucher redeeming children in summer term 1996. An analysis of data for the first half of the autumn term 1996 has been placed in the Library: Table 5 gives similar information for the autumn term 1996, and shows an increase in the average number of sessions attended from 4.71 in the summer term to 4.92 in the autumn term.

Providers in the voucher scheme must provide a session of around 2.5 hours for each voucher part, but are free to offer more if they wish. Provision in nursery schools and classes is predominantly part time (half day) and in reception classes full time (full day).

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of providers in (a) the private sector and (b) the voluntary sector, participating in phase 1 of the voucher scheme, carried out the self-assessment schedule. [11572]

Mr. Squire: The purpose of the self-assessment schedule was to help potential providers establish whether they could meet the conditions for joining the nursery education voucher scheme and to help them review their current practices. All phase 1 providers were encouraged to complete a self-assessment schedule.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment further to her Department's report on phase 1, November 1996, what further analysis (a) has been carried out and (b) is planned, of those parents of eligible children who (i) failed to claim a voucher, (ii) failed to redeem a voucher and (iii) redeemed only part of a voucher. [11573]

Mr. Squire: A survey of parents in the phase 1 areas to establish participation in pre-school education included questions to explore why not all eligible parents claimed vouchers for summer term 1996; or when they did claim vouchers, why they did not use some or all of them. The survey results are being analysed.

Geographical patterns of redemption and non-redemption of vouchers in the autumn and spring terms 1996–97 will also be examined.

Nursery Inspectors

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many people have (a) applied to become a nursery education inspector, (b) embarked on the course to become a nursery education inspector and (c) successfully completed that course and qualified as a nursery education inspector; [11561]

(2) how many providers participating in phase 1 of the voucher scheme have been found by inspectors to have unacceptable standards of provision; [11562]

(3) how many and what proportion of private and voluntary sector providers in phase 1 of the voucher scheme have been inspected by Ofsted, at the most recent date for which figures are available; and how many such inspection reports have been published; [11564]

(4) how many nursery education inspectors have successfully completed training; and what is the target number of nursery education inspectors for phase 2 of the nursery voucher scheme; [11566]

(5) when the Ofsted report on the operation of the voucher scheme in the phase 1 areas will be published. [11574]

Mr. Robin Squire: These are matters for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

TRANSPORT

Vehicle Emissions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the implementation of the proposals announced by the Chancellor in his recent Budget speech on vehicle excise duty incentives for lorries meeting low emissions standards. [12658]

Mr. Bowis: We are today issuing a consultation paper on vehicle excise duty incentives for lorries meeting low emissions standards. Copies have been placed in the Library. The Chancellor's 1996 Budget Statement announced his intention to reduce VED by up to £500 per year for lorries meeting these standards. It is planned to introduce the incentive in early 1998 following this consultation on the practical details of implementation of the measure.

The consultation paper seeks views on the administration and enforcement of the VED incentive. The closing date for comments is 22 April 1997. In the light of the replies, we will consider the most appropriate way of implementing the concession.

Emergency Towing Vessels

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will release the report of the trials of two emergency towing vessels during the winters of 1994–95 and 1995–96. [12659]

Mr. Bowis: Copies of the Coastguard Agency's report have today been placed in the Library.

Milford Haven Port Authority

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Milford Haven port authority; what measures he has (a) taken and (b) proposes to improve the operations of the authority; and if he will make a statement. [11351]

Mr. Bowis: The operation of the Milford Haven port authority is governed by the Milford Haven Conservancy Act 1983, which does not provide a basis for such an assessment. The terms of reference for the Marine Accidents Investigation Branch investigation into the causes of the grounding and salvage of the Sea Empress cover, inter alia, the safety of port operations in relation to that incident.

MV Canberra (Inquiry)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action (a) his Department and (b) the Marine Safety Agency is taking against (i) the operators and (ii) the officers and crew of the MV Canberra following the recent publication of the Marine Accidents Investigation Branch report into the incident in December 1994. [11516]

Mr. Bowis: No action has been taken by this Department or the Marine Safety Agency against the operators and crew of the MV Canberra. Although the MAIB investigation highlighted a number of deficiencies in both equipment and operational procedures onboard, these were not considered to justify prosecution.

Between the 1994 incident and the 1996 Marine Accidents Investigation Branch report, the operators initiated a number of modifications to the boiler fuel system and operational procedures in order to prevent a similar accident happening again. We are satisfied that lessons learnt from the Canberra incident have been addressed.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Qualified Majority Voting

17. Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his assessment of the effect of an extension of qualified majority voting within the social chapter on British business. [10607]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Thanks to our hard won opt-out from the social chapter, legislation adopted under it does not apply to businesses in the UK, irrespective of the voting mechanism.

World Trade Organisation

18. Mr. Benton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a further statement on the outcome of the recent WTO meeting in Singapore. [10608]

Mr. Nelson: Good progress was made on the United Kingdom's objectives in Singapore; a substantial programme of trade liberalisation was agreed; an information technology agreement was agreed in principle by the EU, US and 11 other countries; and progress was made towards an agreement to open up world telecom markets by February this year.

29. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the impact of the World Trade Organisation meeting in Singapore on trade between the United Kingdom and North America. [10621]

Mr. Lang: The gains and benefits that will result from the recent WTO ministerial meeting in Singapore have not been assessed on a market basis. As an indicator of the importance of the information technology agreement to UK firms buying and selling IT equipment, the potential reduction in tariffs payable on UK IT imports and exports is estimated to be around £250 million. The value of the agreement between the EU and the US on the elimination of tariffs on brown and white spirits by the year 2000 has not yet been quantified, but it will offer significant benefits to the British drinks industry and has been welcomed by them. While any estimates are necessarily tentative, taking account of the large number of countries which have yet fully to liberalise their markets, and the potential for growth, a comprehensive WTO agreement to liberalise telecoms, negotiations for which are due to be completed in February 1997, could be worth £12 billion ($20 billion) in revenue to British companies by the year 2010. A significant proportion of this would be business on the UK-North America routes.

Electricity Industry

20. Ms Eagle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received regarding takeovers and mergers in the electricity industry. [10611]

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Delyn (Mr. Hanson) earlier today.

Small Businesses

21. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to meet representatives of small business organisations to discuss schemes to encourage enterprise. [10612]

Mr. Lang: My ministerial colleagues and I meet small business representative organisations on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of issues.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate his Department has made of the number of (a) forms and (b) regulatory visits which firms with (i) under 100 employees, (ii) under 50 employees and (iii) under 10 employees have to undertake each year. [11811]

Mr. Page: The information requested is not available.

Industrial Action

22. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the cost of strikes to industry in the United Kingdom in 1996. [10613]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have not made an assessment of the costs to British industry of strikes in 1996, but the number of days lost due to industrial stoppages was nearly four times as high as in the previous year, causing disruption to many businesses and the lives of millions of people.

Privatisation

23. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the impact of privatisation on industry efficiency. [10614]

Mr. Lang: Privatisation is a major element in the Government's strategy to promote efficiency in the economy. It has led to increased investment, lower prices, better services and wider choice for consumers. A recent assessment by the Organisation of Economic Co-operation and Development concluded that "since privatisation, most of the regulated utilities have achieved substantial improvements in productivity".

Public Sector Research Establishments

24. Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the progress of the Government's prior options review of the public sector research establishments. [10615]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government are considering the prior options review reports. We are determined to achieve the greatest possible benefit from the substantial resources devoted to the public sector research establishments. We expect to make further announcements about outstanding decisions in the near future.

Nano-technology

25. Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to increase research into nano-technology. [10616]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government are committed to innovation and the application of research across the full range of technologies including nano-technology. At least two new projects relevant to nano-technology have recently been introduced through the foresight programme, including a national centre for microelectronics. It is for the research councils, universities, academics and industry to take forward specific projects where appropriate.

Manufacturing Industry

26. Mr. Stevenson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total capital expenditure by manufacturing industries, revalued at 1990 prices, in (a) 1995, (b) 1989 and (c) 1979. [10617]

Mr. Greg Knight: £12.6 billion, £15.0 billion and £13.6 billion respectively.

Working Time Directive

27. Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has made to the Commission to complete the working time directive in 1997. [10619]

Mr. Lang: None. My Department is currently consulting widely on implementation of the working time directive.

Private Creditors

28. Mr. McNamara: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement concerning private creditors of firms going into liquidation. [10620]

Mr. John M. Taylor: There is no category of private creditor recognised by the insolvency legislation. Creditors are, therefore, either secured, preferential or unsecured and a private individual could fall into any one of these categories. Their rights are determined in most cases by their contract with the company and by statutory provisions contained principally in the Insolvency Act 1986.

Industrial Development Boards

30. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent assessment he had made of the procedures relating to industrial development boards. [10622]

Mr. Greg Knight: In general, the procedures for regional industrial development boards work well. The boards provide valuable advice to my Department in assessing the case for financial assistance to industrial and commercial investment projects. Some changes were introduced recently to provide additional guidance on conflicts of interest and on the size and quorum of industrial development boards. We are also continuing to develop additional procedures which take account of the recommendations of Lord Nolan's committee on standards in public life.

Regional Policy

31. Mr. Watson: To ask the president of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the impact of the European Commission's first cohesion report on regional policy in the United Kingdom. [10623]

Mr. Greg Knight: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, South-East (Mr. Turner) on 4 December 1996, Official Report, column 696.

Manufacturing Exports

32. Mr. Purchase: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about exports of manufactured goods to the European Union. [10624]

Mr. Greg Knight: The value of UK exports of manufactures to the European Union reached a record £74 billion in 1995, nearly 17 per cent. higher than in 1994. In the 12 months to October 1996, the value of exports of manufactures to the EU increased by over 8 per cent. compared with a year earlier.

Manufacturing Investment

33. Mr. Pope: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the change in manufacturing investment in the past 12 months. [10625]

Mr. Greg Knight: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade to the hon. Member for Worsley (Mr. Lewis) earlier today. Currently, the conditions for investment are extremely favourable.

Employee Participation

34. Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his policy towards the encouragement of employee participation within British companies. [10626]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government support voluntary employee involvement by encouraging and publicising good practice, funding research, and through tax incentives for financial participation. Employee involvement arrangements should be tailored to each business's circumstances, not imposed by legislation.

Competition Policy

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last met the Director General of Fair Trading to discuss competition policy. [10610]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade last met the Director General of Fair Trading to discuss competition policy on 28 November 1996. Meanwhile, I met the director yesterday.

UK Space Industry

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will announce the results of the recent study of the United Kingdom space industry. [12541]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The major findings of the study undertaken on behalf of the British National Space Centre showed that, during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96, consolidated turnover increased in real terms by 26 per cent. to £613 million. Total UK space turnover is estimated at £740 million for 1995–96. Employment in the UK space sector has risen by 3 per cent. to 6,500. Mean value added per employee, which can be used as an indicator of competitiveness, increased in real terms over the past two years by 20 per cent.

Radiocommunications Agency

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes he proposes to the service which the Radiocommunications Agency provides to investigate interference to domestic television and radio reception. [12543]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The agency currently charges £40 to visit householders to diagnose reception difficulties. This charge will be increased to £45 with effect from 1 April 1997 and will help to ensure that the agency does not undercut the private sector for this type of work. The agency continues to provide a free service to check specific sources of interference to television and radio reception in accordance with it regulatory duties.

Policyholders Protection Act

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he intends to amend the Policyholders Protection Act 1975; and if he will make a statement. [12542]

Mr. Nelson: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced his intention to amend the Policyholders Protection Act 1975 on 23 October 1995, Official Report, column 417, as soon as Parliamentary time permitted. My hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, West (Mr. Butterfill) has now introduced a Bill which implements all but one of the Government's proposals to amend this Act. The Bill is due to receive its Second Reading on Friday 24 January. The Government fully support the Bill.

The main objectives of the Bill are to amend the geographic coverage of the 1975 Act by excluding insurance risks outside the European Economic Area from the compensation scheme; to modernise its provisions in relation to the failure of non-life insurance companies; and to change some administrative procedures designed to speed up settlement of claims against insolvent insurance companies.

The Bill also includes a proposal explicitly to extend the Act's compensation scheme to insurance policies issued by branches of United Kingdom companies in the Channel islands and Isle of Man covering risks in those territories. Hitherto, there has been some legal doubt about whether this business was covered.

The Bill proposed by my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, West does not include the Government's proposal to limit partnership benefits to those provided to incorporated bodies in the Policyholders Protection Act 1975. The Government intend to review this proposal.

Payment Practice

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans to announce the results of his Department's consultation on stating payment practice in annual accounts. [11812]

Mr. Page: I shall announce the results of my Department's consultation on payment practice shortly.

Prohibited Weapons (Export)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if it is Government policy to permit the export of weapons prohibited under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill. [11216]

Mr. Nelson: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) on 18 December 1996, Official Report, column 698.

Nuclear Power Stations (Ukraine)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment has been given to him by European bank for reconstruction and development about the report of the independent experts on (a) financial assistance for Chernobyl and (b) the proposed two new Ukraine power stations to be partially financed by the European Union and the G7. [11232]

Mr. Page [holding answer 20 January 1997]: Action to follow up the EU-funded study of the options for dealing with the Chernobyl sarcophagus, including the need for further analysis, is now being discussed between the G7 countries, the European Union, the EBRD and the Ukrainian Government. I understand the results of the work of the independent panel, appointed by the EBRD and the European Commission to advise on Ukraine's energy options, are not yet available.

Personalised Number Plates

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11420]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am asking the chief executive of each DTI agency to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 22 January 1977:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about personalised number pates in the ownership of executive agencies.

This agency does not own any such number plates.

Letter from John S. Holden to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 22 January 1997:

You recently tabled a Parliamentary Question for the President of the Board of Trade asking how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department. I am responding as Chief Executive of Companies House Executive Agency.

The answer is none.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 22 January 1997:

You asked in your Parliamentary Question of 15 January to the President of the Board of Trade, how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department.

The Radiocommunications Agency has no official vehicles with personalised number plates.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 22 January 1997:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about personalised number plates in the ownership of executive agencies.

The Patent office owns no vehicles and thus owns no personalised number plates.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 22 January 1997:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about personalised number plates owned by The Insolvency Service. The Service owns no such plates.

Mid Kent Water

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from companies in connection with the proposed bid by Compagnie Generale des Eaux and SAUR for Mid Kent Water plc; and if he will list them [12052]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 21 January 1997]: Excluding representations from the parties to the proposed merger, my Department received two representations from companies in connection with the proposed acquisition of Mid Kent Holdings by General Utilities and SAUR Water Services. Both of these representations were copied to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission either directly by the sender or by officials of my Department. Chapter 10 of the MMC's report, which was laid before Parliament today, contains details of the representations made by interested parties to the MMC.

Dounreay Castle (Decontamination)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what applications he has received from the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority for assistance in the funding of the decontamination of Dounreay castle. [11913]

Mr. Page: Funding for decontamination of Dounreay castle will be provided under the DTI's existing programme of nuclear decommissioning and waste management on United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority sites.

Nuclear Waste Reprocessing

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what quantities of radioactive waste will be brought to the United Kingdom under the terms of the latest contract for British Nuclear Fuels to process radioactive waste for the United States Department of Energy.[11912]

Mr. Page: Details of the contract are a commercial matter for BNFL and its US subsidiary, BNFL Inc. However, I understand that the contract for the waste treatment work at Idaho national engineering laboratory, worth an estimated £650 million, does not involve importing radioactive waste to the UK.

Nuclear Waste Transportation

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the staging requirements for 1997–98 in respect of police escorts of motorway and road transportation of nuclear waste cargoes trans-shipped abroad; and if he will make a statement. [10953]

Mr. Page: No estimates have been made because there is no requirement for police escorts to accompany the road transport of radioactive waste.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing (Northamptonshire)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses were (a) built, (b) restored to use and (c) acquired in each local authority in Northamptonshire in each of the last five years. [11066]

Mr. Clappison: The available information on council houses built or restored to use is set out in the tables.

During this period, housing investment programme HIP2 returns submitted by local authorities in Northamptonshire reported six dwellings acquired for continued use, excluding low-cost home ownership schemes. These were in Daventry—one in 1992–93; in east Northamptonshire—two in 1992–93; in Kettering—one in 1991–92; in Northampton—one in 1992–93; and in Wellingborough—one in 1992–93.

Water Undertakers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what independent means of verification will be available to ensure that water undertakers (a) maintain the pressure standard and (b) pay £25 to customers who do not receive this service standard as set out in the Water Supply and Sewerage Services (Customer Service Standards) (Amendment) Regulations 1996. [11524]

Mr. Clappison: Section 65 of the Water Industry Act 1991 requires water companies to supply water for domestic purposes at such a pressure as will reach the top storey of every building within their area. In practice, the pressure this requires can vary considerably. The Office of Water Services requires companies to report annually the number of properties which are at risk of experiencing problems where pressure falls below a reference level of 10 m head of pressure at a flow of 9 litres per minute, which could be described as sufficient to fill a 2 gallon container in 30 seconds. The way companies report against this standard is reviewed and verified by independent reporters. This enables Ofwat to monitor overall performance and take action where service deteriorates. In the event of a dispute over any claim for payment under the water industry's guaranteed standards scheme, the customer can refer the matter to the Director General of Water Services for determination.

Snow Clearance (Allowances)

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the allowances for snow clearing and ice gritting included within the highways standard spending assessments for each of (a) the inner-London boroughs and (b) the borough councils in Greater Manchester. [11428]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is contained in the table.

River Ouse

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct the Environment Agency to study the increase in the variety of fish life which can be supported in the tidal reaches of the River Ouse in North Yorkshire, and publish the results with particular reference to the vicinity of Cawood, since the implementation of required European water quality standards. [11652]

Mr. Clappison: The physical nature of the River Ouse at Cawood is not conducive to sustaining significant fish populations, because of high levels of natural suspended solids and the strong tidal currents which exist.

The Environment Agency is, however, implementing a strategy for improvements in quality to the discharges in the Selby area. One of the aims is to improve dissolved oxygen levels to allow the passage of migratory fish.

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the time scale, under the European urban waste water treatment directive, relating to crude sewage outfalls, which applies to the crude sewage outfalls at present flowing into the River Ouse at (a) Rythen, (b) Wistow and (c) Cawood in North Yorkshire. [11653]

Mr. Clappison: The urban waste water treatment directive requires "appropriate treatment" by 2005 for discharges with effective populations less than 2,000. In the case of Cawood and Wistow sewage treatment works, which discharge to the Ouse, and Rythen, which discharges to the River Wharfe, this is likely to comprise fine screening to remove solids, or possibly primary treatment.

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct the Environment Agency to assess and report on the level of water quality in the River Ouse at Cawood in North Yorkshire and its compliance with (a) the European urban waste water treatment directive and (b) other relevant directives. [11654]

Mr. Clappison: The water quality of the River Ouse at Cawood is class D, "fair". The major influences on existing quality are the River Aire and some direct industrial discharges in the Selby area.

The urban waste water treatment directive applies to sewage discharges, not to the river itself, but is likely to contribute to improvements in water quality once its requirements come into effect in 2000. The Ouse already meets the existing requirements of the EU dangerous substances directive.

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct the Environment Agency to assess the risk, in terms of health and safety, of swimming and water sports on the River Ouse in the vicinity of Cawood, North Yorkshire. [11655]

Mr. Clappison: Advice about the acceptability or otherwise of swimming and water sports on the River Ouse in the vicinity of Cawood, North Yorkshire, is a matter for local public health officials.

Teesside Development Corporation

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many jobs have been created or safeguarded by the Teesside development corporation. [11872]

Sir Paul Beresford: From its establishment in 1987 to September 1996, the Teesside development corporation had created 10,650 permanent jobs in new developments. The total number of job opportunities created by the development corporation now exceeds 25,000.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the work on (a) the Teesside development corporation and (b) Stockton city challenge. [11873]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Teesside development corporation was established in 1987 and will be wound up in March 1998. The corporation estimates that during its lifetime it will have achieved:

the reclamation of 525 ha of derelict land;

the building or upgrading of 29 km of roads;

the building of 1,400 homes;

provision of 470,200 sq m of non-housing floorspace;

the attraction of £1,090 million of private sector investment;

the creation of over 11,000 permanent jobs in new developments, and over 26,000 job opportunities.

The development corporation has already made substantial progress towards these targets. Its activities are successfully transforming large areas of dereliction around Hartlepool, Middlesbrough and Stockton into exciting and attractive developments which are providing jobs, homes and leisure opportunities.

Stockton city challenge partnership currently estimates that during the lifetime of the initiative it will:

create 3,400 jobs;

lever in £111 million of private sector investment;

build or improve 4,928 homes;

support 291 new business start-ups; and provide 81,300 training weeks.

The operation of the city challenge in Stockton has also helped forge closer working relationships between the public and private sectors and the local community.

Sub-standard Homes

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy for reducing the number of sub-standard homes. [11772]

Mr. Clappison: Between 1986 and 1991, the number of unfit dwellings in England fell by 10 per cent. to 1.5 million. Of these, 62 per cent. needed less than £2,000 of work to make them fit, the majority being owner-occupied. The Government are investing, through the housing investment programme, to help local authorities maintain their stock, promoting the transfer of local authority stock to not-for-profit private landlords such as local housing companies, encouraging housing associations to buy up and repair run-down stock and providing renovation grants to help private owners make improvements to their homes—in 1995–96 £450 million was spent on 95,000 such grants.

Sewage Outfalls (Yorkshire)

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct the Environment Agency and the National Rivers Authority to review the Yorkshire Water Services' plans for an accelerated programme for dealing with crude sewage outfalls at certain Yorkshire coastal villages and to assess whether Cawood, in North Yorkshire, should be added to the list of villages in the programme. [11656]

Mr. Clappison: The National Rivers Authority was subsumed into the Environment Agency for England and Wales on 1 April 1996.

Yorkshire Water Services' plans to accelerate sewage treatment schemes voluntarily at certain coastal villages take account of the agency's views. The assessment of the agency is that the discharge at Cawood has a lesser effect which would not justify the scheme being given priority in advance of action to meet the requirements of the urban waste water treatment directive by the deadline of 2005.

Environmental Information (Disclosure)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on how the revised code of practice on access to Government information, second edition, published on 14 January, will affect the disclosure of environmental information. [11776]

Sir Paul Beresford: The revised code will not affect the disclosure of the environmental information. The code—like its predecessor—is non-statutory, and cannot override the existing statutory right of access to environmental information contained in the Environmental Information Regulations 1992.

Housing (West Midlands)

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many families were (a) officially homeless, (b) living in temporary accommodation and (c) have had homes repossessed in (i) Coventry and (ii) the west midlands in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [11773]

Mr. Clappison: The information requested on homeless acceptances and households in temporary accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985 is as follows:

	Homeless acceptances	Households in temporary accommodation at 31 December[1]
Coventry
1991	459	5
1992	455	9
1993	341	6

1995	644	1
West Midlands
1991	18,400	2,120
1992	17,520	1,650
1993	17,060	1,430
1994	16,430	1,250
1995	18,090	1,470

[1] Covers both households accepted as homeless and households awaiting the outcome of inquiries into their application.

Information is not available on repossessions in coventry and the west midlands.

Packaging Waste Regulations

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government plan to implement the Producer Responsibility (Packaging Waste) Regulations. [11803]

Mr. Clappison: We hope to lay draft regulations before the House by the end of January.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in implementing the proposals concerning transparency in decision making relating to the rock characterisation facility proposals contained in the joint Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee—Advisory Committee on the Safety of Nuclear Installations. [12109]

Mr. Clappison: In March 1995, the Department published a report by a study group drawn from members of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee and the Advisory Committee on the Safety of Nuclear Installations on "Site Selection for Radioactive Waste Disposal Facilities and the Protection of Human Health".

In view of the importance which the report attached to transparency of decision making, Nirex made proposals to enhance and put onto a regular cycle the publication of information about its scientific work and the development of its repository programme. In the White Paper, "Review of Radioactive Waste Management Policy" (CM 2919), the Government welcomed this initiative and said that they would seek the advice of RWMAC on the company's proposals.

RWMAC's advice is being published on Tuesday 21 January in a report, "Nirex's Proposals for Publication and Peer Review", copies of which are available in the Library of the House. The Government welcomes Nirex's proposals and RWMAC's recommendations on them. My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside, has written to the chairman of Nirex commending the committee's recommendations to him.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to promote more efficient energy use. [10593]

Mr. Clappison: My Department actively promotes energy efficiency through a wide range of initiatives and programmes across all sectors, including information and advice, voluntary schemes, and selective use of grants, incentives and regulation.

I am pleased that we were able to announce in the Budget an increase in funding for the Energy Saving Trust. Planned funding for the years 1997–98 to 1999–2000 has been increased by a total of £21.5 million.

Genetically Altered Food

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on genetically altered food imports; and if he will make a statement. [10609]

Mr. Clappison: A number of representations from various sources have been received on this issue. The importation and release of genetically modified organisms are controlled by part VI of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and regulations made under it. In accordance with this legislation, the Secretary of State, acting jointly with the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, may grant a consent for the release of genetically modified organisms after evaluating the impacts and risks posed to human health and the environment. The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has the general responsibility for the safety of genetically modified food.

Walton Bridge Replacement

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the starting date for the public inquiry into Surrey county council's proposals for a replacement Walton bridge over the River Thames and into the associated compulsory purchase orders. [11308]

Sir Paul Beresford: Arrangements for the public local inquiries into the proposed Walton bridge replacement are being held in abeyance pending expiry of the objection periods for the side roads order, compulsory purchase order and bridge schemes applications submitted to the Secretary of State for Transport in relation to the proposal. It seems probable that joint inquiries into these applications and related planning and exchange land certificate applications will need to be convened. I can assure my hon. Friend that he will be notified as soon as a date for the inquiries has been agreed.

Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reasons the month of August was chosen for the count of income support claimant case load for each local authority in order for his Department to work out the standard spending assessment levels; and what consideration was given to seeking the most representative month. [11945]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Benefits Agency carries out its annual count of claimants in August as a matter of managerial practicality. Similar counts for other months are not available.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many income support claimants his Department was unable to allocate to local authorities on a postcode basis used for the standard spending assessment calculations; and how these claimants were finally taken into account. [11943]

Sir Paul Beresford: For 98.5 per cent. of income support claimants, it is possible to allocate them to a local authority area by reference to a postcode. The assumption made in relation to the remaining 1.5 per cent. of claimants is that, within each benefit office, the distribution among local authorities of claimants whose postcode is unknown is in the same proportions as for claimants at the same benefit office whose postcode is known.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the expected benefits in moving from a sample count of income support claimants four times per year to a 100 per cent. count on one date for use in the standard spending assessment calculations; and how seasonality is taken into account in the change. [11948]

Sir Paul Beresford: We wish to base the standard spending assessments on the most reliable data available. We received representations from local government that the 100 per cent. count provided more reliable data than the quarterly 5 per cent. samples. The main advantage of a 100 per cent. count is its comprehensiveness, compared with the quarterly 5 per cent. samples. The advantages and disadvantages of both sources of data were discussed with the local authority associations. The data were also examined by the Office for National Statistics, which tested whether there were seasonal effects on the data. It advised that an adjustment should be made on this account in relation to a few authorities. Adjustments have been made in the light of its advice.

Standard Spending Assessment (Pupil Numbers)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to check pupil numbers in Birmingham used in the standard spending assessment calculations in respect of information given to him by the local education authority. [11946]

Sir Paul Beresford: The numbers of pupils used in the calculation of standard spending assessments are as estimated by the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. The Department for Education and Employment has been asked to investigate the representations about pupil numbers which we have received.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities which have had meetings with Ministers in his Department regarding the provision of revenue support grant for 1997–98. [11947]

Sir Paul Beresford: The table lists authorities which have had meeting with Ministers in the Department of the Environment during the consultation period on the proposed local government finance settlement for England for 1997–98.

Many other local authorities have raised revenue support grant issues in the course of meetings held throughout the year.

[11949]

Sir Paul Beresford: The table lists those metropolitan districts and London boroughs which had meetings with Ministers in the Department of the Environment during the consultation period on the local government finance settlements in each of the last four years.

Standard spending assessments, revenue support grant and capping limits have also been discussed in other meetings held by Ministers over the years.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what allowance is made for regional functions and factors in respect of metropolitan districts' level of standard spending assessments and revenue support grants. [11950]

Sir Paul Beresford: Regional functions are reflected in the formulae for standard spending assessments, and hence the revenue support grant allocations, by the inclusion of numbers of commuters, day visitors and overnight visitors.

Standing Spending Assessment (Jobseeker's Allowance)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how claimants of the jobseeker's allowance are to be taken into account in calculating local authority standard spending assessment levels for 1997–98. [11944]

Sir Paul Beresford: The proposed standard spending assessments for 1997–98 use data on numbers of unemployed over a three-year period in 1993–96 and income support claimants in 1995. They therefore predate the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance.

Pollution (Energy Conservation)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of current energy conservation measures in reducing pollution. [12118]

Mr. Clappison: The progress report on carbon dioxide emissions from the UK's climate change programme, which was published in December 1995, includes an assessment of the energy efficiency measures which were in operation at that time. The Government are preparing a second national communication under the United Nations framework convention. This will report on progress since December 1995.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to direct Nirex to investigate alternative sites for the establishment of an underground nuclear repository. [12150]

Mr. Clappison: None. Subject to planning permission and compliance with regulatory requirements, the selection of a suitable site for an underground repository for intermediate level radioactive waste is a matter for Nirex itself.

Local Education Authority Spending

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors underlie the differences in the rules for local education authority spending limits according to whether they are London boroughs, shire counties or metropolitan districts. [12054]

Sir Paul Beresford: In determining the caps limits for each class of authority, the Secretary of State takes into a range of factors including the pressures on authorities and the underlying increases in standard spending assessment.

WALES

Sea Empress Oil Spill

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimates he has made, for each wild bird species affected by the Sea Empress disaster, of the total number of birds killed, indicating in each case the number as a percentage of the estimated population in the area affected. [11348]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Under Secretary on 25 April 1996, Official Report, columns 268–69. There are no significant changes in the number known to have been killed since then, although I am advised that a survey of the common scoter sea duck has suggested a substantially decreased number of the species from last winter.

Hedgerow Preservation

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implications for Wales of the judgment of Hull county court by Judge Cracknell concerning preservation of ancient hedgerows. [11434]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 20 January by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Department of the Environment, Official Report column 437.

Public Expenditure

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of Wales what was the total spending per head of the population in Wales derived from (a) European Commission sources and (b) Her Majesty's Treasury, in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [11504]

Mr. Hague: In 1994–95, control total expenditure within my responsibility was £2,248 per head. European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund and European regional development fund receipts channelled through my Department in the same year totalled £75 per head.

Cardiff Print Centre and Bookshop

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment his Department has made of the financial and social impact of The Stationery Office's proposals for the Cardiff print centre and Cardiff book shop; and if he will make a statement. [11343]

Mr. Hague: My Department has made no such assessment. There is a contract between the Arts Council of Wales and The Stationery Office in respect of the management of the Oriel bookshop in Cardiff. The provision of services under the contract is a matter for the Arts Council and The Stationery Office.

Public Appointments Panel

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when and by what means the appointments panel positions announced on 14 January were advertised. [11707]

Mr. Hague: They were not advertised.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many members of the public appointments panel announced on 14 January are members of a political party. [11705]

Mr. Hague: I am not aware that any are members of a political party, and they were not asked for this information.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the criteria for inclusion in the list of advisers for Ministers on public appointments, announced on 14 January. [11706]

Mr. Hague: The criteria for inclusion on the list were wide experience of organisations and management at a senior level; an understanding of the context in which public bodies operate; and some distinction in their own careers or profession. Some direct experience of service in a public appointment was an advantage. The individuals on the list come from a variety of backgrounds and offer a wide range of different experiences and skills.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many private finance initiative projects his Department is involved in; if he will list them; and if he will make a statement. [11672]

Mr. Hague: Private finance initiative projects in which the Welsh Office is involved include: where deals have been agreed: Welsh Office IT system—OSIRIS;—University Hospital of Wales, phases 1 and 2 car parks and concourse; energy management schemes at Withybush and Llandough hospitals; where projects are being considered: Bute avenue, Cardiff; A55 Anglesey; M4 relief road; A465 heads of the valleys road; staff residential accommodation and IT system, district general hospital, Llantrisant; day surgery unit, Nevill hall, Abergavenny; community hospital, Chepstow; replacement of radiotherapy equipment, Velindre; new general hospital at Baglan; Bronllys-Newtown hospitals, elderly medical, nursing and mental health facilities; north Meirionnydd-east Dwyfor community hospital; national library of Wales, IS-IT system; Ysgol Gyfun Cwm Rhymni, Caerphilly.

North Wales Health Authority Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what level of capitation funding the North Wales health authority will receive in 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [11669]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The 1997–98 health authority allocations have not yet been announced.

General Practice

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of general practices in each health authority area in Wales. [12078]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is given in the table. Information for the new health authority areas is not yet available.

Community Hospital, Porthmadog

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will approve the start of construction of the new community hospital at Porthamdog. [12027]

Mr. Hague: No. The outline business case for this scheme has been approved, and Gwynedd Community NHS trust is testing for private sector interest within the private finance initiative. The North Wales health authority has asked the trust to delay discussions with the private sector until its completes its major review of service priorities in March.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland Grand Committee

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many submissions he has received in relation to his proposals for extending the powers and role of the Northern Ireland Grand Committee; how many were favourable; and if he will make a statement on his future plans and their timing on the matter. [11196]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Six substantive responses have been received as of Friday 17 January. It would not be appropriate to comment on them without prior approval and in circumstances in which further submissions are expected.

A decision in this context will be taken when the consultation process is completed.

Eye Surgery

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy with respect to providing the radial keratotomy procedure in the health service; what assessment he has made as to its efficacy; and if he will make a statement on its acceptance in respect of police appointments. [11197]

Mr. Moss: Radial keratotomy is not routinely available in the health and personal social services in Northern Ireland. The procedure is often viewed as cosmetic since short-sightedness can be corrected with glasses or contact lenses. It would be a matter for health and social services boards and general practitioner fundholders to decide whether or not to purchase this procedure based on the health needs of their population.

A person who has had radial keratotomy is not regarded as acceptable for recruitment to the Royal Ulster Constabulary or the Reserve, as is also the case for most UK police forces and the armed forces. This advice has been included in recent medical guidelines circulated to the police service by the Home Office.

Targeting Social Need Policy

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) policy and (b) discussion papers he has issued since the "targeting social need" policy was adopted by the Government; how this policy was to be implemented; and what were the reasons behind that approach. [10940]

Mr. Ancram: The "targeting social need" initiative has sought to direct resources towards Northern Ireland's most disadvantaged areas and people, objectively defined as being in greatest need, irrespective of community background. A major effect of this should be to reduce socio-economic differentials between Protestants and Catholics. This approach was taken because of statistical evidence of greater levels of deprivation among Catholics than among Protestants, though socio-economic disadvantage exists on both sides of the community.

The targeting social need approach has been reflected in a range of strategy documents and discussion papers published by Northern Ireland Departments in recent years on their social and economic policies. Examples include the Department of Economic Development's publication "Growing Competitively", May 1995, and the Department of the Environment's "Making Belfast Work" strategy document, March 1995. Published research papers on patterns of disadvantage and community differentials have also helped in applying the initiative.

Further Education Initiative

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which further education colleges are being considered for initiatives under the private finance initiative; and what procedures are being followed in respect of such initiatives with particular reference to the Government's plans to incorporate the colleges. [10943]

Mr. Ancram: Procedures under the private finance initiative are currently being applied to major capital needs at the North West and Belfast institutes of further and higher education. These procedures will be unaffected by the planned incorporation of further education colleges in Northern Ireland.

School Closures

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) powers and (b) duties he has in relation to school closures and amalgamations. [10945]

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Education's powers and duties in relation to the closure or amalgamation of controlled or voluntary schools are contained in article 14 of the Education and Libraries (Northern Ireland) Order 1986.

In addition, the Department has powers and duties under articles 80, 81 and 82 of the 1989 Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 in relation to the closure, withdrawal of grant and winding up of a grant-maintained integrated school.

Legislation Programme

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce legislation on (a) further education, (b) nursery vouchers, (c) education and library boards and (d) race relations. [10980]

Mr. Ancram: The legislative position is as follows:

(a) I am currently considering the responses that I received during the consultation on the draft Further Eduction (Northern Ireland) Order 1997.

(b) A draft Education (No.2) Order 1996, which includes provision for nursery vouchers, was laid before Parliament on 3 December 1996.

(c) I am currently considering the responses that I received during the consultation on the draft Education and Library Boards (Northern Ireland) Order 1997.

(d) A draft Race Relations (Northern Ireland) Order was laid before Parliament on 14 January 1997.

Action for Community Employment

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the operation of the action for community employment scheme. [10979]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. Ian Walters to Mr. [illegible] Worthington, dated 22 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about the Action for Community Employment (ACE) scheme.

The ACE scheme was introduced in 1981, as the Northern Ireland counterpart to the Community Programme in Great Britain, to provide temporary employment, with training, of up to one year's duration for long term unemployed adults in projects of community benefit. Its essential purpose is to enable participants gain practical work experience which in turn will help them to compete more effectively for available permanent jobs.

There are currently 229 ACE projects of which the majority are sponsored by voluntary organisations, local community groups, charitable bodies and churches. The range of activities undertaken by the projects include care of the elderly and disabled, environmental and conservation work, research and administration.

ACE peaked in the early 1990s with over 10,000 places available across Northern Ireland. As you know, the resources allocated to ACE were reduced in each of the last two Public Expenditure Surveys. In the 1995/96 financial year £49.96 million was spent providing an average occupancy of 9,189 ACE places. This year £39.8 million has been allocated to provide an average occupancy of 7,200 places. In 1997/98 and the following two years ACE has been allocated £28.5 million which will support around 5,200 places.

One of the indicators which the Agency uses to measure the performance of ACE is the percentage of leavers who proceed into employment, further education or training. In recent years approximately 40% of participants achieved a positive outcome on leaving the scheme.

You may also wish to know that at the end of September 1996, the latest date for which data is available, 53% of ACE workers were female and 35% of ACE posts were part-time.

I hope you find this information useful.

Higher Education (Research Support)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors underlie the changes in the Northern Ireland arrangements for research support in Northern Ireland higher education. [10986]

Mr. Ancram: The maintenance of law and order as the Government's top spending priority in Northern Ireland and the decision to concentrate resources within the education service on schools, and in particular the classroom, were the main factors underlying the reductions which will be made from 1997–98, inter alia, in the levels of research support to be provided to the two Northern Ireland universities.

Gallaher Ltd.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when (a) he and (b) officials from his Department last met representatives of Gallaher Ltd.; what was discussed; and if he will make a statement. [11164]

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend last met representatives of Gallaher Ltd. on 13 November 1995 when he was principal guest at the Gallaher businesswoman of the year awards ceremony. Officials of the industrial development board last met representatives of Gallaher Ltd. on 29 November 1996 to discuss the company's plans to rationalise cigarette production in the UK.

Youth Service Budget

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the budget for the youth service in cash and constant price terms for 1996–97 and 1997–98; what consequences this will have for the provision of services; and if he will make a statement. [10981]

Mr. Ancram: The budget for the youth service for 1996–97 is £15.5 million.

Funding for the youth service is provided by education and library boards within their block grant allocations and by the Youth Council for Northern Ireland. Each board decides on the resources which should be allocated for its youth service, and their proposals for 1997–98 will be submitted to the Department for approval by 31 January.

The Youth Council and the education and library boards will not have had sufficient time to determine the full effects of the expenditure reductions in the youth service. However, it remains the Government's priority that services should be focused on those most in need, and whenever possible, service provision rather than service support be protected.

The Government also provide additional matching funding for youth organisations under the European Union special initiative for peace and reconciliation and will continue to provide additional funds to meet up to 25 per cent. of the total cost of projects funded under this initiative.

Student Awards

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the budget for discretionary and postgraduate student awards in cash and constant price terms for 1996–97 and 1997–98; what consequences this will have for the provision of services; and if he will make a statement. [10983]

Mr. Ancram: It is a matter for each education and library board to determine how much of its block grant should be allocated to discretionary awards. The 1996–97 budget is £6.9 million but that for 1997–98 has yet to be determined.

The table sets out the financial information for postgraduate awards made by the Department of Education for Northern Ireland.

£ million

Year	Budget (cash)	At 1996–97 prices
1996–97	4.6	4.6
1997–98	4.4	4.3

The detailed application of the 1997–98 budget is still under consideration.

I will write to the hon. Member about both discretionary and postgraduate awards when further information becomes available and I will place a copy in the Library.

Urban Regeneration

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the changes in financial and policy terms to the provision for urban regeneration, including "Making Belfast Work", arising from his recent statement on public expenditure in Northern Ireland. [10987]

Mr. Moss: The recent statement on public expenditure in Northern Ireland re-iterated the importance that the Government place on urban regeneration as a major policy initiative. "Making Belfast Work" will have £23 million available for its economic and social programmes in 1997–98 representing a £5 million baseline reduction in the existing allocation.

Otherwise, urban regeneration vote provision is to be reduced by £4 million over the same period, leaving almost £31 million available for regeneration initiatives in Belfast, Londonderry and regional growth centres.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he proposes to publish the 1996 report on the Royal Ulster Constabulary by Her Majesty's inspector of constabulary. [12586]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Copies of the 1996 inspection report, which is the fourth RUC inspection report to be published, have today been placed in the Library.

I welcome the report and will be considering its recommendations carefully.

HMIC inspections offer the opportunities of independent, professional examination of policing practices, policies and priorities. This inspection forms part of an ongoing programme intended to examine over succeeding years aspects of police management. It is the fourth in a series and has covered a number of areas relating to the effectiveness and efficiency of operational policing.

I am grateful to Her Majesty's inspector for the report and am pleased to note that overall he regards the force as efficient.

HEALTH

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make it his policy to ensure that every child moved from one foster home to another more than three times should be assessed for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder; and if he will make a statement. [11532]

(2) what recent evidence he has evaluated in respect of the number of times children in care are moved; if he will make it his policy to require all social service departments to incorporate a full assessment for attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder by a specially qualified medical practitioner into the social services' own assessment as to whether a child should enter care; and if he will make a statement. [11507]

Mr. Burns: The criteria for taking children into care is set out in sections 20 and 31 of the Children Act 1989.

Local authorities have responsibilities and duties under the Children Act to arrange placement for children looked after which will promote and safeguard their welfare. In order to achieve this, authorities must undertake a full assessment of children's needs, including health needs, and match them to appropriate placements. The assessment should, when appropriate, be in collaboration with other agencies. It is for local authorities to monitor the number of times children are moved because of placement breakdown.

Rural Pharmacies

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to safeguard rural pharmacies. [11474]

Mr. Malone: In England and Wales the essential small pharmacy scheme already provides financial support to pharmacies located more than 1 km from the next nearest pharmacy and which dispense fewer than 18,636 national health service prescriptions in a year.

Residential Care Costs

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost of a resident in (a) private nursing homes, (b) private residential homes and (c) local authority residential homes; and what estimate he has made of the total number of residents in (a) to (c) and the current annual costs to public funds arising from funding relating to (a) to (c). [11487]

Mr. Burns: Information is collected centrally on the overall numbers of residents of all types of care homes but not on the overall costs or costs per place in independent sector homes, nor on the costs to public funds overall of residents. The latest centrally available information is given in the table, including figures for gross current expenditure per week by local authorities on residential and nursing care for older people per supported resident.

Number of residents in residential and nursing homes and total expenditure by local authorities

	(a) Independent sector nursing homes[1]	(b) Independent sector residential homes[1]	(c) Local authority residential homes
Total number of residents[2], at 31 March 1996	123,600	228,600	64,200

Hypothermia

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of treating (a) hypothermia and (b) hypothermia-related cases in each of the last five years. [11473]

Mr. Burns: This information is not collected.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December 1996, Official Report, column 820, relating to dentists' pay, what is his definition of a single dentist. [11606]

Mr. Malone: In my answer of 6 December, Official Report, column 820, the "single dentist" was the independent contractor who was paid the highest gross fee earnings by the Dental Practice Board in the relevant year.

Capital Projects (Greater London)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the capital projects costing over £100,000 which have been started in Greater London since 17 April 1992. [11488]

Mr. Malone: Information is available centrally only on capital schemes costing over £1 million, for which national health service executive approval is required. All such schemes in Greater London, with a start on site date between 17 April 1992 and 30 September 1996—the most recent date for which information is available—are provided in the table.

Neurologists

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many neurologists there are per 100,000 population in (a) England and (b) each member state of the European Union. [11881]

Mr. Malone: There were 510 neurologists in England as at 30 September 1995. This gives one doctor per 100,000 of population.

The Department receives no information about the numbers of neurologists in other member states of the European Union.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average waiting time for a consultation with a consultant neurologist following a General Practitioner referral in each NHS trust in England. [11899]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. Such information as is available is contained in "Waiting Times for First Outpatient Appointments in England: Detailed Statistics—Quarter ended 30 September 1996", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to increase the number of neurologists. [11882]

Mr. Malone: The specialist workforce advisory group advises the NHS executive and the Welsh Office on the number of higher specialist trainees needed, to ensure an adequate supply of properly trained doctors in each specialty. The Government accepted its recommendation to increase the number of higher specialist trainees in 1996–97 by 1,500. Additional funding of £5.7 million has been provided for this. The recommended increase in numbers of higher specialist trainees in neurology was 12 per cent.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many MS patients had been prescribed beta interferon by hospital consultants at the latest date for which information is available. [11885]

Mr. Malone: Data are not collected centrally on drugs prescribed and dispensed in hospitals. The only data available are from the prescribing analysis cost system generated by the Prescription Pricing Authority, and relate only to prescriptions dispensed in the community. A total of 266 prescriptions for beta interferon products were dispensed in the community during July–September 1996.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 151, if he will make it his policy to collect information centrally on health authorities financial allocations for beta interferon. [11954]

Mr. Malone: No. It is for individual health authorities to decide the level and type of services purchased in partnership with general practitioners locally and through consultation with other agencies and local people, taking account of local circumstances and national policies and priorities.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of accident and emergency departments by region. [11675]

Mr. Horam: The number of national health service trusts, special health authorities and directly managed units with large accident and emergency departments in 1995–96 is given by region in the table.

	Number
Northern and Yorkshire	30
Trent	16
Anglia and Oxford	21
North Thames	31
South Thames	30
South and West	25
West Midlands	25
North West	33
England	211

Cannabis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cannabis derivatives which can lawfully by prescribed by doctors. [11876]

Mr. Malone: Dronabinol and nabilone are the only cannabis derivatives that may be lawfully prescribed by doctors.

NHS Finance

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will place in the Library a paper indicating the (a) cash to be allocated for general medical services in 1997–98, (b) the percentage change in the GMS allocation from 1996–97 to 1997–98 and (c) the estimated resident population in 1997–98 for each health authority; [12086]

(2) if he will place in the Library a paper indicating the amount of money gained or lost by each health authority from its HCHS capitation funding target for 1997–98 as a result of (a) changes to the market forces factor and (b) other changes to the capitation funding formula, indicating the nature of those other changes; [12088]

(3) if he will place in the Library a paper indicating (a) in (i) cash and (ii) percentage terms the change in HCHS funding between 1996–97 and 1997–98, (b) the 1997–98 HCHS cash allocation and (c) in (i) cash and (ii) percentage terms the distance of each health authority from the HCHS target in 1997–98. [12089]

Mr. Horam: The information requested can be found in the 1997–98 "Health Authority Revenue Cash Limits Exposition Book", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account he takes of rurality when calculating funding for hospital and community health services and for general medical services. [12010]

Mr. Horam: The analytical work on which the hospital and community health service formula is based considered both population density and the proportion of population living in urban areas as drivers of need that are relevant to rural areas. None of these factors proved to be statistically significant enough to feature in the formula. However, rurality may be a factor in the cost of providing services, particularly community health and ambulance services, and invitations to tender for appropriate research have been issued.

General practitioners' remuneration includes specific fees to recognise the costs and pressures of practice in rural areas.

Obesity

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of (a) men and (b) women aged 16 to 64 years his Department assessed to be obese in (i) 1993 and (ii) 1994. [12057]

Mr. Horam: In the Health Survey for England 13 per cent. of men and 16 per cent. of women aged 16 to 64 were classified as obese—defined as a body mass index of over 30kg/m^2—both in 1993 and in 1994.

Walsgrave Hospital

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the latest position as regards the Walsgrave hospital's private finance initiative proposals. [11939]

Mr. Horam: The Walsgrave hospitals national health service trust has submitted the full business case for the private finance initiative scheme. The national health service executive and Her Majesty's Treasury are reviewing the business case and will make a decision on the approval at the end of this review.

Income and Expenditure Returns

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what date (a) health authorities and (b) NHS trusts have to submit their 1996–97 third quarter income and expenditure returns and year end out-turn forecasts to the NHS executive; and when these returns will be available to hon. Members. [12129]

Mr. Horam: The forecast income and expenditure returns must be submitted to the national health service executive headquarters as follows:

Health authorities

(1) 1996–97 Quarter Three: 22 January 1997

(2) 1996–97 Quarter Four (year end out-turn): 23 April 1997

Trusts

(1) 1996–97 Quarter Three: 31 January 1997

(2) 1996–97 Quarter Four (year end out-turn): 30 April 1997

These returns will be available to hon. Members, following the meeting of the National Health Service Policy Board on:

(1) 1996–97 Quarter Three: 12 March 1997

(2) 1996–97 Quarter Four: 18 June 1997

Hospital Beds

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish the availability of hospital beds in the United Kingdom and each other EU member state per 100,000 people for the latest available year in which the European Union average is indexed at 100; [11575]

(2) what was the number of hospital beds per 100,000 people for the last three years for which figures are available in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) each EU country. [11565]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 19 June 1996 at column 496.

Salmonella Gold Coast Contamination

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many cases of food poisoning caused by salmonella gold coast contamination have been recorded in the last year; and what percentage of these cases can be attributed to cheese from Wyke Farms of Somerset; [11791]

(2) how many cases of food poisoning caused by salmonella gold coast contamination have been recorded in each of the district council areas of Cumbria in the last year; and what percentage of these have been attributed to cheese from Wyke Farms of Somerset. [11792]

Mr. Horam: The public health laboratory service reported 86 cases of infection with salmonella gold coast between January 1996 and 17 January 1997. Information is not held centrally as to their distribution between district council areas.

Epidemiological studies have been carried out on recent cases. These suggested a possible link with the consumption of cheese from Wyke Farms in 22 cases, around 25 per cent. of the total for the year. Scientific testing, using phage and molecular typing techniques, is taking place and has validated an association between the outbreak strain and some Wyke Farm cheeses. Full results are not yet available.

In Vitro Fertilisation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to review the level of financial contributions the patient makes towards the cost of IVF treatment; [11794]

(2) what financial contribution patients are asked to make to the cost of their IVF treatment; [11795]

(3) if he will make a statement on the funding of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority; [11796]

(4) how much of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's funding is received from patients requiring in vitro fertilisation treatments; [11797]

(5) how much of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's funding is received from doctors providing an in vitro vertilisation treatment. [11798]

Mr. Horam: In considering the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Bill, Parliament decided that a proportion of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's costs should be recovered by charging fees to licensed centres. The current aim is for 70 per cent. of the authority's costs to be met through fees from licensing, with the taxpayer meeting the remaining 30 per cent. This proportion is due to be reviewed by April 1998.

Licensed treatment clinics are required by the authority to pay an initial application fee of £250. A one-off fee of £100 is charged for each research licence and each storage facility licence. Renewal licences are charged according to the number of treatments conducted by the clinic. The charge rate is £40 for each IVF cycle and £10 for each donor insemination cycle. No charge is made for cycles abandoned. These rates have been in place since 1 September 1994.

Charges for infertility treatment are a matter for individual clinics and it is for them to decide if and how charges made by the authority should be passed on to its patients. However charges are not made to patients receiving treatment under the national health service.

The authority publishes its accounts annually and provides a summary in its annual report. The last annual report, published in July 1996, includes the authority's accounts for 1994–95. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11599]

Mr. Boswell: Ministers of the Crown are able to make use of the child care facilities provided by the Department if they wish to do so.

Poultry Feed (Antibiotics)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on the poultry industry of the proposed ban on Avoparcin by the European Commission; and if he will make a statement. [11640]

Mrs. Browning: Avoparcin has been used as a dietary enhancer in the European Community for more than 20 years. Although there are alternative products available, the British Poultry Meat Federation considers, that the potential loss of production could amount to between £10 million and £20 million a year in the UK.

Avoparcin has been assessed on a number of occasions by the UK's independent scientific veterinary products committee and by the EU Commission's scientific committee on animal nutrition. In 1995, Denmark and Germany introduced unilateral bans on its use in animal feed as a result of work by the Danish veterinary laboratory which purported to establish a link between the use of Avoparcin in animal feed and resistance to Vancomycin in the treatment of humans. Danish and German data were examined by the SCAN, which agreed that the data identified the existence of what might, with the benefit of further studies, prove to be a hazard but concluded that the data failed to establish any risk associated with that potential hazard. The VPC agreed. The UK therefore opposed a ban on use, but fully supported the EU Commission's proposal to set up a programme to examine the problem of the development of antibiotic resistance in humans and animals. The proposed ban was approved by qualified majority in standing committee in Brussels on 19 December with the UK voting against; subject to formal adoption of the amending directive by the European Commission, the ban will enter into force on 1 April 1997.

BSE

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with farmers in South Yorkshire regarding BSE and other related matters. [11662]

Mrs. Browning: I met representatives of the National Farmers' Union, Country Landowners Association, Tenant Farmers' Association and Women's Farming Union on 3 December at the North East regional panel meeting to discuss BSE.

No other official engagements have been undertaken by Ministers in the South Yorkshire area recently.

Disintensification (Rules and Policies)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek to amend those rules and policies designed to promote disintensification which creates difficulties, with special reference to the viability of the holding, for (a) small full-time farmers and (b) entrants to farming. [11849]

Mr. Baldry: In its 1992 reform of the common agricultural policy regime for beef, the Council of Agriculture Ministers recognised that the imposition of stocking density limits for subsidy purposes and the promotion of extensive production would help to eliminate surplus production within the Community. The Council subsequently recognised that intensive systems for both beef and sheep could give rise to environmental damage, and empowered member states to reduce livestock subsidies and impose penalties in such cases. The Government are willing to consider any constructive proposal to amend the rules governing these measures, provided that they are cost-effective, negotiable in EU terms, and that the environmental benefits are maintained.

Food Premises Inspections

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many inspections of retail and manufacturing food premises were carried out in each local authority area in England in each year since 1990. [12094]

Mrs. Browning: Copies of summaries showing the total number of inspections carried out in food premises in each UK local authority area for the years 1991 to 1995 have been placed in the Library. Data for the year 1990 is not available and the data for 1996 will not be available until May this year.

A breakdown of these figures showing inspections specifically in retail and manufacturing premises in England is not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Agriculture Council

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 20 and 21 January. [12264]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Council held a first discussion of the Commission's report on the future of the tobacco regime. I asked for the possibility of phasing out support for tobacco to be examined along with other options identified by the Commission.

The Council unanimously adopted a proposal strengthening the controls over eligibility for aid for growing flax. It adopted by qualified majority, Germany opposing, a proposal providing for the EC to contribute to member states' costs in dealing with serious plant pests.

During an informal discussion on follow up to the Cork declaration on rural development, Commissioner Fischler outlined his view that EU rural support policy needed to be simpler, more comprehensible and better integrated, taking greater account of subsidiarity. I broadly welcomed these principles, stressing the need for budget neutrality and the importance of considering these issues in the context of the CAP reforms which will be required to take account of EU enlargement.

Agro-food Quality

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what priorities to improve competitiveness have been announced since March 1995 as a result of the LINK programme on agro-food quality; and if he will make a statement. [10538]

Mrs. Browning: Since March 1995, nine projects within the agro-food quality Link programme have been successfully completed. These collaborative projects involved the efforts of 11 United Kingdom academic groups and 17 companies. The projects have contributed industrially valuable, underpinning knowledge in such topics as determining the importance of irrigation timing to the storage quality of root vegetables, the development and release of flavour in low-fat foods and an investigation of the factors contributing to the eating quality of meat. The results from these projects are now being used by the industrial partners from the project consortia.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Staffing Costs

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what progress has been made on separating the staffing costs of hon. Members out of the office costs allowance since his meeting with Sir Michael Perry. [11035]

Mr. Newton: Further to my reply of 16 October 1996, Official Report, column 903, the Senior Salaries Review Body is continuing its deliberations.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: to ask the Lord President of the Council if he will extend the facilities and services of the staff welfare department to hon. Members and their staff, with particular reference to nursery provision. [11353]

Mr. Newton: I have no such plans. Hon. Members may, however, charge nursery provision against their office costs allowance.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Lord President of the Council what estimate he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10188]

Mr. Newton: I am not responsible for any non-departmental public bodies.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the actions his Department has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the Cabinet Office report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants". [10189]

Mr. Newton: The Privy Council Office makes only limited use of external consultants, but guidelines are in place on the procedures for placing such contracts. These require that proposals for any use of consultants should be submitted for my personal approval.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what child care facilities are provided by his Department. [11582]

Mr. Newton: None. The Privy Council Office has a staff of fewer than 40. It would not be cost-effective for a Department of this size to provide its own child care facilities.

ENVIRONMENT

Council Housing

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council properties have been built in each of the London boroughs in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [11312]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities' primary housing tasks are the efficient management of their own stock of housing and enabling other organisations to provide new housing. Housing associations are now the main providers of new social housing.

The publication "Local Housing Statistics" shows estimates of housebuilding completions for each local authority area in England, as reported to the Department. This includes all the London boroughs. It shows completions by sector, including activity by local authorities.

"Local Housing Statistics" issue number 105 shows figures for 1991: number 109 covers 1992; number 110 covers 1993; number 117 covers 1994; and number 118 covers 1995. Figures for 1996 as a whole are not yet available.

Copies of this publication are in the Library.

United Nations Environment Programme

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he plans to put forward at the 19th meeting of the United Nations environment programme governing council; and if he will place in the Library copies of the decisions taken at the last five meetings of the UNEP governing council. [12370]

Mr. Gummer: The Government's main objective at the governing council will be to secure decisions which help to restore confidence in the United Nations environment programme and hence to reverse the recent decline in financial contributions, particularly from major donors. We believe UNEP needs a governing structure which provides political guidance and a clear direction so that it can concentrate on its core activities of monitoring the state of the global environment, identifying emerging problems and stimulating international action to deal with those problems. We shall be seeking to agree a programme of work for the organisation over the next biennium—1998–99—which focussed on key priorities such as work on chemicals, biosafety and the oceans.

Copies of the decisions of the 18th governing council in 1995 are being placed in the Library. Those from the four preceding governing councils will follow shortly.

Water Quality

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the impact of the Government's requirement of cost neutrality for water quality standards in future EU bathing water directives; and if he will compare the standard produced by this formula with that indicated as necessary by his Department's bathing water epidemiological studies. [10864]

Mr. Clappison: The Government have expressed no requirement for cost neutrality in any revision of the EU bathing water directive but seek to ensure that standards are based on sound science. Departments' bathing water epidemiological studies indicate that the current directive standards give adequate protection to health and do not support the introduction of more stringent standards.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what numerical level of mandatory standard for faecal streptococcus bacteria the Government are prepared to agree to in the revised EU bathing water directive. [10863]

Mr. Clappison: In the light of the Government's epidemiological studies, we consider that the standard for faecal streptococci in any revision of the EU bathing water directive should be broadly equivalent in protective effect to the mandatory standards for coliform bacteria in the existing directive. Our current best estimates are that this would be in the region of 1,000 to 1,200 faecal streptococci per 100ml.

Irish Sea (Research)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his letter of 14 November, if he will make a statement on his Department's co-operation with Irish colleagues to identify appropriate research to be undertaken on nutrient inputs and algae blooms in the Irish sea. [10855]

Mr. Clappison: My Department has been working on these issues with Irish colleagues for a number of years. In conjunction with the Environment and Marine Departments of the Irish Republic, the Department of the Environment, together with the Departments for Agriculture and for the Environment in Northern Ireland, funded a three-year project to review research and monitoring in the Irish sea, under an Irish sea science co-ordinator. The third report was published in 1995 and identified priorities for research on the Irish sea, including nutrient inputs and the extent to which algal populations may be affected by human-derived nutrient enrichment. Officials from both countries have met to discuss the co-ordination of work on these topics within their respective research programmes.

As part of the "Quality Status Report", being prepared by 2000 for the whole of the north-east Atlantic under the auspices of the Oslo and Paris Commission, the Irish Republic and the UK are jointly responsible for the section dealing with the Celtic seas, including the Irish sea. This will comprise a compilation of current knowledge about the area, an evaluation of the information to agreed criteria of environmental quality and a statement on the prevailing conditions of the area, including its marine chemistry and biology. This work will further inform future research programmes in both countries.

Groundwater

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his letter of 17 September, what assessment he has made of whether United Kingdom arrangements for the protection of groundwater will need to be amended as a result of the EU's groundwater action plan. [10862]

Mr. Clappison: The position on the groundwater action programme remains as set out in my letter of 17 September, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. The programme has to be discussed by the Council of Ministers and the European Parliament and until its final form is agreed it is not possible to assess whether the arrangements in place in the UK would require amendment.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the percentage increase on the average level of council tax in 1997–98. [11853]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have made no estimate. The level of council taxes will depend on the spending decisions of individual authorities.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the rate support grant capping levels for each (a) inner London borough, (b) shire county and (c) metropolitan district local education authority in 1996–97 and proposed for 1997–98. [12336]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is available in the Library of the House.

Sellafield

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has to accept new evidence in his consideration of the planning inspector's report on the rock characterisation facility near Sellafield; [12398]

(2) when he expects to make a decision on the rock characterisation facility proposal at Sellafield; [12205]

(3) what (a) further information he will be seeking and (b) further consultation he will be conducting before making a decision on the proposed rock characterisation facility at Sellafield. [12204]

Mr. Gummer: The planning inspector's report of the inquiry, which I received on 25 November, is currently being considered with a view to the decision being issued as soon as possible.

If anyone believes that new evidence has come to light which they feel is relevant and should be taken into account when the decision is made, they should submit it to me as soon as possible.

Requests that the inquiry should be reopened in the light of the information contained in the Nirex internal memorandum are still being considered.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when Nirex (a) provided him with and (b) published its interpretation of the groundwater dataset for the proposed rock characterisation facility at Sellafield; [12201]

(2) by what date UK Nirex Ltd. undertook to make the baseline hydrological dataset relating to a nuclear depository at Sellafield available for independent peer review. [12211]

(3) what evaluation he has made of the "Baseline Conditions Review" report funded by Nirex. [12212]

Mr. Gummer: Nirex report SA/96/006, "Rock Characterisation Facility, Longlands Farm, West Cumbria: Report on Baseline Groundwater Pressures and Hydrochemisttry", was published on 2 January 1997. At the same time, the company published a summary of the report, together with the conclusions of a peer review of the report by a group of independent experts, as Nirex report S/96/004, "Rock Characterisation Facility, Longlands Farm, West Cumbria: Report on Baseline Groundwater Pressures and Hydrochemistry, Summary Report".

A copy of report SA/96/006 was supplied to the environment agency on 6 December 1996 and a copy of report SA/96/004 on 23 December 1996. The agency will shortly be consulting publicly on the terms of an agreement, which it is minded to enter into the Nirex, setting out the basis on which the agency will assess and make public information provided by Nirex in advance of a formal application for authorisation to dispose of radioactive waste at whatever site is selected by Nirex.

Nirex's undertakings in respect of the timing of availability of this information are a matter for the company.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received about Nirex's two-dimensional model of the groundwater flow regime at Sellafield; [12200]

(2) when his Department received a three-dimensional model of the groundwater flow regime at Sellafield. [12199]

Mr. Gummer: Both two-dimensional and three-dimensional models of the Sellafield potential repository zone are described in Nirex report S/95/012, "Nirex 95: A Preliminary Analysis of the Groundwater Pathway for a Deep Repository at Sellafield", which was published in July 1995.

Evidence about the modelling of groundwater flow was presented to, and discussed at, the public inquiry held into Nirex's appeal against refusal of planning permission for an underground laboratory at Sellafield. I am currently considering the inspector's report of the inquiry.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when Nirex gave notice to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution that it would withdraw from the cost recovery programmes under which the HMIP assessment of Nirex proposals was funded. [12213]

Mr. Gummer: Nirex gave the required six months' notice of termination on 10 March 1994. The environment agency will shortly be consulting publicly on the terms of a new agreement which it is minded to enter into with Nirex.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee has given him in respect of the rock characterisation facility planned by Nirex at Longlands farm near Sellafield. [12301]

Mr. Gummer: Advice was contained in the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee's report, "Review of aspects of the scientific mission and role of the Nirex Rock Characterisation Facility at Sellafield", which was published in September 1995. Copies were placed in the Library of the House.

UN Commission on Sustainable Development

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make a statement on the progress made in the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development since its establishment; and if he will place in the Library the reports issued by the commission to date; [12396]

(2) what proposals the United Kingdom plans to put to the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development at its next inter-sessional meeting. [12397]

Mr. Gummer: The Commission on Sustainable Development was established following the Earth summit to review progress with the implementation of agenda 21. It has met five times and at its last meeting, in April and May last year, it completed its first programme of work which included a review of each of the chapters of agenda 21. The Secretary-General of the United Nations presents reports to the commission on each of the issues under consideration and the commission has negotiated a series of decisions resulting from these reports. Two of the most significant of the Commission's decisions were the decision in 1995 to establish an inter-governmental panel on forests and the decision in 1996 relating to the global consideration of oceans issues. The United Kingdom Government played a significant part in the framing of both decisions. A copy of the full set of decisions from the 1996 session of the Commission has been placed in the Library. Copies of decisions from the previous sessions will follow shortly.

The meeting of the Commission in April this year will be devoted to preparations for the United Nations General Assembly special session in June this year which will review progress since the Earth summit. The Government believe that the commission's mandate should be renewed at the special session and are working with their partners in the European Union to ensure the success of the special session and that the future work of the Commission concentrates on the key priorities for future action. The Government have published on 30 December a consultation document which sets out the Government's position on these matters. Comments are invited by 31 January. Copies of the consultation paper were placed in the Library.

The commission's secretariat has in past years invited Governments to make reports each year on the matters to be covered in the forthcoming session of the commission. Copies of the Government's reports to the commission were placed in the Library.

Radionuclide Returns

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of Nirex's report of February 1994 on expected radionuclide return times. [12203]

Mr. Gummer: None. The Environment Agency will shortly be consulting publicly on the terms of an agreement, which it is minded to enter into with Nirex, setting out the basis on which the agency will assess and make public information provided by Nirex in advance of a formal application for authorisation to dispose of radioactive waste at whatever site is selected by Nirex.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of Nirex's model of radionuclide return routes. [12202]

Mr. Gummer: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution undertook assessment studies based principally on the "Post-Closure Preliminary Assessment" which Nirex provided in November 1992. Reports of these assessment studies were placed in the Library of the House in November 1995.

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements are being made for the purchase of a site for the millennium exhibition. [13022]

Mr. Gummer: The Government are committed to the establishment of a national exhibition at Greenwich in 2000 to mark the new millennium and to the regeneration of the Greenwich peninsula. English Partnerships, which will be responsible for the regeneration of the Greenwich peninsula and for providing the site for the exhibition, has agreed terms with British Gas to acquire the site for £20 million. The exhibition site must be delivered to the Millennium Central, the company which will be responsible for delivering the exhibition, by September 1997. It is essential, therefore, that English Partnerships acquires the site immediately in order to commence the works essential to achieving this objective.

Parliamentary approval of this new expenditure will be sought in a supplementary estimate for the regeneration countryside and wildlife vote (class VI, vote 2). Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £20 million will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

TRANSPORT

Northstar Pennine Ltd.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consult the franchising director in respect of Northstar Pennine Ltd.'s placement of an advertisement in the Official Journal of the European Communities of 8 January inviting tenders for rolling stock for use on the Regional Railways north-east network. [12126]

Mr. Watts: No. The franchising director has required all bidders for the Regional Railways north-east franchise to bring forward proposals for the replacement of the existing class 308 rolling stock. Decisions on when to request expressions of interest for rolling stock procurement are a matter for bidders and not the franchising director.

New Car Assessment Programme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department has completed its assessment of the reliability of the research undertaken as part of the new car assessment programme; what information collated under the new car assessment programme will not be published by his Department; and when the research results for other models of vehicle covered by the new car assessment programme will be published. [12134]

Mr. Bowis: We are confident that the tests which we are carrying out give a reliable picture of how cars would perform in real accidents. Consumer information on all the tests and a more detailed Transport Research Laboratory research report will be published. Any information provided in confidence by manufacturers on their own internal test work will not be published.

The test programme is now being taken forward jointly by an international partnership called Euro NCAP. Apart from the Department of Transport, those involved presently include the Swedish National Road Administration, the Federation Internationale de l'Automobile, Royal Automobile Club, the Automobile Association and International Testing, representing consumer organisations.

Consumer information on the super-mini phase will be published under the Euro NCAP banner as will subsequent results for family cars this summer, and the Escort/Golf group in spring 1998.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1996, Official Report, column 417, how many vehicles have been purchased as part of the research being undertaken as a result of the new car assessment programme; and if he will name the vehicles, indicating how many of each were published and the average amount paid for each vehicle. [12135]

Mr. Bowis: To date, my Department has purchased 12 car models in connection with the new car assessment programme. The seven in the super-mini group are the Fiat Punto, Ford Fiesta, Renault Clio, Rover 100, Nissan Micra, Vauxhall Corsa and the VW Polo. The five in the family group are the BMW 318, Citroen Xantia, Peugeot 406, Rover 620 and the Vauxhall Vectra. Two of each model are purchased and the average amount paid for each vehicle is £8,500 for the super-mini group and £15,000 for the family group.

Additional car models will be funded by other partners in Euro NCAP for the family and subsequent groups.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1996, Official Report, column 416, when he expects the information collated under the new car assessment programme to be published. [12136]

Mr. Bowis: Consumer information on the front and side impact protection and pedestrian protection offered by the seven super-mini sized cars will be published on 4 February. The technical test results data will be published in a TRL report by the end of February. Copies of both documents will be placed in the Library.

Connex Rail Ltd.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the Connex South-Eastern train company. [12368]

Mr. Watts: Since Connex Rail Ltd. took over the South-Eastern train company franchise on 13 October 1996, I have received 23 representations about various aspects of its business.

Rail Transport (Disabled People)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to issue new guidance to train operating companies on the restrictions they can place on electric scooters and batricars being allowed to board trains; [12070]

(2) what consultations he has had with the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee over the refusal of train operating companies to allow individuals to board trains using three-wheeled electric scooters or batricars. [12071]

Mr. Watts: The regulations we will be making under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will ensure that wheelchairs, constructed to international standard dimensions, can be accommodated on new trains. In the meantime, we have begun negotiations with the wheelchair manufacturers with the aim of establishing a marking protocol which would indicate to disabled people the transport compatibility of manual and powered wheelchairs to help them make informed choices.

The Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee has considered the ban on scooters and large powered wheelchairs on a number of occasions. It shares concerns about the stability and manoeuvrability of scooters and it has supported the train operating companies' ban. For the larger powered vehicles which are designed to give local outdoor mobility, the committee recognises that they are simply too large to be accommodated on public transport.

In the light of advice from the DPTAC, we have no plans to issue guidance to train operating companies about restrictions they can place on disabled people using electric vehicles.

Road Lighting

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will amend the regulations to ensure that highway lighting for all-purpose trunk roads is treated as secondary category 1 for the purpose of repair. [12425]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Colin B. Pickthall, dated 23 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about amending the regulations governing the repair of highway lighting on motorways and all-purpose trunk roads.

The current Departmental Standard (TD 23/86) controlling the repair of highway lighting for motorways and trunk roads allocates defects to Category (i) and Category (ii) as appropriate. A copy of this Standard is in the Library. We are currently reviewing this Standard in the light of improving technology. However, at the present time I am unable to commit to the adoption of a Secondary Category 1 Classification.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11594]

Mr. Streeter: Ministers of the Crown for this Department are able to make use of the subsidised child care facilities provided by this Department on the same basis as civil servants working for the Department.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the five Acts of Parliament enacted since April 1992 which have generated the greatest number of statutory instruments, indicating the number in each case. [11522]

Mr. Streeter: The Acts, with the numbers of statutory instruments registered with the Statutory Publications Office up to and including 7 October 1996, are as follows:

	Number
The Education Act 1993	104
The Local Government (Wales) Act 1994	56
The Local Government etc.(s) Act 1994	49
The Value Added Tax 1994	44
The Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994	41

TREASURY

Incomes (Nottinghamshire)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average income for a family of four in Nottinghamshire, or the nearest corresponding region, included in or including Nottinghamshire for which figures are available; and what proportion of that income was spent on tax, including VAT and national insurance in each year since 1988. [10816]

Mr. Jack: The information available is given in the table.

For one-earner family with two dependent children in east midlands:

		percentage of earnings paid in
	Weekly earnings	Direct taxes[1]	VAT	Other indirect taxes	Total tax (East Midlands)	Total tax (GB)
1988–89	£232.65	19.3	4.8	8.0	32.1	33.3
1989–90	£256.25	19.5	4.8	7.4	31.8	32.9
1990–91	£281.15	19.6	4.7	7.3	31.6	32.7
1991–92	£299.35	19.3	5.2	7.5	32.1	33.2
1992–93	£311.65	18.6	5.4	7.3	31.3	32.7
1993–94	£321.10	18.7	5.3	7.4	31.4	32.8
1994–95	£331.60	20.2	5.5	8.1	33.8	34.8
1995–96	£345.55	21.0	5.4	8.5	34.8	35.7
1996–97	£358.51	20.0	5.6	8.8	34.5	35.3
1997–98	£372.85	19.4	5.7	9.2	34.3	35.1

[1] Income tax and NICs.

1. Income tax payments are calculated on the assumption that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and have income only from employment. The earner is assumed to pay class 1 national insurance contributions at the contracted-in rate. Child benefit is deducted from income tax.

2. Earnings are the average gross weekly earnings of all full-time males in the east midlands on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. The figures are from the new earnings survey and financial year figures are the average of the two April figures. Estimates of earnings in 1996–97 and 1997–98 are based on earnings growth assumptions for Great Britain of 3¼ per cent. in 1996–97 and 4 per cent. in 1997–98 in line with the illustrative assumptions set out in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98.

3. Figures for indirect taxes include estimates of the effects of the main intermediate taxes on households as well as the impact of taxes on final goods and services. Estimates of the impact of taxes on final goods and services assume that these taxes are fully incident on households. Estimates of the impact of intermediate taxes are based on the relation between intermediate production costs and final consumption derived using input-output techniques.

4. Figures for indirect taxes since 1994–95 are estimated from expenditure patterns in the 1994–95 family expenditure survey uprated to later years using forecasts of aggregate tax receipts. For years before 1994–95, the 1985 family expenditure survey was used. All estimates are based on the illustrative assumption that 10 per cent. of disposable income is saved.

5. Estimates of indirect taxes are very approximate, even where figures are shown, because spending patterns vary widely between households with the same composition and income. Because of sampling variation, there can be substantial differences between estimates obtained from family expenditure surveys for different years, so reliable comparisons cannot be made between the estimates for different years.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by his Department. [11584]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Ministers of the Crown are able to make use of the child care facilities provided by the Treasury.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about the eligibility for exemptions of developments from the landfill tax; and if he will make a statement. [11364]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 January 1997]: HM Customs and Excise has received a small number of representations from trade associations questioning the way eligibility for the exemption from landfill tax is determined and from applicants seeking a review of a decision to refuse to issue an exemption certificate.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it remains his policy that, where a construction site is historically contaminated, all the waste removed to landfill should be exempt from the landfill tax; what guidance has been given by his Department to HM Customs and Excise about eligibility for exemptions from the landfill tax in such circumstances; and if he will make a statement. [11365]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 January 1997]: It has never been the policy of the Government that an automatic exemption from landfill tax would apply to wastes removed to landfill from construction sites where the land is contaminated. To qualify for exemption, such wastes would need to arise from a reclamation which facilitates development of the land and removes the potential for the pollutants to cause harm. The removal of the pollutants must be necessary for the development to proceed and any activity that gave rise to the pollutants must have ceased. Where these criteria are met, all wastes (whether polluted or not) arising from the reclamation would qualify for the exemption.

The care and management of landfill tax is vested in HM Customs and Excise. Accordingly, guidance by HM Treasury concerning eligibility for exemption would not be appropriate.

Economy (Yorkshire and Humberside)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the economy in Yorkshire and Humberside. [11964]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Yorkshire and Humberside is sharing fully in the success of the British economy, which is enjoying a combination of low inflation, falling unemployment, low mortgage rates and rising living standards not seen for a generation. The unemployment rate in Yorkshire and Humberside is at its lowest for six years.

DEFENCE

Insecticides (Falkland Islands)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stocks of (a) malathion, (b) propoxus and (c) ficam W insecticides have been used by the Royal Army Medical Corps in the Falklands since 1982; and what insecticides are currently (i) in store and (ii) in use by the corps on the islands. [10890]

Mr. Soames: The insecticides currently in use by the Falkland Island garrison are Demon WP, Residroid and Reslin. The garrison also has stocks of the following insecticides awaiting disposal: malathion, propoxur, ficam W and insecticide space spray concentrate.

Information regarding the use of insecticides in the Falkland Islands since 1982 is not available in the form requested, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Co-operation

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 13 November 1996, Official Report, column 220, if he will list the (a) dates, (b) sites visited and (c) purpose of each of the visits made by (i) Delegation Generale pour l'Armement and (ii) Commisariat a l'Energie Atomique officials to the atomic weapons establishments indicating the department represented by the officials. [11517]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Details of visits are as follows. It is not possible to be more precise since details are not held centrally.

Date(s)	Aldermaston	Burghfield	Foulness
November 1992–March 1993	1	1	2
Financial year 1993–94	4	3	0
Financial year 1994–95	3	1	1
Financial year 1995–96	4	3	1
April 1996–October 1996	4	0	0

The other four visits referred to in the earlier response were to MOD headquarters. I have decided to withhold the information requested about the visits and those involved, under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to Government information relating to defence, security and international relations.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of occasions in each of the last five financial years that personnel from the atomic weapons establishments have visited (a) CEA and (b) DGA facilities. [11483]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Details of visits are as follows:

	Commissariat a l'Energie Atomique	Delegation Generale pour l'Armement
1991–92	5	5
1992–93	10	6
1993–94	5	3
1994–95	15	—
1995–96	8	2

Trident

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the sums allocated to the Trident programme which are currently (a) committed but unspent and (b) uncommitted. [12416]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As at the end of September 1996, £550 million had been committed but not yet spent and approximately £860 million remained uncommitted.

Konver Scheme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful attempts have been made by his Department in the last four years to obtain funds from the EU's Konver scheme; and what funds have been allocated to the United Kingdom under this scheme. [12417]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department has made no bids for Konver funds as it is not eligible to do so. We have, however, supported a number of projects bidding for such funds where it was appropriate to do so. Matters relating to the Konver scheme as a whole are for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Trident Safety Facility, Devonport

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if (a) the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and (b) the MOD nuclear safety authority have assessed the proposed design of the new Trident safety facility at Devonport to be safe; and if he will make a statement. [12087]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Ships Support Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R.V. Babington to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 23 January 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the safety of the proposed design of the Trident facilities at Devonport, as this project falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency.

The Preliminary Safety Report for the Trident Facilities Project (D154) at Devonport was submitted by Devonport Management Limited (DML), the Dockyard operator, to both the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NII) and the MOD Nuclear Safety Authority in September 1994.

The NII and the MOD Nuclear Safety Authority both responded to DML on the Preliminary Safety Report. A number of technical matters were raised in their responses though these included no substantive issues of nuclear safety from either of the Regulatory Authorities.

Stabilisation Force

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what estimate he has made of the savings on the cost of flights to and from Italy and former Yugoslavia in support of the stabilisation force operation if such military flights were permitted to fly through Swiss airspace; [12387]

(2) if the Government of Switzerland have offered transit facilities for stabilisation force military traffic to and from UN-authorised operations in former Yugoslavia. [12386]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Britannia

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the proposed itinerary and engagements to be undertaken by the royal yacht Britannia up to the date set for its decommissioning. [12390]

Mr. Soames: On 20 January, HMY Britannia left Portsmouth for a seven-month deployment to the Arabian gulf, the Indian ocean and the far east. In the period up to July, it is hoped that HMY Britannia will conduct the following engagements:

Date	Location	Duty

16–20 June	Okinawa	Informal visit/fuel
23–30 June	Hong Kong	Royal visit by HRH The Prince of Wales, to attend the handover ceremonies

The programme for Britannia between July and her decommissioning in December has not yet been finalised.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many days the royal yacht Britannia was at sea in 1996; what functions were carried out; what was the total cost to his Department of the royal yacht in 1995–96; and what estimate he has made of the costs up to the date of decommissioning. [12391]

Mr. Soames: In 1996, Britannia was at sea for 116 days during which she carried out the following duties:

Date	Location	Duty
27–28 February	Ponta Delgada	Routine visit/fuel
6–9 March	Bermuda	Informal visit/fuel
12–17 March	Palm Beach	Royal visit by HRH The Duke of Edinburgh

10 August	Stranraer	Royal visit by Her Majesty The Queen and HRH The Duke of Edinburgh
17 August	Aberdeen	Royal visit by Her Majesty The Queen and HRH The Duke of Edinburgh

Britannia's running costs for 1995–96 were £7.3 million. Costs for the period up to the royal yacht's decommissioning at the end of this year will depend on her programme, which has not yet been finalised.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has for a replacement for the royal yacht Britannia; and what proportion of public finance they include. [12392]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made yesterday by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Royal Air Force

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy for securing value for money in the support of RAF aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [12920]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In defence procurement generally, our policy is to obtain equipment and services from the supplier providing the best value for money, taking all relevant factors into account. We apply that policy in the support of in-service aircraft. As an example of this, and following two keen competitions, it is our intention to award two contracts which will provide component repair and maintenance support to the RAF's TriStar fleet for the next five years: We intend to award a contract for component repair to Marshall of Cambridge (Holdings) Ltd. and one for aircraft maintenance to the Gulf Aircraft maintenance company, subject to the satisfactory conclusion of contractual negotiations.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress being made to commission the A91 liquid waste treatment plant at AWE Aldermaston. [11831]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The civil engineering contractor is well advanced with his part of the commissioning process. AWE commissioning will then take place. A91 is now expected to be operational in 1998.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans he has to construct a size reduction facility at AWE Aldermaston; when; and at what cost; [11829]

(2) when the purpose-built store for storing the treated waste from the sludge solidification system at AWE Aldermaston is to be completed; and at what cost; [11832]

(3) what assessment he has made of the capacity at AWE Aldermaston for new nuclear waste stores for storage of waste planned to be disposed of at the proposed repository beyond 2010; [11828]

(4) when the new store planned for the plutonium-contaminated material contained within waste stream 7A21 is to be built; and at what cost. [11830]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Plans for the treatment and storage of intermediate level waste generated at AWE are kept under continuous review. Decisions as to the necessity for further ILW storage at AWE will depend on a number of factors, including the availability of facilities such as the deep waste repository to be developed by Nirex.

A scheme to provide a size reduction facility at AWE Aldermaston is under way. Present plans are for it to be operational early in the next century. The cost is still subject to negotiation and is not therefore available. There are no plans to create a new store for treated waste from the sludge solidification system at AWE. Such material can continue to be stored in existing facilities.

"Waste Stream 7A21" is a term used by Nirex Ltd. to designate waste contaminated by plutonium or uranium. Nirex Ltd.'s planning for future storage arrangements is proceedings. As far as my Department's responsibilities are concerned, safe and secure interim arrangements are provided, as necessary, at the Atomic Weapons Establishment.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated volume of nuclear waste arising from decommissioning of old plant and facilities at AWE Aldermaston which (a) cannot be disposed of at Drigg and (b) will need to be stored at AWE Aldermaston until 2010. [12121]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Approximately 2100 cu m of low and intermediate level radioactive waste, primarily resulting from the decommissioning of old plant and facilities and which cannot be disposed of at Drigg, will arise at AWE by the end of 2010. This will be safely stored at AWE in purpose—built facilities until the deep waste repository to be developed by Nirex becomes available.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many glove boxes are at present stored at AWE Aldermaston; and what plans he has to dispose of them. [12063]

Mr. Arbuthnot: At present there are 41 glove boxes stored at Aldermaston. Decommissioned glove boxes are classified as intermediate level waste. It is intended that they will be stored, following size reduction and supercompaction, at the deep waste repository to be developed by Nirex Ltd. Until the DWR is available, safe and secure storage is provided at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library an unclassified version of AWE Aldermaston's comprehensive decommissioning and waste management plan. [12064]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Plans for decommissioning facilities at AWE and for waste management consist of a number of separate documents. Decommissioning plans contain much detailed information on facilities and their present and intended functions. Such information is highly sensitive and any attempt at an unclassified version would render the resultant document meaningless. As to waste management, considerable information is already reported to the relevant regulatory bodies and we have at present no plans to consolidate such material.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the sludge solidification system planned for AWE Aldermaston was completed; if it is operational; and what was its total cost. [12091]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The sludge solidification system is planned to be completed prior to the radioactive waste effluent treatment plant, building A91, becoming operational in 1998. The cost is commercially confidential and I am therefore withholding it under exemption 7 of the code of practice on access to Government information relating to effective management and operations of the public service.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the establishments in the United States visited by employees of the Atomic Weapons Establishment under the aegis of the 1958 mutual defence agreement and the Trident sales agreement, indicating the number of visits to each, in each of the financial years 1990–91 to 1994–95. [12123]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, a significant proportion of the visits would have been to Lawrence Livermore national laboratory, Sandia national laboratories, Los Alamos national laboratory, and various Department of Defence and Department of Energy Government offices.

Chemical Tests (West Indian Islands)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications of the chemical tests carried out by Her Majesty's Government on West Indian islands; and for what reasons the appropriate papers were not made available under the 30-year rule. [11769]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department's records indicate that trials using live biological agents took place at sea off the Leeward islands in late 1948 and early 1949 to determine the practicability of conducting biological warfare trials at sea. The authorities in Antigua were consulted at the planning stages and the agreement of the governor was obtained before the trials took place. We are confident that the trials did not result in any infections among the human or animal populations of Antigua. The nature and purpose of the trials was not made public at the time, given the security considerations applying in the cold war era; however, the fact that the trials involved the release of live biological agents has been in the public domain since 1982.

The United Kingdom has not possessed an offensive biological weapons capability since shortly after the second world war, and, indeed, is a co-depositary of the 1972 biological and toxin weapons convention, playing an active role in the current efforts to strengthen the convention.

Official records are released in accordance with the terms of the Public Records Act 1958. Certain papers concerning the subject in question were retained in my Department under section 3(S)4 of the Act on grounds of national security. Such papers are subject periodically to re-review and the majority of papers on this subject have now been released, their sensitivity having lapsed.

Royal Naval Auxiliary Service

Mr Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement regarding the award of construction contracts at RNAS Yeovilton. [12040]

Mr. Artbuthnot: A requirement exists at RNAS Yeovilton for living accommodation, hangars, stores and offices to house those moving from HMS Osprey, Portland, Dorset.

It had been intended to award one design and build contract to cover all the requirements and tenders for this were received in June 1996. Following tender assessment it was concluded that best value for money would not be obtained by the one contract design and build approach. Consequently, a more traditional procurement route, of separate contracts placed following competition, has been adopted. So far two—see note—contracts have been placed:

Western entrance works: 311,000

Squadron office block: 2,200,000

Note: Contracts valued at less than £240,000 are placed by local works services managers. Details of these contracts are not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Territorial Army

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total cost per year to his Department of each member of (a) the Territorial Army and (b) the volunteer reserves. [12389]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is as follows:

Territorial Army[1]	2,728
Royal Naval Reserve	2,145
Royal Marines Reserve	1,911
Royal Auxiliary Air Force and RAF Volunteer Reserve[2]	3,481

[1] Excludes regular and civilian staff at reserve units and non-regular permanent staff.

[2] Figures relate to those personnel who could be called-out to fill an operational role; they do not include RAF volunteer reserve (Civilian Component), RAF volunteer reserve (Training) or RAF volunteer reserve (university air squadron).

The figures include pay, earnings-related national insurance contributions, bounty and training expenses allowance at 1996–97 prices. Figures for equipment development, fuel, ammunition, accommodation and utilities, food and transport attributable to the reserves could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Menorah Foundation

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to make a decision on the application by Menorah Foundation to become a grant-maintained school. [12127]

Mr. Robin Squire: A decision on application will be made as soon as possible.

Torah Temimah

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she received an application by Torah Teminah to become a grant-maintained school; and when she expects to determine the application. [12128]

Mr. Robin Squire: The governors of Torah Temimah independent primary school, Brent, published proposals for grant-maintained status on 1 August 1996. The proposals were received in the Department shortly afterwards. They are currently under consideration and we expect to reach a decision soon.

Education Funding (Kirklees)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the Government-allocated funding, per pupil, of school children in the Kirklees council area for each year from 1990–91 to 1997–98 for (a) under five-year-olds, (b) five to 11-year-olds and (c) 11 to 16-year-olds; and if she will make a statement. [11962]

Mr. Robin Squire: The table sets out the education standard spending assessment per pupil in Kirklees for each year from 1990–91 to 1997–98 for (a) under-five-year-olds (b) five to 10-year-olds and (c) 11 to 16-year-olds.

Education SSAs do not determine the level of school spending or the balance of funding between nursery, primary and secondary education. It is up to local authorities to decide how much they spend on schools and other services within the resources at their disposal.

Kirklees's education SSAs per pupil 1990–91 to 1997–98

	Under five years £	Five to 10 years £	11 to 16 years £
1990–91	223	1,527	2,171
1991–92	263	1,746	2,533
1992–93	284	1,853	2,710
1993–94	290	1,914	2,779
1994–95	281	1,912	2,675
1995–96	285	1,900	2,539
1996–97	304	1,971	2,637
1997–98[1]	[2]139	2,066	2,721

[1] 1997–98 figures are provisional.
[2] This figure is lower than in previous years because of the SSA deduction for the nursery voucher scheme.

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the funding of primary education in the Kirklees area. [11965]

Mr. Squire: Kirklees's provisional standard spending assessment (SSA) per primary school pupil in 1997–98 is £2,066. That is a year on year increase of £94 per pupil, or 4.8 per cent.

Education SSAs do not, however, determine how much local authorities must spend on education. It is up to local education authorities under local management of schools to determine how much to spend on education within the resources at their disposal, including the allocation between primary and secondary schools.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers in Kirklees have retired before the age of 60 years for reasons of health and disability during each of the past six years; how many returned subsequently to supply teaching; and what was the extra cost of these early retirements. [11963]

Mrs. Gillan: Teachers from the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special sector in Kirklees LEA, who took retirement on the grounds of ill health from 1990–91 to 1995–96, are shown in the table:

Financial year	Number of early retirements due to ill health[1]
1990–91	38
1991–92	30
1992–93	45
1993–94	63
1994–95	50
1995–96 (prov.)	43

[1] Excludes those last recorded in sixth form colleges. May include a small number retiring at age 60 or over.

The number of teachers returning to supply teaching is not known. The extra cost of early retirements in Kirklees could only be calculated at disproportionate cost.

Class Sizes

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many pupils in secondary schools in England were in classes of 40 pupils or more in each of the six most recent years for which figures are available; [12107]

(2) how many pupils in primary schools in England were in classes of 40 pupils or more in each of the six most recent years for which figures are available. [12108]

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of pupils in single teacher classes of 40 or more pupils in maintained primary and secondary[1] schools in England, is, at January each year

	Primary schools	Secondary schools
1991	15,851	1,694
1992	18,366	1,374
1993	17,358	2,826
1994	14,057	881
1995	17,918	1,634
1996	19,875	1,016

[1] Excludes sixth form colleges.

Special Needs Teachers

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she has taken to ensure that the level of qualifications required by schools for teachers of hearing-impaired children is not reduced. [12424]

Mrs. Gillan: Teachers who teach classes of children with hearing impairments must gain an additional approved qualification to do so. The Government have no plans to discontinue this requirement.

College of Food, Tourism and Creative Studies

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total of the salary, allowances and other remuneration paid to the principal of the College of Food, Tourism and Creative Studies in Birmingham; and how much this total has changed since the college left the control of the city council in April 1993. [12349]

Mr. Paice: The Department does not collect this information. However, as a further education corporation, the Birmingham College of Food, Tourism and Creative Studies is required to publish its audited accounts each year. The college is required to disclose the principal's remuneration in the notes to the accounts.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

European Union Aid

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of European Union development aid has been channelled through non-governmental organisations in each of the last 10 years. [10968]

Dr. Liam Fox: In 1993 and 1994, the percentage of European Union external assistance channelled through non-governmental organisations was 22 per cent. and 24 per cent. respectively. To answer the question for the eight previous years would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of European Union development aid that goes through non-governmental organisations goes to British-based organisations; and how this percentage has changed over the past 10 years. [10969]

Dr. Fox: In 1993 and 1994, the percentage of the allocations of the non-governmental organisations co-financing budget line (B7-5010) channelled through UK organisations was 15.2 per cent. and 15.5 per cent. respectively. To provide a complete answer to the question would involve disproportionate costs.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in assessing the regional physical planning programme for transmigration project in Indonesia, what weight his Department attached to (a) concerns about the rights of the people affected by transmigration and the Indonesian Government's attitude to human rights and (b) possible political repercussions. [11647]

Dr. Liam Fox: The key consideration underlying our involvement in this World bank project was the developmental benefit to be gained, in the implementation of the transmigration programme, from sound land resource planning as a basis for improved decision making.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the legal and administrative difficulties involved in the wording of the project agreement with the Indonesian authorities in relation to the regional physical planning programme for transmigration in Indonesia; what were regarded as the sensitivities of the project at the time the extension of the project was approved in 1987; and what legal advice was received by his Department in 1987 regarding the extension of the project. [11648]

Dr. Fox: The difficulties related to the question of which agency on each side should be the contracting party to the agreement. While the developmental arguments were in favour of our continued involvement, sensitivities noted at the time of the extension were public perceptions of the transmigration programme, the wider relationship with the Indonesian Government and the World bank and the views of British environmental organisations which regarded our involvement as beneficial. Legal advice was not sought.

World Bank (Environmental Impact Assessments)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mrs. Jackson) on 11 December, Official Report, column 216, if he will make a statement on the improvements the Government are pressing the World bank to make in its environment policy. [11924]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Government believe that the World bank's policy of screening all investment proposals for their potential environmental impact is the right approach. We continue to monitor the bank's performance to ensure that this policy is fully implemented in its environmental impact assessments.

Tied Aid

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the letter from the Minister for Overseas Development of 28 October, what recommendations resulting from the review of tied aid have been pursued. [10861]

Dr. Liam Fox: The report made a number of recommendations. On procedures, to ensure better value for money, the ODA's procurement procedures have been strengthened; guidelines on local procurement of goods have been revised; a staff training programme is under way; and procedures for local procurement of services are being examined. On the special programme for Africa, we pledged last month up to £250 million of new programme aid. Previous UK pledges have been 75 per cent. untied; we are currently considering the extent of untying this time around. On reporting, improvements to the ODA's management information system are under way to report statistics on aid tying to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development more accurately. We are actively supporting renewed efforts in the OECD to encourage the greater multilateral untying of development assistance programmes.

Food and Agriculture Organisation

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the letter from the Minister for Overseas Development of 3 December, what action his Department is taking to promote reform of the FAO; and if he will make a statement. [10854]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Government are promoting reform in the FAO, primarily by pursuing constructive dialogue with its secretariat, by applying pressure for efficiency savings and better focused activities in negotiation of its programme of work and budget for 1998–99, and by working for co-ordinated action for reform among its membership.

Montserrat

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people are living in communal shelters in Montserrat; and how many homes are currently being built for them. [12348]

Dr. Liam Fox: There are currently some 860 people living in community shelters; 188 people have already been provided with housing and the provision of new homes for a further 293 people will start shortly.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Television Licences (Caravan Sites)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what plans she has to extend the hotel licence scheme for television licences to cover caravan sites and holiday homes; [11537]

(2) how many representations she has received from caravan site owners and those letting holiday homes expressing dissatisfaction with the regulations governing television licences for static holiday caravans and holiday homes. [11538]

Mr. Sproat: As announced on 18 July last year, Official Report, columns 601–02, the Government intend to bring forward regulations to take account of changes in the use of television in recent years, including use in vehicles and vessels. Since that date, the Government have received over 520 representations on the licensing requirements for second homes and caravans. Our records do not readily identify precisely how many of these were from caravan site owners and people letting holiday homes expressing dissatisfaction with the current regulations; however, we estimate that they make up only a very small proportion.

Caravan sites and holiday home complexes which provide units of overnight accommodation are already eligible for the special hotel licence. In the near future, the Government will make a detailed announcement on the new licensing requirements, including any that affect static holiday caravans and holiday homes. The new requirements will be incorporated into consolidated television licence fee regulations which will be laid so as to come into affect on 1 April 1997.

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if Ministers are entitled to use child care facilities supported by her Department. [11583]

Mr. Sproat: Ministers of the Crown are entitled to use the child care facilities supported by my Department.

Digital Broadcasting (Highlands and Islands)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many representations she has received from highlands and islands residents over the past year expressing their concern about the introduction of the new BBC digital service. [11668]

Mr. Sproat: We have received no such representations.

Arts Funding (South-west)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to increase the level of funding for the arts in the south-west. [11956]

Mr. Sproat: The Government are committed to helping support a lively and accessible artistic tradition by continued public subsidy for the arts. We have continued to offer substantial support for the arts despite overall pressures on public expenditure. In November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced funding of £186 million for the Arts Council of England in 1997–98, an increase of £3.2 million over the baseline on which the Arts Council was asked to plan.

It is for the Arts Council of England to determine the allocation of grant in aid to the 10 regional arts boards, including South West Arts. It takes such decisions independently of Ministers, and in the light of relative needs and priorities. In addition, the south-west continues to benefit from the proceeds of the national lottery. So far, the lottery has provided £27,000,000 towards improving and increasing the availability and quality of the arts in the region.

National Lottery

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total amount allocated from the proceeds of the national lottery to the small grants programme set up by the National Lottery Charities Board; and what proportion of such grants have been made to charities whose main or primary purpose is to assist people affected by flooding, fires or other disasters. [11722]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The National Lottery Charities Board has so far made grants in Wales under its small grants programme worth a total of £511,000. I understand that, under the programme so far, no charities have applied whose main or primary purpose is to assist people affected by disasters such as flooding or fires, so no such grants have been made.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the awards made from the proceeds of the national lottery to organisations involved in relieving the effects of national disasters, giving in each case (a) the name of the organisation and (b) the amount awarded. [11721]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 22 January 1997]: No lottery awards have been made to organisations involved in relieving the effects of national disasters.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organic Farming

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers farm organically; and what percentage this constitutes of the total number of farmers in the most recent year for which figures are available. [12092]

Mr. Boswell: The number of farmers in the UK—principal farmers and partners, whole time and part time—as at June 1995 was 219,000. At the same date, there were 784 registered organic holding—0.36 per cent. of the number of farmers. These figures are, however, prepared on different bases and are not strictly comparable.

Storm Surges

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his letter of 1 November 1996, reference 101871, what study he has made of Dixon and Tawn's findings on storm surges; and what action he proposes. [10825]

Mr. Boswell: Dixon and Tawn undertook a theoretical statistical analysis.

Further study using actual data gathered from the national network of tide gauges has confirmed that non-random events, such as astronomic tides, influence water level estimates. Their range, between an overestimate of 250 mm and an underestimate of 100 mm, falls within the current allowance for water level estimates used for the design of sea defences.

New Zealand Flatworm

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the potential impact on United Kingdom exports of plants to Sweden of the New Zealand flatworm. [12422]

Mr. Boswell: Sweden has listed the New Zealand flatworm as an indirect plant pest in its national legislation. We understand that this measure was adopted in order that the Swedish authorities could take action against any consignments which were found to be infested with the New Zealand flatworm. The UK Agriculture Departments, in consultation with the horticulture industry, have drawn up a code of practice to ensure that exported plants are free from the flatworm. The Government are also funding research into the biology of non-indigenous flatworms and methods of controlling their spread.

HEALTH

Mefloquine

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned by his Department into the side effects of the use of mefloquine as an anti-malarial drug. [10896]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Health has not undertaken or commissioned any formal studies into the side effects of melfloquine. Following grant of marketing authorisation, based on rigorous evaluation of quality, safety and efficacy by the Licensing Authority and its expert advisory bodies, the Medicines Control Agency has continued to monitor the safety of mefloquine. Data became available from spontaneous adverse reaction reports, published literature and ongoing studies in patients. However, the MCA continue to monitor the safety of mefloquine to ensure that its benefits in treating and preventing malaria outweigh the risk of adverse reactions.

Residential Care Costs

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the savings which would accrue to public funds if local authority residential homes were run at the same cost as equivalent private sector homes. [11533]

Mr. Burns: We have made no such estimate. Published statistics show the different costs to local authorities of care in homes for the elderly in different sectors, but these homes may not be equivalent. We believe that purchasing care from the independent sector would be more cost effective for local authorities. To achieve these savings, local authorities need to see their role as commissioners rather than providers of services.

Personal Social Services

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the real terms percentage increase in funding for personal social services, indicating the figures on which the calculations are based, for each year since 1979, together with projections for such future years as are available to him. [11534]

Mr. Burns: The amount and annual increases in funding for personal social services since 1981–82 are set out in the table; figures prior to 1981–82 are not held by the Department:

	Funding for social services £ million	Percentage increase in real terms
1981–82	1,642.561	—
1982–83	1,943.401	10.4
1983–84	2,084.598	2.5
1984–85	2,204.800	0.7
1985–86	2,366.400	1.8
1986–87	2,552.900	4.7
1987–88	2,756.500	2.5
1988–89	2,912.800	−1.0
1989–90	3,269.300	4.9
1990–91	3,648.000	n/a
1991–92	4,503.000	16.0
1992–93	4,850.000	3.4
1993–94	5,585.400	11.9
1994–95	6,403.200	12.6
1995–96	6,965.900	6.1
1996–97	7,511.000	5.2
1997–98	7,846.030	2.4

Figures for years prior to 1990–91 relate to the previous local government finance system and are not comparable with figures for subsequent years. In particular, amounts provided through special and specific grants are excluded prior to 1990–91. The figures above should not be seen as expenditure targets. They are one component of the funding provided for local government services and local authorities may in the event spend more or less than the amounts above.

Drug Abuse (South Yorkshire)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has held with South Yorkshire local health authorities regarding drug abuse; and if he will list the funding that is allocated for this purpose by each authority. [11663]

Mr. Horam: The Department has held no discussions with health authorities in South Yorkshire about drug misuse. Information on the total funding allocated by health authorities for combating drug misuse is not available centrally. Funds allocated by the Department to health authorities for this purpose are shown in the tables.

The table shows the funding for services for drug misusers allocated to each of the health authorities in South Yorkshire for 1996–97 and 1997–98:

In addition, the table shows central funding made available to develop drug action teams and drug reference groups.

Drugs challenge fund

Sheffield health authority has also won drugs challenge funding for four projects. The total challenge fund allocation to Sheffield is £27,600.

Smoking

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the figures for smoking prevalence among 11 to 15-year-olds in those years for which figures are available between 1989 and 1994. [12058]

Mr. Horam: The figures in the table are extracted from "Smoking Amongst Secondary Children in 1990, 1992, 1993 and 1994" published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Copies of these reports are available in the Library.

Life Expectancy

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (i) if he will list the average expectation of life at birth (a) nationally and (b) regionally for (i) men and (ii) women in (y) 1994 and (z) 1995; [12033]

(2) if he will list the average life expectancy by region for (a) men and (b) women. [12032]

Mr. Burns: The average expectation of life at birth, according to the mortality rates experienced in 1992, the latest year for which individual figures are available for the regional health authorities of England and Wales, are shown in the following table. Figures for England and Wales as a whole for 1994 and 1995 are also shown:

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those EU countries with greater life expectancy than the United Kingdom. [12034]

Mr. Horam: Average life expectancy in the United Kingdom in 1994 was 74.2 years among males and 79.6 years among females. The most recent data from other EU countries that was collected on a comparable basis—though not necessarily in precisely the same year—is shown in the table.

World Health Organisation HFA (provisional).

Organophosphates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) Official Report, 6 December, column 822, if he will place in the Library (a) a list of the dates of the meetings held by the expert committee on organophosphates during the past 10 years, (b) copies of the minutes of daily meeting and (c) copies of all reports and recommendations drawn up by the committee; and what peer reviews of the committee's recommendation have been conducted. [11910]

Mr. Horam: The Veterinary Products Committee was established in 1970 under section 4 of the Medicines Act 1968. It meets generally every month except August. During the past 10 years, the committee has considered issues concerning OP veterinary medicinal products on a number of occasions, including the assessment of applications for authorisation for new products. As the committee considers these and other such matters which are commercially confidential, the minutes of its meetings are not published. An annual report for each advisory body established under the Medicines Act 1968, including the VPC, is, however, published in one volume each year and copies of this have been placed in the Library.

In March 1993, the VPC considered a request from my right hon. Friend the then Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for advice as to whether a moratorium on OP sheep dips would be appropriate. The Government's acceptance of the advice then given, and the details of that advice, were announced in reply to the hon. Member for West Dorset (Sir J. Spicer) on 1 April 1993, at columns 328-30. A MAFF news release No. 112/93, gave full details of the advice and a list of all the papers considered by the VPC. Copies of all the published and publicly available papers were placed in the Library at that time.

At its meeting in October 1993, the VPC again undertook a thorough examination of all the issues surrounding the use of OP sheep dips. The details of the committee's advice and the Government's response were then announced in reply to the hon. Member for Wellingborough (Sir Fry) on 1 December 1993, at columns 588-90. MAFF news release No. 424/93 gave full details, including a list of all the papers considered by the committee.

The Advisory Committee on Pesticides meets regularly—at least five times a year since 1987. Evaluation documents, which detail the findings of the committee on individual active substances, including OPs, are published and copies are placed in the Library. Copies of the ACP's annual reports are also placed in the Library. As the committee considers matters which are commercially confidential, the minutes of its meetings are not published.

Since the purpose of the VPC and the ACP is to provide scientific advice to Ministers and the committees do not publish papers, peer review of their work would not be appropriate.

Leukaemia

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will evaluate the article in the British Medical Journal of the 11 January relating to leukaemia occurrence to assess its implications for the populations in the vicinity of (a) Sellafield and (b) Dounreay. [11911]

Mr. Horam: The Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment—COMARE—has investigated the increase of cancer and leukaemia in young people around Dounreay and Sellafield and concluded that on current knowledge environmental radiation exposure from the sites could not account for the excesses.

COMARE has made various recommendations for further research, much of which has already been carried out, and further work is under way. COMARE will continue to keep this matter under review and will consider whether there is a need for any further advice. The results of the study, published in the British Medical Journal, "Case-control study of leukaemia in young people near La Hague nuclear reprocessing plant: the environmental hypothesis revisited", together with other evidence as it becomes available, will be considered by the committee.

Encryption

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his letter of 23 October, what evidence he has evaluated relating to the encryption trials; and when he plans to make an announcement. [10857]

Mr. Horam: We will begin to evaluate the results of the encryption pilots when they become available in March. Once this process has been completed, we will then be able to make an announcement.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital beds there were in each health authority in each of the last seven years; and if he will indicate for each authority and year the numbers for (a) acute, (b) geriatric, (c) maternity and (d) mental illness or disability cases. [11625]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally. Information on the average daily number of available beds for national health service providers in each financial year is continued in "Bed Availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Hospitals

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) hospitals and (b) hospital trusts there were in operation in (i) 1980, (ii) 1985, (iii) 1990, (iv) 1992, (v) 1994–95 and (vi) 1995–96. [11626]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 13 January at column 172. Information is not available centrally to distinguish hospital trusts from other types of trust. The hon. Member may wish to refer to the information on trusts in the "Health and Social Services Yearbook", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital trusts in England contain (a) two and (b) three or more hospitals. [11627]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to refer to the "Health and Social Services Yearbook", copies of which are available in the Library, for information on the facilities in each trust.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library figures by (a) district health authority, (b) regional health authority and (c) overall, of the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to a hospital, and the numbers of those patients not readmitted within a month, for each quarter of 1995–96 and the first two quarters of 1996–97. [11628]

Mr. Horam: The information has been placed in the Library.

Manchester Ambulance Service

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that the Greater Manchester ambulance service NHS trust offers a local pay award in addition to the national pay award. [11815]

Mr. Horam: National health service trusts need to consider pay in the context of their overall income from contracts and the costs of providing good quality patient services. It is for each employer to decide what to pay in the light of their overall financial position and other service pressures.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average number of (a) adult and (b) child registrations for each NHS dentist. [12399]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is given in the table.

General Dental Service: Number of adult and child registrations[1] [2] for each national Health Service[3] [4] dentist at 30 September 1996

England

	Average number of registrations
Adults	Children
1,278	476

[1] Excludes patients registered with salaried dentists.

[2] Child registrations were "rolled-off" on 31 December each year. The figure shown is close to peak time of the year.

[3] Some dentists have a contract with more than one health authority. These dentists have been counted only once in calculating the number of patients registered per dentist.

[3] Some dentists have a contract with more than one health authority. These dentists have been counted only once in calculating the number of patients registered per dentist.

[4] The number of dentists is the number of principals and excludes assistants and vocational trainees. This is because those patients treated by assistants and vocational trainees are allocated to principal dentists.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, column 489, if he will list by health authority the number of dentists whose NHS gross fee earnings fall within (a) the top and (b) the bottom decile. [12429]

Mr. Malone The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified dentists were employed by the highest-paid NHS dentist in each of the years 1991–92 to 1995–96. [12337]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 21 January at column 583.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the amount and percentage of the fee income paid to NHS dentists who have been struck off since 1985 which relates to unnecessary work carried out on patients. [12385]

Mr. Malone: The General Dental Council, the statutory body which regulates the practice of dentistry, classifies those dentists struck off from its register by broad headings only and therefore the information requested is not available.

British Association of Psychopharmacology

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he will take to secure representation at the British Association of Psychopharmacology meeting in Oxford street, London on 24 January; and if he will make a statement. [12334]

Mr. Burns: The Department aims to keep in touch with all meetings on professional matters of significant concern. Departmental representation at this meeting will depend on the availability of relevant officials.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Armoured Vehicles (Indonesia)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 9 December, Official Report, columns 29–30, if he will list the dates of transfer of (a) the equipment and (b) associated equipment to Indonesia. [10742]

Mr. Nelson: All that is required for licensing purposes is a proposed date of shipment. What happens thereafter within the validity of the licence is a matter for the exporter.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 9 December, Official Report, columns 29–30, relating to export licences to Indonesia if (a) the British Government and (b) private British companies have (i) provided or facilitated and (ii) propose to provide operational training in the use or deployment of the Tactica family of internal security vehicles. [10739]

Mr. Nelson: I understand that the company provides comprehensive training on how to operate the vehicles.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 9 December, Official Report, columns 29–30, relating to export licences for equipment to Indonesia, what vehicles, in addition to those identified in his answer, are covered by the licence; if he will list the associated equipment referred to in his reply; and if the goods referred to are covered by export credit guarantees. [10738]

Mr. Nelson: Two Tactica four-seat, two Tactica 10-seat, five Tactica EOD—explosive ordnance disposal—seven Tactica water cannon, eight Tactica command and communication vehicles, two base station communications equipment, 164 Hornet Patroli, 50 Hornet Dalmas, 24 Hornet armoured APC—armoured personnel carriers—12 Hornet armoured EOD carriers, 24 Hornet deterrent vehicles, 12 Hornet armoured command and communications vehicles. The associated equipment comprises spare parts, lists of which run to several pages and are too numerous to list individually.

There is no Export Credits Guarantee Department cover.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 9 December, Official Report, columns 29–30, relating to export licences to Indonesia, what associated equipment was provided with the Tactica water cannon supplied to the Indonesian police force; what assurances he has received from the Indonesian authorities what the Indonesian police force will not use them (a) for internal repression and (b) in East Timor; what is the maximum pressure in pounds per square inch that the water from the cannon can be fired; and what security or other functions the water cannon are designed to carry out. [10752]

Mr. Nelson: I am not in a position to give detailed information on which of the spare parts referred to in the answer to question 818 are specified to the Tactica water cannon.

The Government have ensured that the Indonesian Government are well aware of our concern that such UK-supplied equipment should not be used indiscriminately or to disperse peaceful demonstrations in violation of the universal rights of freedom of speech, organisation and assembly.

The maximum pressure at which the water cannon can be fired is 13 bar—190 psi.

The water cannon are designed to carry out non-lethal riot control, although they can also be used as localised fire engines in public order situations.

Tactica Internal Security Vehicles

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade under what category of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1989 the first shipment of Tactica internal security vehicles was granted. [10741]

Mr. Nelson: All licensable goods fell under group I of Part III of schedule I to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994.

Offshore Oil and Gas

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade by what date he estimates environmental impact assessments will be required for all offshore oil and gas exploration and production projects. [12096]

Mr. Page [holding answer 21 January 1997]: Holders of petroleum production licences already provide environmental impact assessments for offshore oil and gas production projects within 25 miles of the coast or in other sensitive areas. Similar assessments may be requested for exploration activities, where there are likely to be significant environmental impacts.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on matters relating to the environment contained in the Petroleum (Production) (Seaward Areas) (Amendment) Regulations. [12100]

Mr. Page [holding answer 21 January 1997]: The Petroleum (Production)(Seaward Areas)(Amendment) Regulations 1996 came into force on 16 December. They vary the terms and conditions of petroleum licences to reflect the nature of the acreage to be awarded in the 17th round.

The regulations also set out the information that must be submitted with an application for a production licence. These include a requirement that applicants for a production licence must provide a statement of the general environmental policy of the proposed operator under the licence applied for in respect of licensed activities offshore, and also information concerning his environmental management systems for the application of that policy.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if environmental impact assessments will be required for the 17th offshore oil and gas licensing round. [12099]

Mr. Page [holding answer 21 January 1997]: Assessments are provided in respect of specific projects in specific locations. Projects carried out under petroleum production licences awarded in the 17th round will be subject to assessment where appropriate.

Global Ocean Observing System

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his letter of 25 November, if he will make a statement on the work of the global ocean observing system. [10829]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I understand that work is continuing on the design and implementation of GOOS; a number of UK Departments and agencies continue to be involved.

Intellectual Property

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his letter of 24 September, what was the result of his consultation with United Kingdom interested parties on World Intellectual Property Organisation documents; and if he will make a statement. [10856]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Over 40 written submissions were received from UK copyright interests in response to my Department's consultation on the draft treaty texts for the diplomatic conference, which met in Geneva during December 1996 under the auspices of the World Intellectual Property Organisation. In addition, an open consultation meeting, attended by about 50 organisations, was held at the end of October. The views expressed by interested parties contributed to the positions taken by the UK delegation at the diplomatic conference, where consultation continued with non-governmental organisations present as observers.

The WIPO conference resulted in two new international treaties which will boost worldwide protection against unlawful copying and piracy, and promote the development of new media. Key UK objectives were achieved, notably the inclusion of provisions extending rights in the area of digital communications, and provisions making unlawful both unauthorised circumvention of copy-protection systems and unauthorised interference with electronic rights management systems.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Archway Tower

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what proposals the Property Services Agency has for the future use of Archway tower, 2 Junction road, London N19; [12110]

(2) what is the cost to the Property Services Agency of security arrangements at Archway tower, 2 Junction Road, London N19. [12111]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated, under the terms of its framework document, to the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate under its chief executive, Mr. Neil Borrett. The agency is therefore responding to these questions.

Letter from N. E. Borrett to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 22 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has asked me to reply to your Questions about Archway Tower.

You will know from my letter to you of 29 April 1996 that PACE has responsibility for the building and although our marketing agents have been endeavouring to interest both the landlord and third parties in the property their efforts have so far proved unsuccessful.

There is very little demand for un-refurbished office blocks built in the 1960s and early 1970s, even in the centre of London. In the current state of the office market Archway can be considered only a fringe location and we would need to be convinced that there was the likelihood of potential occupiers before the considerable cost of refurbishment was instigated. The services in the building, which is 25 years only, have come to the end of their economic life.

The landlord has a secure rental income from Government until the lease expires in 2009 and is not prepared to accept a surrender of the lease on terms which we could accept even bearing in mind the high outgoings on the property. There has been some discussion with the landlord's agent as to conversion of the building to residential use by way of a joint sale and this is being pursued.

With regard to your second question, because of vandalism security arrangements at Archway Tower have had to be stepped up and currently their costs amount to just over £30,000 per annum.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

"Barbecue in Rostock"

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 16 October 1996, Official Report, column 963, if the Crown Prosecution Service has reached a view about whether or not to prosecute the band "No Remorse" and the producers and distributors of the CD "Barbecue in Rostock"; and if he will make a statement. [11665]

The Attorney-General: I understand that the Gwent police are continuing their investigation into the production of a compact disc by a band calling themselves. "No Remorse". The police have not yet submitted a file of evidence to the Crown Prosecution Service. It is expected that at the conclusion of the investigation the police will submit a file of evidence to the Crown Prosecution Service for advice as to whether criminal proceedings should be instituted.

WALES

Hospital Closures

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospitals have been closed since 1979. [11674]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Fifty-eight national health service hospitals in Wales have closed for the use of in-patients, and remained closed, since 1 January 1979. During the same period, 16 NHS hospitals have opened. In 1995–96 the NHS in Wales treated 166,000—48 per cent.—more in-patient cases than in 1979.

St. David's Medical Centre, Cardiff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report column 587, on St. David's medical centre, Cardiff, on what day the date of the hearing was finalised; on what day each of the interested parties were informed of the date; and what representations he received concerning the suitability of the hearing date. [11802]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to my letter of 20 January 1997, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Local Pay Bargaining

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the use of local pay bargaining in Wales to determine pay awards. [11671]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: We believe that pay, in Wales as in the rest of the United Kingdom, is best determined freely by employers and their employees in the light of their particular local circumstances. This better enables pay settlements to reflect the needs of the local labour market as well as company and employee performance. Businesses are best able to judge what they can afford to pay in order to recruit, retain and motivate suitable staff. Pay increases not justified by improved performance will simply lead to the loss of competitiveness.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of (a) community and (b) district general hospitals indicating the number of beds in each health authority in Wales. [12077]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is given in the following table. Psychiatric hospitals are excluded.

[11621]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to reply to parliamentary questions numbers 9758 and 9759, dated 18 December 1996. [12160]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Tuesday 21 January, Official Report, column 575–76.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospital trusts in Wales contain (a) two and (b) three or more hospitals. [11623]

Mr. Jones: Of the 26 hospital trusts in Wales, three have two hospitals, 19 have three or more hospitals and the remaining four have one hospital.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library figures (a) by district health authority and (b) overall, of the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to hospital, and the numbers of those patients not readmitted within a month, for each quarter of 1995–96 and the first two quarters of 1996–97. [11624]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the number of cancelled operations is not available centrally. Information on the number of patients admitted and treated more than one month after a cancelled operation is collected by NHS trusts and is given in the following table. A patient treated in a NHS trust may not necessarily be a resident of the health authority in which the trust is situated.

[3] Information is not available on family credit recipients who receive disability living allowance.

[4] The information in the table relates to benefit units and not beneficiaries as provided for the previous parliamentary questions.

[5] It is not possible to identify beneficiaries of disability working allowance with disability living allowance.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give access to (a) the National Audit Office and (b) the Parliamentary Commissioner on Administration to the operating records of private sector companies contracted to undertake the functions currently carried out by the Benefits Agency medical services. [10993]

Mr. Burt: The successful contractor or contractors will have a mandatory contractual requirement to allow National Audit Office appropriate access to their records.

The jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commission for Administration is unaffected where administrative functions of a Department or agency are carried out by private sector contractors.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the contractors who will be operating the Benefits Agency medical services will be reimbursed by his Department for the payment of claimants' travel expenses to medical centres. [10973]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 11 November 1996, Official Report, column 88.

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Lone Parents

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to involve the private sector in helping lone parents into work. [12206]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Up to 100,000 lone parents on income support will be offered help to get back into work under the parent plus scheme, which will be piloted in 12 Benefits Agency districts over three years starting in April.

Parent plus will involve both public and private sector teams in competing to find the best ways of helping lone parents to reduce their dependency on benefits.

In four of the pilot areas the private sector will be invited to tender to provide innovative services to help get lone parents into work. The four areas will be selected from the following:

North Hampshire
Preston
Wirral
Wiltshire
Blackburn
Bradford
Northamptonshire
Buckinghamshire
Central Manchester.

Contracts will be issued to successful tenderers by the beginning of April and will stipulate that payment will be dependant on how many lone parents are helped into jobs. This will be the first time that private enterprise has been harnessed in this way to help people into work.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Co-operation

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the co-ordination of French, British and US nuclear forces within NATO, with particular reference to the role of the French Government. [12124]

Mr. David Davis: As the alliance has made clear in its strategic concept, the supreme guarantee of the security of the allies is provided by the strategic nuclear forces of the alliance, particularly those of the United States. The independent nuclear forces of the United Kingdom, which are also assigned to the alliance, and of France contribute to the overall deterrence and security of the allies. NATO's strategy includes a requirement for widespread participation by European allies in collective defence planning in nuclear roles, in peacetime basing of nuclear forces on their territory and in command, control and consultation arrangements. France does not participate in NATO's collective defence planning and has not assigned its nuclear forces to NATO.

Lake Kojsanovskoe

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government are taking to provide assistance following the EC-funded report on the contamination of Lake Kojsanovskoe. [10827]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We, our EU partners and the European Commission have not yet reached a decision as to what assistance might be made available to counteract contamination of Lake Kojsanovskoe.

Russia

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to his letter of 13 May 1996, if he will list the projects (a) round the Kola peninsula, (b) in the Russian far east and (c) in relation to the Lepse in Murmansk harbour in which the EC and the United Kingdom are taking part; and what progress has been made. [10828]

Dr. Liam Fox: The latest available project list—September 1996—records a total of 15 projects concerning radioactive waste management in Russia in which the EU is involved. These are as follows:

(1) Basis for diagnostics and forecasts on the state of nuclear waste at the bottom of the Barents Sea and the Sea of Japan.

(2) Conceptual design of a radwaste repository for the Kola region.

(3) Suitability of Krasnoyarsk rock formations for plutonium-containing waste disposal.

(4) Measurements, modelling and possible consequences of deep well injection sites at Dimitrovograd.

(5) Sorting of waste at the Smolensk and Kalinin nuclear power plants.

(6) Solidification facility for radioactive waste at the Leningrad nuclear power plant.

(7) Analysis of safety and environmental impact of the storage facility for VVER-1000 spent fuel (Krasnoyarsk).

(8) Improvement of incineration facility at Kola.

(9) Feasibility study for St. Petersburg Waste Management Centre.

(10) Civil plutonium storage facility at Mayak.

(11) Support for the Moscow Radwaste Specialized Enterprise "RADON".

(12) Identification of disposal sites in the North-West region.

(13) Engineering assessment of "Lepse".

(14) Evaluation of the radiological situation around nuclear reactors holding spent fuel, dumped in the Kara Sea.

(15) Analysis of the medium and long term environmental and radiological consequences of the migration of radionuclides from the Karachay lake. Identification of countermeasures.

UK companies are involved in six of these projects, shown above as items 4, 6, 9, 13, 14 and 15. Progress on these projects is as follows:

Measurements, modelling and possible consequences at deep well injection sites at Dimitrovograd—the project has been completed.

Solidification facility for radioactive waste at the Leningrad nuclear power plant—The project is currently in the tender phase.

Feasibility study for St. Petersburg Waste Management Centre—A recently launched project to upgrade the facility for the storage and treatment of radioactive wastes at Sosnovy Bor. A study is under way.

Engineering assessment of "Lepse"—The Feasibility Study on the removal of nuclear waste from the ship has been completed. An advisory committee has been established, and is now examining the study's recommendations.

Evaluation of the radiological situation around nuclear reactors holding spent fuel, dumped in the Kara sea—The study was initiated in January 1996, and is expected to be completed as scheduled by May this year.

Analysis of the medium-and long-term environmental and radiological consequences of the migration of radionuclides from the Karachay lake. Identification of countermeasures—the first of four project phases—has been completed. This involved the translation, analysis and collation of currently available data in respect of the regional climate, geology, hydrogeology and groundwater geochemistry of the area concerned.

Burma

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to withdraw general system of preferences status from Burma; what action the British Government are taking in conjunction with the EU to withdraw general system of preferences status; and if he will make a statement. [11814]

Mr. Hanley: We are currently considering a proposal by the EU Commission to suspend preferences to Burma under the generalised system of preferences.

Mr. Rifkind: In 1995–96, the cost to my Department of clothing for official visits overseas by the Duke and Duchess of Kent and those accompanying them, and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester and those accompanying them were:

	Date	£
The Duke and Duchess of Kent visit to Norway	7–8 May 1995	£1,500
The Duchess of Kent visit to Netherlands	1 June 1995	£800
The Duchess of Kent visit to Belgium	16 June 1995	£750
The Duke and Duchess of Kent visit to Germany	19–21 June 1995	£1,950
The Duke of Kent visit to Singapore	10–12 September 1995	£300
The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester visit to Mexico	20–23 November 1995	£3,000

General Affairs Council

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report on the outcome of the General Affairs Council held in Brussels on 20 January. [12335]

Mr. David Davis: The eight A points in document 5282/97, the text of which will be placed in the House as soon as it is available, were approved.

The Council noted the resolutions adopted by the European Parliament listed in documents 12065/96 and 12629/96. Copies of these documents will also be placed in the House as soon as they are available.

The Council began with a public debate on the Dutch presidency programme for the first half of 1997. The presidency identified economic and monetary union and the successful conclusion of the intergovernmental conference as their two main priorities. I said that, internally, the main task was job creation, while externally enlargement was the key challenge.

The outgoing presidency reported on the successful EU–US summit on 16 December 1996 and the Commission and current presidency set out priorities for future work on the EU-US relationship. The Council took note and agreed on the particular importance it attached to the early and successful conclusion of a mutual recognition agreement. The Council also discussed President Clinton's further waiver of title III the Helms-Burton Act which was welcome. but did not yet fully meet the EU's concerns.

The outgoing presidency also reported on the EU–Canada summit on 17 January. The Council welcomed the joint declaration and action plan that were agreed there.

The Council, on the basis of a report by the Commission took note with satisfaction of the outcome of the first World Trade Organisation ministerial conference—Singapore, 9 to 13 December 1996. The Council concluded that the Commission should continue to work for the effective implementation of the results of the Singapore conference, placing particular importance on the timely completion of negotiations on basic telecommunications services and reiterated the importance it attaches to the integration of the least developed countries in the global trading system.

The Council noted the presidency's report on the preparation of the EU–Association of South-East Asian Nations ministerial meeting in Singapore on 13 and 14 February 1997 and asked the Committee of Permanent Representatives to continue its work on the Commission's communication on EU–ASEAN relations.

The Council noted the presidency's report on the preparations for the ASEM—Asia Europe meeting—ministerial meeting in Singapore on 15 February 1997.

The Council heard a report from the Commission on negotiations on new association agreements with a number of the European Union's Mediterranean partners. The Council reiterated its commitment to the Euro-Mediterranean partnership and its determination to conclude negotiations with Egypt, Lebanon and Jordan before Barcelona II on 15 and 16 April. The Council also welcomed the recent conclusion of negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organisation on an interim association agreement, and invited the Commission to submit a formal proposal for signature as soon as possible.

The Council discussed the middle east peace process in the light of a report by special EU envoy Moratinos. It welcomed the recent signing of the protocol on implementation of Israeli redeployment in Hebron as an important step towards full implementation of the interim agreement and the start of the final status negotiations. The Council stated it would continue its active role in promoting and strengthening the peace process.

On the former Yugoslavia, Council discussion focused mainly on the need to maintain pressure on Belgrade for rapid and firm implementation of the Gonzales report on the November 1996 election results and enter into a dialogue with the opposition on democratisation. The Council expressed concern at the worsening situation in Kosovo and urged a settlement providing for Kosovo to be granted a large degree of autonomy with the former Republic of Yugoslavia. The Council called on the Republika Srpska authorities to co-operate fully with the international war crimes tribunal; and expressed the hope that the UN Security Council would endorse the approach on eastern Slovenia set out in the Croatian Government's letter of intent of 13 January.

In its conclusions on the Great Lakes, the Council expressed concern at the deterioration in the situation in eastern Zaire, called on all parties to declare and maintain a ceasefire and urged the Government of Zaire to restore citizenship to the Banyamulenge and others entitled to it. The Council welcomed the Zaire authorities' confirmation that elections will be held in July 1997, and agreed on the need for rapid establishment of the EU electoral unit and for the early appointment of the UN special representative for the elections. In light of the worsening humanitarian situation in eastern Zaire, the Council called on all parties to allow rapid and free access of humanitarian aid to refugees and displaced persons. The Council expressed its shock at the killing of three Spanish aid workers in Rwanda and declared its dismay at the sharp deterioration of the political climate in Burundi. The Council called for preparations for an international conference on peace, security and stability in the Great Lakes region under the auspices of the United Nations and the Organisation of African Unity to begin without delay.

The Council agreed the mandate for a fact-finding mission to Belarus. The mission will report back to the General Affairs Council on 24 February 1997.

Under any other business, I raised the imposition of safeguard measures by the Commission against overseas countries and territories' rice, in particular the effect this has had on British dependent territories, Montserrat and the Turks and Caicos Islands. The following discussion was noted by the Council and the presidency concluded that this issue should be taken forward at working level.

The ninth ministerial meeting of the intergovernmental conference was held in the afternoon. The meeting was preceded by an exchange of views with the President of the European Parliament. Discussion focused on the subject of flexibility and was based on a note from the presidency—CONF/3802/97—which has been placed in the House Libraries.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress being made by the (a) Italian and (b) Spanish Governments in respect of the payment of EU penalties arising from the milk quota regime. [11710]

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

In line with the agreement reached in the October 1994 Economic and Finance Council meeting, Italy has to date paid about 1.4 becu, about £1 billion at current sterling-ecu exchange rate, and Spain 1.0 becu, about £0.7 billion, in penalties arising from their failure properly to implement the milk quota regime. Italy is due to pay approximately a further 0.5 becu, £0.4 billion, and Spain 0.3 becu, £0.2 billion, by the end of 1998 under the agreement.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Power Station Emissions

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to require that the Director General of Electricity Supply be consulted about controls on power station emissions. [12015]

Mr. Moss: Following a number of representations, I am considering this and other suggestions which have been put to me to meet concerns about the implications for electricity prices in Northern Ireland arising from enactment of the draft Industrial Pollution Control (Northern Ireland) Order. I shall write to the hon. and learned Gentleman when this work has been completed.

Executive Agencies (Letters)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many letters each of the offices of the (a) Housing Executive and (b) Planning Service has received in the year ending 31 December 1996, or the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; and, for each such office, how many of the letters were in (i) English (ii) Irish, and (iii) another language. [11908]

Mr. Moss: The information relating to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive is a matter for its chief executive who has advised me that the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Matters relating to the Planning Service are the responsibility of the chief executive of that agency, Mr. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from J. E. McConnell to Mr. William Ross, dated 23 January 1997:

Mr Moss has asked Mr Stewart, Chief Executive of the Planning Service to reply to your question about the number of letters received in each planning office, giving a breakdown, for each office, of the numbers in (i) English (ii) Irish, and (iii) other language. I am replying in Mr Stewart's absence on annual leave.

The information sought is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. You will however be interested to know that the Planning Service proposes to introduce a computerised correspondence tracking system which will accurately record the volume of correspondence received.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful on this occasion.

Police Complaints System

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish the report by Dr. Marcus Hayes into the police complaints system in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [12587]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have received Dr. Maurice Hayes's wide-ranging review of the police complaints system in Northern Ireland and I am publishing it today. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House and in the Vote Office.

The review is a substantial document containing many recommendations for changing the current police complaints system. The Government will be considering it, in discussion with those most directly affected, before responding formally. I do not, however, expect his process to be protracted.

Even without the benefit of this in-depth consideration, it is clear that the recommendations are well thought out and convincing. The Government welcome this thorough and important review of a difficult area.

I should like to record my thanks to Maurice Hayes for undertaking the task and for producing such an excellent document. Thanks too should go to those who advised and assisted him, particularly those in the police, the Independent Commission for Police Complaints and the Police Authority, but there were obviously many others.

Dr. Hayes has clearly gone to a great deal of effort to consult, and indeed to consult widely, and I would expect his review to be well received in Northern Ireland and further afield.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Border Controls

11. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the extent to which the European Court of Justice has the power to determine issues relating to national border controls. [10558]

Mr. Howard: The firm position of Her Majesty's Government is that the treaty of Rome, and therefore the European Court of Justice, impinge on national border controls only to the extent that they affect the free movement of citizens of the European Union. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and I have made clear on numerous occasions that we will take whatever steps are necessary to maintain our frontier controls.

Closed Circuit Television

14. Sir Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of CCTV cameras that have been installed in town centres since the Government's CCTV challenge competition in 1996. [10561]

Mr. Kirkhope: The first two rounds of the closed circuit television challenge competition produced 365 winners. Around 45 of the 259 round 2 winners which were announced in June 1996 are already operational. The systems involve 450 cameras. The remainder, with around 2,800 more cameras, should become operational over the coming months.

Reoffending (Young People)

15. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures the Government are taking to reduce the rate of reoffending among young offenders. [10562]

Mr. Howard: We have proposed in the Crime (Sentences) Bill that curfew orders with electronic monitoring should be extended to 10 to 15-year-olds, and that the courts be given greater discretion to allow the identification of convicted juveniles. We are introducing a new secure training order for 12 to 14-year-old persistent offenders. High-intensity training regimes have been introduced at Thorn Cross young offender institution and will be extended to a new YOI to be opened at Colchester military corrective training centre within a month. But reducing offending is not the responsibility of the Government alone, and that is why we have strengthened the courts' powers to involve parents when their children offend.

Category A Prisoners

16. Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the treatment of category A prisoners in Her Majesty's prisons. [10563]

Miss Widdecombe: Category A prisoners have the same basic entitlements as all other prisoners and may earn the same privileges. However, the risk to the public should a category A prisoner escape means that such prisoners must be subject to high security which is aimed at making escape impossible.

Crime Prevention

17. Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the crime prevention policies adopted in the United States of America. [10564]

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office has looked at a number of recent initiatives in the USA; in many cases, the practices and techniques involved are already in use by police forces in this country.

18. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to encourage further community crime prevention initiatives. [10565]

Mr. Maclean: Community involvement in crime prevention is central to our strategy for tackling crime. The Crime Prevention Agency is currently considering ways in which we can build on what has already been achieved.

Offensive Weapons

19. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes involving the use of, or carrying of, (a) knives, (b) guns and (c) other offensive weapons were committed in each of the last two years for which statistics are available. [10566]

Mr. Maclean: Firearms were used in 12,977 notifiable offences recorded by the police in England and Wales in 1994, and 13,104 in 1995.

Two hundred and thirty-two homicides in England and Wales were apparently carried out with sharp instruments in 1994, and 251 in 1995. Corresponding figures for homicides involving blunt instruments are 54 and 85.

There were 5,804 convictions for carrying a knife or offensive weapon in public in 1994, and 5,749 in 1995.

Police Officers

20. Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of police officers serving in England on 31 March 1997. [10568]

Mr. Maclean: It is for chief constables to decide how to allocate their resources. On the basis of initial estimates, chief constables have said that they expect police numbers to increase by around 790 in England in the 12 months ending March 1997. This would mean a total of around 121,000 officers in England.

21. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the strength of the police forces in (a) 1979 and (b) 1997. [10569]

Mr. Maclean: There were 111,493 police officers in England and Wales in May 1979. By the end of September 1996, the latest date for which figures are available, police numbers had increased by almost 16,000 to 127,123.

Devon and Cornwall Police (A30 Site)

22. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the need for extra resources for Devon and Cornwall police in regard to the protests over the improvements to the A30 in Devon. [10570]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the chief constable that the cost of policing the A30 site is estimated to be in the region of £2 million. The chief constable is planning to meet these costs from within existing budget by the re-deployment of officers and resources.

Fire Service (Essex)

23. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about fire service provisions in Essex. [10571]

Mr. Sackville: We have received a number of such representatives, including two from hon. Members.

Responsibility for the provision of an efficient fire service rests with the local fire authority. My right hon. and learned Friend's approval is required under section 19 of the Fire Services Act 1947 when any reduction in the number of fire stations, fire appliances or firefighting posts in a brigade is proposed.

Remand Prisoners

24. Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received concerning the treatment of remand prisoners. [10572]

Miss Widdecombe: We have received no recent representations about the treatment of remand prisoners in general. The main correspondence recently regarding individual cases has been about Ms Roisin McAliskey, who is held at Holloway prison pending extradition proceedings, and about some high-security remand prisoners at Belmarsh prison.

Visas (Voluntary and Religious Workers)

25. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received concerning visas for voluntary and religious workers in the United Kingdom. [10573]

Mr. Kirkhope: The hon. Gentleman wrote to me on this subject on 24 September and I replied on 17 October.

Century Date Change (Computers)

26. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the millennium compliance of the computer systems for which his Department is responsible. [10574]

Mr. Howard: My Department is aware of the problem. The Department's main information technology service provider—Sema Group—has completed an audit and other suppliers have been commissioned to assess necessary changes. The business areas in my Department are devising action plans, taking into account other developments and the likelihood of systems still being in place at the time of the millennium date change. As the plans are developed, detailed cost and resource implications will be assessed.

Freemasonry

27. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for which public appointments to bodies dealing with Home Office responsibilities applicants are asked to indicate their membership of the freemasons. [10575]

Mr. Howard: The general principles governing the making of public appointments are set out in the guidance on appointments to executive non-departmental public bodies issues by the Commissioner for Public appointments. These do not require applicants to declare their membership of any organisations other than political ones.

The information sought from applicants by the Home Office when filling particular appointments is decided in each case in the light of the needs of the job and the circumstances at the time. Where appropriate, it may include information about outside interests including freemasonry but there is no list of posts to which such a requirement applies.

Youth Crime (Wolverhampton)

28. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the level of youth crime in Wolverhampton. [10576]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available centrally, but data for court proceedings in relation to young offenders in Wolverhampton are given in the table. Cautioning information is collected by police force area only.

Number of young offenders aged 10 to under 18 years convicted of all offences at Wolverhampton petty sessional division[1] by type of offence 1985, 1990 and 1995

[1] Includes those cases convicted at the Crown Court where the committing Petty Sessional Divisional was Wolverhampton.

Violent Crime (Inner Cities)

Mr. Benton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the findings of the British crime survey regarding the proportion of adults living in inner-city areas who were victims of violent crime once or more during 1995. [10556]

Mr. Maclean: The 1996 British crime survey found that 7.1 per cent. of adults living in inner-city areas, and 5.2 per cent. of adults overall, were victims of violent crime once or more during 1995. This includes woundings, robberies and common assault.

Prison Overcrowding

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons in England and Wales which his Department assesses to be overcrowded, indicating in each case the percentage of overcrowding. [10774]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 23 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question concerning which prisons in England and Wales are overcrowded and what percentage of overcrowding exists.

The information requested is given in the attached table. Overcrowding is defined as the number of prisoners above the In Use CNA. The In Use CNA is the certified normal accommodation and represents the uncrowded capacity of each establishment on the 27th December 1996. This measure of overcrowding takes into account all types of accommodation including single and double cells, rooms and dormitories.

The total number of prisoners held in an establishment is determined by its operational capacity rather than its In Use CNA. Operational capacity is the total number of prisoners which an establishment can hold without serious risk to good order, security and the proper running of the planned regime.

Stop and Search Powers

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on proposed revisions to the powers of the police to stop and search persons suspected of carrying knives. [11643]

Mr. Maclean: I intend to lay before Parliament soon changes to the code of practice on the exercise by police officers of stop and search powers, issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, which will clarify that police officers may stop and search people who are identifiable as belonging to a group or gang whose members habitually carry knives. Amendments to police powers in the Knives Bill, which received its Committee stage on Wednesday 22 January, will allow an inspector to authorise police officers to stop and search anyone in a particular locality for up to 24 hours, where he reasonably believes that incidents involving serious violence may taken place or that people are carrying knives in that area. The inspector will be required to inform a superintendent of the authorisation as soon as it is practicable to do so. An extension of the authorisation for a further 24 hours may be given at the direction of a superintendent.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time taken for his Department to answer ordinary written parliamentary questions in each of the last two Sessions; and if he will make a statement. [12266]

Mr. Howard: The information requested is not available.

Dentists (Assault)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dentists have been (a) charged and (b) found guilty of assault as a result of extensive and wholly unnecessary treatment since 1979. [12400]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not available centrally.

Drugs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those drugs which are illegal for recreational use but can be prescribed lawfully by a qualified medical practitioner. [12384]

Mr. Sackville: All substances which are controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 may be prescribed by a doctor except those listed in schedule 1 to the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985, as amended.

Child Sex Offenders

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to answer the written question tabled by the hon. Member for Bolton, North-East on Wednesday, 18 December—10755—concerning the registration of convicted child sex offenders under the Sex Offences Bill. [12300]

Mr. Maclean: I answered this question on 21 January, Official Report, column 511.

Television Licences (Fine Defaulters)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many television licence fine defaulters were imprisoned in 1996. [10567]

Mr. Maclean: Three hundred and seventeen television licence fee fine defaulters were imprisoned during the first 11 months of 1996.

Licensing Hours

Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend licensing hours at weekends; and if he will make a statement. [12849]

Mr. Kirkhope: We have been giving very careful consideration to the result of the public consultation about extending the normal permitted closing times on Friday and Saturday nights, from 11 pm to midnight.

We received a very large number of responses to the consultation exercise—some 700 responses in all. The views expressed by respondents varied considerably, and there were significant amounts of support for, and opposition to, the Government's proposals.

The responses to this consultation exercise have also brought into sharper focus some concerns about overlapping aspects of the licensing system, as between licensing justices and local authorities, and their current effectiveness for an industry in which internal boundaries between different types of premises are increasingly blurred.

Individual aspects of the licensing system are often presented as being self-contained, and proposals for change are commonly put forward on the basis that they can be tackled separately, but the licensing regime is a complex one, and invariably there are implications for other parts of the system.

We have therefore concluded that it would be right to take forward the consideration of extending normal licensing hours in the broader context of the particular issues which I have set out. I expect this consideration to be concluded during the spring.

Strip Searches (Video Recording)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in what circumstances the strip searching of prisoners is video recorded in Her Majesty's prisons; [10912]

(2) in which prisons the video recording of strip searching has (a) been authorised in the past and (b) is still authorised; [10913]

(3) how many prisoners have been video recorded while being strip searched; and how many prisoners have refused to be video recorded while being strip searched; [10914]

(4) how many prisoners have been fined for refusing to be strip searched before a video camera; and how many have had their fines returned. [10915]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answers 17 January 1997]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 23 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about the use of video during the strip searching of prisoners, how many have been video taped, the number fined for refusing and how many have had their fines returned.

A closed loop video system was introduced at Long Lartin prison for use in the prisoners strip search room during random strip searches following visits. This was to both safeguard prisoners against abuses of procedure and to protect staff in the event of malicious and/or false allegations concerning propriety of a search.

The closed loop nature of the system meant that strip searches could not be seen by staff. Video tapes were instead securely stored and filed.

This limited scheme lasted four months, was evaluated and has now ended. There are no plans to repeat the scheme at Long Lartin prison or elsewhere.

Two hundred and sixteen prisoners were video recorded while being strip searched. Of this number ten refused. Six prisoners had their earnings stopped or deducted on adjudications, following refusal to be strip-searched before a video camera. These adjudications have all been quashed. In each case the stopped or deducted earnings have been returned.

Dunblane

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the evidence that underlies the statement made at paragraph 24 of "The Government Response to The Public Inquiry into the Shootings at Dunblane Primary School"

"that, removal of key components is not a practicable proposition for all types of guns". [11614]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 21 January 1997]: On the basis of advice from the Forensic Science Service, we accept that disabling handguns is possible but that in some cases it is not practical. Lord Cullen himself took this view—paragraph 9.106. Copies of two letters from the Forensic Science Service are in the Library. The Government have made their position clear during the passage of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill. We do not believe that disabling guns provides sufficient safeguards for the protection of the public and there would be no guarantee that a person minded to do so could not keep or obtain illicit spares at home.

Woodhill Prison

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to reduce the amount provided for facilities, fixtures and fittings in the budget plans for the top security unit at Woodhill prison, Milton Keynes and implement a regime of minimal facilities; and if he will make a statement. [11189]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 21 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. David Porter, dated 23 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about facilities at Woodhill prison.

The costs identified to refurbish the high security unit at Woodhill have been properly quantified to meet the needs of security, the regime and safety of the public, staff and prisoners. The costing exercise has not identified any areas where savings could be made without compromising security and safety.

The cells in the high security units at Woodhill prison will have integral sanitation, as does every other cell at Woodhill. The rules on volumetric control will apply as elsewhere and there will be no in-cell television or video. Furniture in the cells will be standard prison issue and association areas will have standard furnishing and equipment. Meals will be provided from the kitchen and there will be no facility for prisoners to cook their own meals.

The high security units at Woodhill will form part of a co-ordinated series of close supervision units each holding a small number of prisoners with varying regimes ranging from the strict through to more structured regimes. When they are ready for use they will provide:

- a structured regime unit with limited association where the behaviour of prisoners can be assessed
- a restricted regime unit with a strict, no association regime for prisoners who continue to be disruptive or dangerous
- a programme intervention unit offering structured therapy programmes and full association for those who would benefit from such an approach.

It is anticipated that the high security unit at Woodhill will be ready for use at the end of this year.

Firearms (Amendment) Bill

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned into the impact on his budget of the implementation of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill; and when he will publish the findings. [11844]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 21 January 1997]: No research has been commissioned on the financial impact of the Bill, although our estimate of the costs that will need to be paid to compensate people who surrender guns and accessories is set out in the financial memorandum to the Bill.

Maximum Security Prisons

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the decision on whether to build a super-max prison; and if he will make a statement. [10782]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The Prison Service carried out a feasibility study of the Learmont recommendations that new prisons should be built to house the most dangerous and difficult to control prisoners in the system. Ministers are considering the study. Any decision will hinge on the assessment of the costs and benefits of concentration. A move towards concentration would represent a fundamental change in penal policy and there will therefore need to be a very careful examination of the options.

SCOTLAND

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he received the reply from Scottish Power to his intimation that he was minded to approve the electricity interconnector to Northern Ireland subject to undergrounding of certain sections; what other representations he has received since this intimation; when he expects to make a final decision on the application; and if he will make a statement. [11436]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend received Scottish Power's comments on 20 December 1996. Comments were also submitted by 22 other interested parties. My right hon. Friend is currently considering all these representations and will announce his final decision in due course.

Mental Handicap Services

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what arrangements are being made concerning the transfer of funds from mental handicap hospitals that are closed to mental handicap community services; who is responsible for determining these arrangements; and what mechanisms there are to ensure that the funds released continue to be used for mental handicap community services; [11324]

(2) what steps are being taken to ensure that funds transferred from Gogarburn hospital to alternative services in the community will continue in perpetuity to be used for the benefit of people with a learning disability. [11325]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The size and timing of resource transfers from the NHS to local authorities and others are matters for local determination following joint local needs assessments.

Where hospital closures are proposed, the agencies involved are charged with ensuring that replacement care and support services appropriate to needs are in place and available before any closure is made.

Resources transferred from health boards to local authorities continue to be NHS resources for which the councils account to the boards to ensure that the moneys are spent on the level and type of services agreed following local needs assessments.

My Department monitors individual resource transfers.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current position regarding planned closures of long-stay mental handicap hospitals in Scotland; which hospitals are proposed for closure; on what dates; and what funds will be available for community services as a result of the closures. [11323]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Health boards' plans have been approved for the closure of two long-stay mental handicap hospitals in Scotland: Gogarburn hospital in Lothian and Woodilee hospital in Greater Glasgow, but neither hospital will close until alternative facilities and services are in place and properly resourced.

Where hospital closures are proposed, the agencies involved are charged with ensuring that replacement care and support services appropriate to needs are in place. The level of funding required for alternative community services is a matter for local determination.

Food Safety

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what statistics he collates in respect of inspections relating to control of foodstuffs by food enforcement authorities; and how many inspections there have been in each year since 1993. [11326]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: In compliance with article 14 of the official control of foodstuffs directive 89/397, the Secretary of State for Scotland collates the number of food hygiene and food standards inspections carried out annually by food enforcement authorities in Scotland.

This information for each calendar year since 1993 is:

	Food hygiene inspections	Food standards inspections
1993	41,398	14,199
1994	41,134	12,082
1995	38,154	13,382
1996	[1]—

[1] Figures not yet available.

Unemployment (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) men, (b) women, (c) young men and (d) young women were unemployed in the city of Glasgow in (i) June 1979 and (ii) June 1996; and how many were long-term unemployed in each category. [11862]

Mr. Kynoch: Unemployment statistics for 1979 are not available for the area represented by the Glasgow unitary authority.

In June 1996, there were 26,890 men and 6,729 women in the city of Glasgow registered as unemployed and claiming benefit.

Statistics concerning the age and duration of the unemployed are available on a quarterly basis and are not available for June 1996. In July 1996, there were 7,199 males and 3,289 females who were aged 24 and under and registered as unemployed and claiming benefit. There were 16,082 men and 3,175 women in the city of Glasgow who had been registered as unemployed and claiming benefit for over six months.

Departmental Offices

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the name and location of each of his Department's offices and the number of people employed in each. [11866]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The numbers of people employed in each of the Scottish Office's buildings are shown in the tables.

Marlin Lodge, Newton Mearns

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the future use of Marlin lodge, Newton Mearns. [11657]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The national roads directorate proposes, subject to planning approval, to use Marlin lodge as a temporary office from which the contractor and the Scottish Office's site representative would manage site operations during the Dumbreck to Malletsheugh's three-year maintenance period. A planning application for a "change of use" for the property has been lodged with East Renfrewshire council.

When the land required for the adjacent road scheme is identified, it is expected that Marlin lodge and any surplus land will be disposed of in line with the statutory guidelines.

Employment (Glasgow)

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of manufacturing jobs that have been (a) created and (b) lost in the city of Glasgow in each of the last five years. [11865]

Mr. Kynoch: Statistical information relating to the creation of new jobs and the loss of existing ones is not available. The 1991 and 1993 censuses of employment and the 1995 annual employment survey identify the total number of employees in employment at specific points of time.

The table sets out the number of people employed in the manufacturing sector in the last three census of employment years.

Glasgow Regeneration Alliance

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the work of the Glasgow regeneration alliance since it was established; and if he will make a statement. [11867]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Glasgow regeneration alliance has an important role to perform in bringing together bodies and interests concerned with regeneration activities in the city. Officials from the Scottish Office attend meetings of the executive officers group of the alliance as observers. No assessment of the alliance's performance has been made. The Scottish Office will be monitoring progress in the individual priority partnership areas and the regeneration programme in Glasgow.

Mental Illness Specific Grant

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 329–30, if he will place in the Library a copy of the report prepared by the Nuffield centre for community care studies, Glasgow university, relating to the mental illness specific grant; and if he will make a statement. [12019]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: When the report is finalised, it will be published and copies placed in the Library.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Scottish Office has received as a capital receipt from (a) the Irvine housing association and (b) the North Ayrshire council, following the disposal of the housing stock of Irvine development corporation; and how many properties were transferred to each landlord. [11916]

Mr. Kynoch: Proceeds realised by Irvine development corporation from the disposal of its housing stock and numbers of houses sold are shown in the table. Of the receipts shown, £20.8 million contributed to the total repayment of £52.7 million made by the corporation to my right hon. Friend during wind-up.

Mr. Kynoch: Proceeds from the disposal of industrial, office, retail and other commercial property and land owned by Irvine development corporation contributed £31.9 million to the total repayment of £52.7 million made by the corporation to my right hon. Friend during wind-up.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which body had responsibility for setting the housing allocation policy relating to the properties disposed of by Irvine development corporation during the transfer of its housing stock to other landlords; and which body retains the records of housing allocations made during this period. [11919]

School Boards

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 2 December 1996, Official Report, column 562, when he expects the information requested on number of school boards to be available and if he will arrange for it to be sent to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South. [12133]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Provisional results of the most recent round of school board biennial elections, conducted in 1995–96, were published on Tuesday 21 January by the Government statistical service. I have arranged for the relevant information to be sent to the hon. Member.

More detailed information on the outcome of the elections, including a breakdown of boards by education authority area, will be published once the results are confirmed. This information will be sent to the hon. Member on publication.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his letter of 16 October 1996, AAB 03104.106, what assessment he has made of the programmes for sex offenders in prisons cited in his letter. [10826]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A formal evaluation of the sexual offender programme at Peterhead was carried out by the social work research centre at the university of Stirling. It was commissioned to provide insight into the issues associated with establishing an intervention programme within an institutional setting; to assess the impact of establishing the programme on the prisoners and staff of HMP Peterhead; and to explore the feasibility of such programmes in other establishments in the Scottish prison system. The study was not able to consider the programme's impact on reoffending, as an insufficient number of prisoners have so far been released back into the community to allow any meaningful conclusions to be drawn. The report will be published shortly.

The operation of the programme at Peterhead has also been assessed on two occasions by Professor William Marshall, of Queen's University, Kingston, Canada, who is one of the world's leading authorities on the treatment of sexual offenders.

Plans are in hand to commission an 18-month evaluation of the programme at Barlinnie. The aim will be to assess the impact of the programme on the attitudes and behaviour of prisoners participating; to examine the links between the prison-based programme and equivalent community-based provision for monitoring, supporting and counselling sexual offenders on release back into the community; and to evaluate the effectiveness of the programme in preventing those sexual offenders who have been on the programme from committing further sexual offences. It is expected that the contract to undertake this work will be issued in March or April.

Game Birds and Raptors

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his letter of 25 September, what information and proposals he has received from the Joint Nature Conservation Committee concerning long-term and strategic solutions to the interaction between game birds and raptors; and if he will make a statement. [10858]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The raptor working group, co-chaired by the JNCC and the Department of the Environment, is assessing the interaction between game birds and raptors and will provide advice to Government on this complex issue, as it becomes available.

A74

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he has made of the way the contract to upgrade the A74 was awarded and carried out; and if he will review the guidelines for the awarding of such contracts; [10859]

(2) what assessment he has made of the way the contract for the A74 upgrading works has been carried out by the main contractor. [10860]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The contract to upgrade the Eaglesfield to Kirkpatrick Fleming section of the A74 was procured in accordance with the Public Works Contracts Regulations 1991—Public Procurement Procedures. These regulations govern public works contracts and allow for contractors from EU member states to bid. Under the assessment process, Impresa Castelli and Girola qualified for selection to tender for the scheme and were invited to do so. The selection process centres on the technical and financial capability of applicants. Impresa Castelli and Girola demonstrated sound financial standing and technical capacity and submitted the most competitive bid in a high-quality field.

In the event, the contractor did not perform well in carrying out the contract, although the standard of the completed works was satisfactory. The contractor was late in completing the works and substantial liquidated damages have been deducted from him for this reason. The contractor has submitted claims for additional payments which are in dispute and are now at arbitration. Several sub-contractors and suppliers have suffered payment problems.

In the light of experience of this contract, the technical and financial criteria for the assessment of prospective tenderers have been reviewed. The assessment of technical capacity now takes account of a contractor's understanding of the nature of the work to be carried out under the specific contract. It also takes account of the staff required to undertake the contract and the need to ensure that the management structure is adequate to the task.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospital beds there were in each health authority in each of the last seven years; and if he will indicate for each authority and year the number for (a) acute, (b) geriatric, (c) maternity and (d) mental illness or disability cases. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that hon. Members are represented by right on local partnership management boards set up under the priority partnership areas arrangements. [12428]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: This is a matter for decision by the board concerned. The hon. Member should make his representation to it.

Skye Bridge

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the total recorded traffic flow figures over the Skye bridge during those toll-free days during the recent Christmas and new year holidays; if he will provide typical average figures for non-holiday mid-week days during December and January; and if he will make a statement. [12393]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Figures provided by the operators of the Skye bridge show that 567 vehicles crossed the bridge on Christmas days 1996 and 943 on new year's day 1997, including vehicles exempt from paying tolls. The average daily number of vehicles crossing on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays on non-holiday weeks between 3 December 1996 and 16 January 1997 was 1,036, including vehicles exempt from paying tolls.

[12322]

Mr. Kirkhope: Complete data for 1996 are not yet available. Information for 1992 to 1995 and January to August 1996 was given in the reply to a question from the hon. Member on 31 October 1996, Official Report, columns 211-13.

British Passport Holders

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, in descending order, the estimated number of full British passport holders currently resident in all overseas British territories, Commonwealth and foreign countries who have been registered voters in the United Kingdom. [12453]

Mr. Sackville: Information on the countries of residence of overseas electors is not collected centrally. The total number of overseas electors on registers which came into force on 16 February 1996 was 17,886.

Dog Breeders

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the current operation of the Breeding of Dogs Act 1973; and if he will make a statement; [12402]

(2) what plans he has to issue guidance to local authorities on unlicensed dog breeders and the Breeding of Dogs Act 1973; and if he will make a statement; [12403]

(3) what action he intends to take against unlicensed dog breeders who breach the Breeding of Dogs Act 1973; and if he will make a statement; [12404]

(4) how many representations he has received regarding the Breeding and Sale of Dogs Bill; and how many of those supported the Bill. [12405]

Mr. Sackville: The Breeding of Dogs Acts 1973 and 1991 provide local authorities with wide-ranging powers over dog breeding. They can withhold the granting of a licence to keep a breeding establishment on any grounds, and impose any condition in the licence. Local authority officials and/or veterinary surgeons can inspect licensed premises as often as they wish to check upon the standards of health, welfare and accommodation of dogs.

The Acts give local authorities powers, subject to obtaining a warrant, to inspect all premises where there is a reasonable suspicion that unlicensed breeding is taking place. The Home Office issued guidance to local authorities in 1992 concerning these, and other, powers available to them in the 1973 and 1991 Acts.

Current law provides local authorities with sufficient powers to deal with the problem of unscrupulous dog breeders.

A total of 534 letters have been received about the Breeding and Sale of Dogs Bill. Of this number, 527 have supported the Bill.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Machinery of Government

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes in the machinery of government have been made as a result of recommendations made by Lord Justice Scott. [11056]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 22 January 1997, Official Report, column 600-01.

Access to Government Information

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he plans to take to (a) ensure that all Government Departments are informed of, and implement the change in, the code of practice on access to Government information contained in the revised code issued on 14 January and (b) monitor the effectiveness of implementation from 1 February. [11777]

Mr. Freeman: Copies of the revised "Code of Practice on Access to Government Information" and its accompanying "Guidance on Interpretation" have been circulated to openness liaison officers in Departments in advance of the changes coming into effect on 1 February. The changes and their effects have been explained to these liaison officers in correspondence and at a meeting. These departmental representatives are charged with ensuring that the revised code and guidance are fully disseminated within their Departments. These working level contacts have been reinforced through discussions of the revised code at meetings of departmental establishment officers and at a recent meeting of permanent secretaries, chaired by the head of the home civil service.

My Department will continue to report annually to Parliament on the experiences of Departments, agencies and public bodies in implementing the code. The Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, who investigates complaints about departmental implementation of the code, also reports annually to Parliament, and has the power to report from time to time on specific issues arising from his work.

Government Vehicles

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many official (a) Government and (b) ministerial cars are operating on bi-fuel; and if he will make a statement. [12022]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for the cars provided by the Government car service has been delegated under the terms of its framework document to the Security Facilities Executive under its chief Executive, Mr. John King. The agency is therefore responding to the question. No record is kept centrally of cars which other Departments and Government agencies may operate.

Letter from John King to Sir Irvine Patnick, dated 22 January 1997:

I have been asked by Mr Freeman, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (who has Ministerial responsibility for the Government Car Service (GCS)), to provide you with a response to your Parliamentary Question concerning the number of cars, both for Official and Ministerial use, that are operating on bi-fuel. I am the Chief Executive of the Agency with operational responsibility for the GCS and am able to answer your question with regard only to those cars used by the Government Car Service.

I can confirm that the Government Car Service currently has two cars that can operate on both Petrol and Natural Gas. One is a Rover 827 which operates within the Ministerial fleet and the other is a Rover Sterling which operates within the pool fleet.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Stock

Mr. Gordon Prentice: The ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which 10 district councils, placed in rank order, have the highest percentage of their housing stock built before 1900. [12467]

Mr. Clappison: The 10 district councils with the highest percentage of their housing stock built before 1919 are as follows:

	Percentage
1. Hammersmith and Fulham	74.2
2. Kensington and Chelsea	70.7
3. Pendle	67.2
4. Westminster	62.6
5. Hyndburn	61.7
6. Teeside	60.8
7. Eden	60.3
8. Camden	58.5
9. Islington	58.3
10. Burnley	55.7

1. The figures relate to dwellings of all tenures as at April 1996.
2. 1919 is the earliest date for which the Department can provide reliable figures.

Sellafield

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to announce his decision on the planning application for a rocket, characterisation facility laboratory at Sellafield; and if he will make a statement. [12643]

Sir Paul Beresford: The planning inspector's report of the inquiry, which was received by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 25 November, is currently being considered with a view to the decision being issued as soon as possible.

Hedgerows

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what length of hedgerow has been lost in England each year since 1979. [12482]

Mr. Clappison: The information is not available in the form requested. The Department commissioned two surveys into hedgerow changes covering the years from 1984 to 1990 and from 1990 to 1993. The latter survey indicated an average annual net loss of 18,100 km of hedges in England and Wales. The comparable annual figure for the previous survey period was 21,900 km. In these figures, the net "loss" of hedges refers to both removal of hedges and changes to other types of field boundary such as relict hedges and fences. No further research into hedgerow loss has been undertaken.

PSA Projects

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of state for the Environment if he will make a further statement on the sale of PSA Projects. [13204]

Mr. Gummer: In December 1992 PSA Projects was sold to Tarmac Construction Ltd. Tarmac was paid £49.6 million as compensation for future losses and commercial risk, to provide funds for a pension fund contribution, investment and working capital. The Department retained £55 million of pre-sale trade debts which were all subsequently collected. In addition to the payment of £49.6 million, Tarmac received £10.5 million for net liabilities transferred with PSA Projects. Under the sale agreement, this sum was subject to pound-for-pound adjustment following the preparation of a completion statement which would provide details of PSA Projects net asset position at the point of sale.

Tarmac presented a completion statement in June 1993 but difficulties over agreeing adjustments to this resulted in the appointment of an independent expert in October 1995 to review the completion statement and make adjustments. The independent expert has now reported on the net asset position of the business at the point of sale. As a result, Tarmac will make an adjustmenting payment to Government of £19,921,177.00p. In addition Tarmac will pay Government interest totalling £2,612,611.98p.

Under the sale agreements, the Department's liability to meet the severance costs of staff who were employed in the business was limited to £39.5 million. This limit has been reached and all further costs are to be met by the purchaser.

In the event of the purchaser's bankruptcy in the first five years post sale that is to 1 December 1997, the Department has also guaranteed the redundancy entitlements of transferring staff. The maximum value of this contingent liability is now estimated to be £10.3 million.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how his Department has used the "UK Indicators of Sustainable Development" in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans there are to extend their use in future within the Department. [12273]

Mr. Lang: The "UK Indicators of Sustainable Development", published last March, and the information underlying those of most direct relevance to the responsibilities of the Department have been used to inform decisions about priorities for action and work programmes for the year ahead. This will be reflected in the annual White Paper on sustainable development and the Department's annual report, both of which will be published shortly. The data are also used as appropriate to inform consideration of the environmental implications of policy options.

Overseas Investment

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent studies his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated to assess the current levels of British private investment overseas; what assessment he has made of its impact on the United Kingdom economy; and if he will make a statement. [12569]

Mr. Lang: Following a commitment given in the first Competitiveness White Paper (Cm 2563) my Department commissioned, in 1994, KPMG to undertake a study of UK outward investment with the remit to consider what further support the Government might offer overseas investors. The results of this study were published in May 1996.

My Department constantly monitors the levels of British overseas investment and, from time to time, evaluates relevant studies on this subject.

The Government believe that domestic firms and their employees gain from the freedom available to business to invest overseas. Direct investment can be an effective means of delivering goods and services to particular markets and in this way complements direct exports. Overall, the UK stands to benefit if firms are allowed to direct their resources to their most profitable use. The Government seek international agreement to liberalise regimes governing outward and inward foreign direct investment.

Coal Stocks

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his current estimate of the stocks of coal held at (a) collieries and (b) power stations. [11852]

Mr. Page [holding answer 23 January 1997]: The levels of stocks held by the coal and electricity generating industries at the end of October are as follows:

thousand tonnes

	Collieries	Power stations
October 1996	4,862	9,590

Source:
Energy trends.

Power Stations (Petrol Coke)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will take steps to prevent the burning of petrol coke at power stations. [11851]

Mr. Page [holding answer 23 January 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 5 December 1996, Official Report, column 756.

Export Winners

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he intends to issue the "Export Winners" report. [13143]

Mr. Nelson: The "Export Winners" report will be published today. It draws on interviews with 75 of the best United Kingdom exporting companies and highlights the key factors behind their success. I believe it will provide a valuable guide to export success, particularly for new or less experienced exporters.

I have placed copies of the report in the Library of the House.

Insurance Companies

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes he proposes to the legislation relating to insolvent non-life insurance companies. [13144]

Mr. Nelson: My Department issued a consultative document in December 1994 on proposals for dealing with insolvent non-life insurance companies. The proposals seek to provide a more satisfactory legal basis for dealing with the affairs of an insolvent non-life insurance company through a scheme of arrangement under section 425 of the Companies Act 1985, developed in a period of provisional liquidation. Responses to the consultative document generally supported a change in the law and I therefore propose to bring forward legislation, when parliamentary time permits. The principal features of the new arrangements would be:

- provision for an insolvent insurance company to apply to the court for a stay on proceedings against it by unsecured creditors while a scheme of arrangement is being drawn up;
- some modifications to the requirements of section 425 of the Companies Act 1985, for the purposes of schemes subject to the new provisions;
- provision for the insolvency practitioner overseeing an agreed scheme to have certain powers, in relation to fraudulent and wrongful trading and preferences and undervalues, which are not currently available to the administrators of section 425 schemes.

Late Payments

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to implement the proposal to require large companies to publish details of their payment practices, contained in the consultative document, "Tackling Late Payment: Stating Payment Practice in the Directors" report. [13142]

Mr. Page: Late payment was one of the main concerns highlighted by small firms and their advisers during the nation-wide series of "Your Business Matters" conferences which culminated in the national conference last March. Whilst there are no easy answers to the problems caused by late payment of commercial debt, we in Government are committed to doing all we can to help small firms get their bills paid promptly.

The draft regulations, amending the Companies Act 1985, which I am today laying before Parliament, will mean that all public limited companies and their large private subsidiaries will have to disclose how long, on average, it takes them to pay their bills. This additional information, which builds on the payment policy disclosure introduced last year, will give small firms more details of the payment records of the larger companies with whom they may be considering doing business. This annual disclosure of a performance figure should help small firms monitor year-on-year, in a relatively straightforward way, the payment records of large companies. Whilst it will never substitute for thorough credit management, the additional information provided will be useful to suppliers.

Fireworks

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, columns 572–73, if he will list the representatives of the firework industry he met to discuss aerial shells between 21 November and 19 December indicating the dates on which he met each. [12620]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I treat the meetings I have with individuals and organisations, on any topic, as private unless it is agreed that the details should be made public. The meetings I had between 21 November and 19 December 1996 took the form of private discussions on a range of issues relating to fireworks, including commercial matters, and I am not therefore at liberty to disclose details.

Dounreay

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what data his Department collates in respect of the environmental monitoring conducted by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority of employees at Dounreay following reportable radiological incidents; and if (a) current and (b) former UKAEA staff are covered by the Official Secrets Act 1911 in respect of such incidents. [11914]

Mr. Page: These data are not collated by my Department. Under the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985 the UKAEA is responsible for monitoring the radiation doses received by its employees. The data are then collated by the Health and Safety Executive.

Information on radiation doses would be covered by The Official Secrets Act only if there were clear national security implications.

WALES

A550

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the official opening of the roads grade interchange at the entrance of the Deeside industrial park. [12281]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The interchange has been in use since December. No formal opening ceremony is intended.

Ministerial School Visits

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) high schools, (b) primary schools, (c) infants schools, (d) nursery schools and (e) further education colleges he has visited in (i) the former county of Clwyd and (ii) in the new county of Flintshire; and if he will make a statement. [12277]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Since July 1995; my right hon. Friend has visited one secondary school in the area covered by the former county of Clwyd. In the same period, in addition to a number of constituency visits, my predecessor visited two primary schools, two secondary schools and two colleges of further-higher education. Of these, one primary school and one college are located in the new county of Flintshire. Since my appointment in June 1996, I have yet to make such a visit but intend to do so as soon as possible.

Rail Services

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he is taking to improve rail services between Holyhead and Crewe and Wrexham and Birkenhead; and if he will make a statement. [12285]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I understand that the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising is currently evaluating bids for both the North West Regional Railways and the Intercity West Coast franchises. The franchising director will take account of any proposals by bidders to improve the level and quality of services over and above the minimum standards specified in the passenger service requirements.

Inward Investment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the level of inward investment to (a) the former county of Clwyd and (b) the former district council of Alyn and Deeside in the years 1994, 1995 and 1996. [12279]

Mr. Hague: In 1994, Clwyd attracted 878 new jobs, 734 safeguarded jobs and investment of £98.5 million; in 1995, 491 new jobs, 222 safeguarded jobs and investment of £50 million; and, in 1996, 1,053 new jobs, 334 safeguarded jobs and investment of £108.8 million. Alyn and Deeside saw 122 new jobs, 30 safeguarded jobs and investment of £49.6 million in 1994; 77 new jobs and investment of £1.9 million in 1995; and 50 new jobs and investment of £45 million in 1996.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to attract inward investment to Deeside and Buckley. [12278]

Mr. Hague: The inward investment drive continues to be very active and the Welsh Office and Welsh Development Agency will continue to make every effort to ensure that all parts of Wales benefit from inward investment. 1996 was an exceptional year which demonstrates that the policies of economic discipline are working well. North Wales is sharing in this success and the North Wales Economic Forum will help increase that success.

River Dee Crossing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the new River Dee crossing at Connahs quay to open. [12282]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Flintshire county council is responsible for the River Dee crossing. It estimates completion in late 1997.

Meningitis

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he was first informed of the probability of the connection between the meningitis outbreak of mid-November 1996 in the Penylan halls of residence of the University College of Wales, Cardiff, and the earlier case notified on 16 October; by whom he was informed; and if he will make a further statement on the nature of the connection. [12740]

Mr. Hague: Officials initially advised me on 29 November 1996 about the outbreak following notification from Bro Taf health authority. On 6 December I was advised of the outcome of the routine retrospective testing on the 16 October case. The results were described as compatible with meningococcal infection although not indicating the type. I do not propose to make any further statement until I have received, and considered fully, the outbreak report which I have asked the authority to submit by the end of January.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to receive the full report of the (a) university and (b) health authorities on the meningococcal C strain of meningitis at the university halls of residence, Penylan, Cariff. [12741]

Mr. Hague: Both reports are expected by the end of January.

Hedgerows

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what length of hedgerow has been lost in Wales in each year since 1979. [12484]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information is not available in the form requested. However, two sample surveys covering the periods from 1984 to 1990 and from 1990 to 1993 indicated net losses of hedgerows in Wales of 18,000 km and 5,500 km respectively at an average annual net loss of 2,570 km for the first period and 1,830 km for the second period.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EU Budget

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest estimate of the net contribution of each EU member state to the EU budget; and what this figure is in terms of pounds sterling per head of population in each member state. [11800]

Mr. David Davis: Net contributions by member states to the EC budget for 1995—the latest year for which figures are available—are as follows:

Member state	Net contribution (£ million)	Net contribution per head (£)
Belgium	+254.9	+25.5

Spain	–5,911.1	–149.7
France	+1,414.5	+25.0
Ireland	–1,545.2	–439.0
Italy	+502.9	+8.9
Luxembourg	+36.7	+96.5
Netherlands	+1,641.7	+109.4

Finland	+134.8	+27.2
Sweden	+767.6	+90.1
UK	+3,865.5	+67.5

Figures are drawn from the European Court of Auditor's report on the 1995 budget. They do not take account of expenditure not attributable to individual member states, such as administration, and should not therefore be regarded as definitive.

Convention on the Rights of the Child

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to adopt and adhere to the draft optional protocol to the convention on the rights of the child on the age of recruitment and participation in armed forces. [12355]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: A UN Commission on Human Rights working group is currently meeting to continue drafting the optional protocol. The United Kingdom is participating in negotiations.

It is not yet possible to determine the outcome of those negotiations.

Antarctic Treaty

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Government of Japan concerning ratification of the Antarctic treaty; and if he will make a statement. [12460]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 28 October 1996, Official Report, column 32–33. The Japanese Government are still considering the detailed technical aspects of the environmental protocol. We continue to correspond and to urge Japan to ratify the protocol as soon as possible.

Gibraltar

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions the Spanish Government have objected to a separate Gibraltar presence at talks concerning affairs in the colony. [12612]

Mr. David Davis: The Spanish Government have always objected to Gibraltar's representatives forming a separate delegation at Brussels process talks. However, they have also made clear that they would welcome the participation of Gibraltar's representatives as part of the British delegation. Sr. Matutes repeated this on 22 January in talks with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent contacts there have been with the Spanish Government concerning Spanish recognition of British passports issued in Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement. [12618]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs raised this issue when he met the Spanish Foreign Minister in Madrid on 22 January. The Spanish Government reaffirmed that they have never questioned, nor shall question, the right to free movement of Gibraltarians throughout the EU and shall always act in accordance with EU law. We welcome this assurance. We have offered to set up a committee of experts to discuss a number of outstanding technical points concerning non-EU passports issued in Gibraltar.

DEFENCE

Ministerial Speeches (Conferences)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the conferences at which he spoke during 1996 as Secretary of State for Defence, indicating their dates and subject matter. [12621]

Mr. Portillo: During 1996 I spoke at the following conferences in my capacity as Secretary of State for Defence:

Junior Leaders

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to reintroduce the junior leaders scheme; and if he will make a statement. [12622]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 29 October 1996, Official Report, column 74.

TRANSPORT

Corridor Assessments

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many stage 1 corridor assessments were undertaken by his Department between 1992 and 1996; and if he will (a) list and (b) publish these assessments. [12457]

Mr. Watts: None. Stage 1 assessment reports for completely new schemes entering the national trunk road programme were introduced in August 1993. There have been no introductions of new schemes, in need of a Stage 1 assessment, into the national roads programme since then.

Heavy Goods Vehicles (Motorways)

Mr. Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will launch a campaign to discourage heavy goods vehicles from using the overtaking lane on motorways; [12305]

(2) if he will institute an investigation into the prevalence of heavy goods vehicles using the overtaking lane on motorways. [12304]

Mr. Bowis: We have no plans for a specific campaign. The Department's publicity priorities remain the "Kill Your Speed" and the drink drive campaigns which address those areas where the greatest savings in life and injury are to be gained.

Goods vehicles, currently those having a maximum laden weight exceeding 7.5 tonnes, have been banned from using the overtaking lane on motorways since 1966. This is in the "Highway Code" and other publications. Enforcement is a matter for the police.

Mr. Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents have been caused in the last year by heavy goods vehicles using the overtaking lane of motorways. [12291]

Mr. Bowis: National statistics do not record the causes of accidents.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action the Civil Aviation Authority has taken in response to the recent conclusions reached by the United States Federal Aviation Administration in respect of digital flight management systems. [5564]

Mr. John Bowis: The report, "The Interfaces Between Flight Crews and Modern Flight Deck Systems" was published by the US Federal Aviation Administration in June 1996. The report was produced by a task force comprising representatives from the FAA and the US National Aeronautics and Space Administration together with nominees from the joint aviation authorities including two representatives from the UK Civil Aviation Authority.

The CAA is considering the 51 recommendations made in the report and has yet to give a formal response. Any resulting regulatory action will be determined by the JAA with appropriate reference to comments received from the aviation authorities of member states. The CAA will continue to ensure that its own human factors initiatives follow a similar approach to that of the FAA, especially in its contributions to the regulatory work of the JAA.

The FAA has also yet to respond to the recommendations contained in the report.

Re-opened Railway Tracks

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the total length of formerly closed railway track which has been re-opened since 1967. [12378]

Mr. Watts: I understand from the British Railways Board that 242 miles of railway track have been re-opened since 1967.

Sea Empress

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the cost to public funds to date for the clean-up of the Sea Empress oil pollution accident; and what assessment he has made of the future costs to be incurred. [11937]

Mr. Bowis: We estimate that the cost to central and local government of clean-up work following the Sea Empress has been in the order of £17 million, and that future costs are likely to be less than £2 million. Reasonable clean-up costs should be eligible for compensation from the shipowner's insurer and from the international oil pollution compensation fund.

HEALTH

Methadone

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued in respect of the maximum limit on the quantity of methadone that a doctor can prescribe with a single prescription for an individual; and what estimate he has made of the most common prescribed daily dosage. [11342]

Mr. Malone: The amount of methadone prescribed is a matter of individual clinical judgment, and no assessment has been made of the most common prescribed daily dosage. Clinical guidelines on drug misuse and dependence were issued to all doctors in 1991. A task force to review services for drug misusers was established in 1994; following its report in May 1996, a working group has been set up to review the clinical guidelines. The revised guidelines will provide guidance for doctors on good prescribing practice and on the most effective management of drug misusers who are prescribed methadone.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has evaluated from other EU countries regarding the efficacy of beta interferon in the treatment of MS. [11880]

Mr. Malon: e: Efficacy of Betaferon, the only preparation of beta interferon currently licensed in the United Kingdon m is a matter for the European Medicines Evaluation Age ncy.

A European public assessment report (EPAR), which summarises the data on which the decision to grant the marketing autho orisation are made, is available from the European Medi icines Evaluation Agency, 7 Westferry circus, London E14 4HB.

Food Poisoning (Deaths)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he e will list the bacterial infections which caused death fro m food poisoning in each year since 1990 indicating the (a) number and (b) percentage in each category. [12059]

Mr. Horam: : The information is provided in the following table:

Nurses

Mr. Chris Sm nith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) school nurses, (b) district nurses, and (c) psychiatric nurses there were by (i) trust, (ii) health author rity and (iii) region in each of the last three years. [12039]

Mr. Horam: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Chris Sm nith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many junior doctor posts by region do not meet the new deal targets. [12062]

Mr. Malone: The new deal targets are contained in the "New Deal on Junior Doctors' Hours", copies of which are available in the Library. At 30 September 1996 regional task forces reported that 22,221 junior doctors, or 78.4 per cent. of all juniors, were complying in full with all the new deal hours limits. The posts by region not meeting the targets were as follows:

	Number
Northern and Yorkshire	1,116
Trent	239
Anglia and Oxford	532
North Thames	1,297
South Thames	814
South and West	731

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the latest research published by the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine into the projected number of cases of new variant CJD. [12161]

Mr. Horam: The Government recognise the need for predictions of the possible number of new variant CJD cases in the future, and welcome any work which leads towards this. However, there is still much we do not know about the disease, including important information on the incubation period, the route of infection, the level of exposure required to cause disease and the role of genetic susceptibility, so any predictions must be viewed with extreme caution. It is likely to be some time before we have enough information to make firm predictions of future numbers of cases.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom (a) contracted and (b) died from CJD in each of the last four years; and how many are estimated to have (i) contracted and (ii) died from the new variant of CJD. [13044]

Mr. Horam: The latest available information on Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease cases, including deaths, was published in a Department of Health press release on 6 January 1997, copies of which are available in the Library.

NHS General Managers

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the arrangements for discretionary additions to the remuneration of general managers in the NHS outlined in "Personnel Memorandum PM (86)7" are still current. [12602]

Mr. Malone: No. The pay system for general managers was updated in March 1990 when the former grade rates, discretionary additions and separate performance-related pay were replaced by a single set of pay ranges. This is set out in health circular (HC)(90)8, copies of which are available in the Library.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates he has made of the amount spent on external consultants by his Department's non-departmental public bodies in each of the last five years. [10160]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 13 January 1996]: The Department of Health non-departmental public bodies have spent the following amounts from running costs on consultancy in each of the last five years:

1992–1993: £991,664

1993–1994: £661,256

1994–1995: £664,984

1995–1996: £568,488

1996 to date: £542,674.

SOCIAL SECURITY

National Insurance

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the rules in respect of the granting of national insurance numbers, with special reference to how they relate to (a) nationals of other member states of the European Union and (b) nationals of other foreign countries. [11057]

Mr. Heald: Anyone who does not already have one is required to apply for a United Kingdom national insurance number if he is liable or entitled to pay UK national insurance contributions, irrespective of nationality. For administrative purposes, anyone claiming a UK social security benefit who does not already have a number will be asked to apply for one.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of aligning the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions with the personal tax allowance for the year 1997–98. [10976]

Mr. Heald: In a full year the estimated loss in revenue from employee national insurance contributions would be £1,075 million and the gain in revenue from employer national insurance contributions would be £225 million.

Note:

The estimated net gain in revenue from employers' national insurance contributions arises from the counter effect of the contracted-out rebate being applied to a narrower band of earnings.

Source:

Government Actuary's Department.

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Spanish fishermen have applied for national insurance numbers at Falmouth in the past 12 months; and how many applications have been granted. [11030]

Mr. Heald: During the past 12 month, 38 Spanish nationals have been registered at Falmouth for national insurance purposes in order to meet their liability to pay a class 2 share fisherman's contribution under the United Kingdom national insurance scheme. These individuals have been accepted as self-employed and therefore allocated a national insurance number on the basis that they receive a share of the proceeds from the catch.

Independent Tribunal Service

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the report of the review of the organisation and management of the independent tribunal service referred to in paragraph 3.16 of the consultation paper on decision making and appeals, Cm 3328, and the report of the independent tribunal service issued on 20 September 1996. [11090]

Mr. Roger Evans: The results of the review of the organisation and management of the independent tribunal service were summarised in the consultation paper. We do not intend to publish the report as a whole.

Disability Premium

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers gaining from an increase in the earnings disregard to £25 for people in receipt of the disability premium in (i) income support, (ii) housing benefit and (iii) council tax benefit. [10990]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated cost and number of cases gaining from a £10 increase in the earnings disregard is set out in the table:

Benefit	£ million	Gainers
Income support	5	15,000
Housing benefit	10	20,000
Council tax benefit	5	25,000

1. The answer is for 1996–97 and has been modelled on the May 1995 "Income support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry" and the 1994–95 "Family Resources Survey" uprated to 1996–97 levels of benefit and earnings.
2. It has been assume that all disregards are increased simultaneously.
3. Costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million and gainers to the nearest 5,000.
4. This is a deadweight estimate: behavioural changes have not been costed.
5. The housing benefit and council tax benefit changes, brought about by people floating onto income support, are included in the cost of and number of gainers in housing benefit and council tax benefit rather than income support.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Child Support Agency cases of a maintenance inquiry form being incorrectly issued following an identity check of the absent parent against centrally held departmental records have been recorded by his Department on the latest date for which figures are available. [11160]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Geoffrey Hoon, dated 23 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about maintenance enquiry forms by the Child Support Agency.

The Agency has monitored the numbers of incorrectly issued maintenance enquiry forms (MEFs) only since April 1994. Information is not therefore available for the first year of operation.

Before any MEF is issued, the identity of the absent parent concerned is verified against the Department's Central Index. A MEF can be issued incorrectly either where the parent with care has given the Agency incorrect or incomplete information or where the Agency has incorrectly identified an absent parent. From April 1996, I am able to provide a breakdown of figures identifying clearly who was responsible for the incorrect MEF issue.

In the period 1 April 1994 to 30 November 1996 (the latest date for which published figures are available), the Agency recorded a total of 186 incorrectly issued MEFs. The majority (115) occurred in 1994/95, with a further 45 in the following year. In the current year (since 1 April 1996) the figure is 26; of these, 11 were the fault of the Agency.

In total, these cases represent 0.03% of the total number of MEFs issued in the same period, i.e. approximately 605,000.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for child support were being (a) paid and (b) processed by the Child Support Agency at 31 July 1996. [11295]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 23 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question asking for the number of claims to child support which were being paid and processed by the Child Support Agency at 31st July 1996.

I must explain that the Child Support Agency does not receive claims for child support nor does it make payments for this purpose. Instead, an application must be made to the Agency by the absent parent or the parent with care for an assessment of child support liability to be made. Any money that is subsequently paid, comes from the absent parent—the Agency holds no funds of its own.

Since the inception of the Agency up to the 31 July 1996, the Agency had received 1.73 million applications for a child support assessment. This figure included cases where the parent with care was in receipt of Income Support, Family Credit or Disability Working Allowance where there is a requirement upon the parent with care to make an application.

At 31 July 1996 the Agency had cleared 1.33 million applications for a child support assessment.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims were submitted to the special payments unit of the Child Support Agency in each of the last three years for which figures are available; how many (a) have been settled, (b) have been refused and (c) are outstanding; and what was the total amount of money paid out; [12434]

(2) against which vote payments by the special payments unit of the Child Support Agency are charged. [12430]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 23 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Special Payments Unit.

The total number of claims submitted to the Special Payments Unit of the Child Support Agency for the years 1994/95, 1995/96 and 1996/97 (to 31 December 1996) were 545, 1013 and 1567 respectively. Of the total 3125 received, 962 have been settled and 1138 have been refused.

At 31 December 1996, there were 643 cases at various stages of action in the Special Payments Unit, and 382 cases where additional information was required before a decision could be reached. The total monies paid out during the period is £641,863.

All special payments made by the Child Support Agency are charged through Vote 3.

I hope this is helpful.

Family Credit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers gaining if the child care disregard were extended to (i) children over the age of 11 years for whom disability living allowance or the disability premium is payable, (ii) each child under 11 years in the family and (iii) children under 16 years during school holidays. [10991]

Mr. Roger Evans: It is estimated that each option would affect fewer than 2,500 families, and cost less than £2.5 million per annum.

Notes:

1. Estimates are based on the May 1996 family credit statistics and 1994–95 family resources survey uprated to 1997–98 prices, taxes and benefit levels. 2. They refer to child care from sources other than relatives, friends or neighbours.

The estimates do not allow for behavioural effects.

3. These estimates are based on small samples and should be treated with caution.

Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which venues have ceased to be used by social security appeal tribunals since January 1996; and which venues it is proposed to cease using. [2025]

Mr. Roger Evans [pursuant to his reply of 4 November, Official Report, column 386]: Unfortunately, the reply I gave was open to misinterpretation. A more appropriate answer is as follows:

The following nine venues have ceased to be used by social security appeal tribunals since January 1996: Mansfield, Brigend, Meerthyr Tydfil, Pontypridd, Gloucester, Yeovil, Huddersfield, Scunthorpe and Paisley.

The independent tribunal service constantly reviews and examines its running costs of which tribunal accommodation forms a large part. I understand that the ITS is currently considering the continued usage of a number of current premises and that liaison with tribunal users is taking place. No firm decisions have been taken at this time.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what account is taken on the level of house insulation in calculating cold weather payments. [12060]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Department of Environment has provided grants to low income households for home insulation through the home energy efficiency scheme since 1991. We have increased the amount for cold weather payments by 70 per cent. since 1990. In doing so, we have not taken increasing levels of insulation into account.

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions each of the weather stations serving Batley and Spen have triggered cold weather payments in the last three months of 1996 and the first two weeks of January 1997. [11966]

Mr. Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mrs. Elizabeth Peacock, dated 23 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question requesting information on how many occasions each of the weather stations serving Batley and Spen have triggered cold weather payments in the last three months of 1996 and the first two weeks of January 1997.

The Batley and Spen area is served by the Benefits Agency (BA) District of Kirklees which includes the BA offices at Huddersfield and Dewsbury. Postal codes within the Kirklees District are linked to the weather stations at Bingley and Leeds.

To date this winter, Bingley Weather Station has identified a forecast of cold weather, from 3 January 1997 to 9 January 1997 inclusive. Leeds Weather Station has not identified any periods of cold weather so far this winter.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Unfit Meat

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases there have been since 1979 of contaminated or unfit meat from knackers' yards (a) entering and (b) being prevented from entering food for human consumption; and how many prosecutions have resulted. [12093]

Mrs. Browning: During the period 1979 to date, there has been legislation in force, currently the Animal By-Products (Identification) Regulations 1995, which require that, subject to exemptions—mainly for poultry meat—meat is sterilised or stained before it can be removed from a knacker's yard. This ensures that unfit meat from knackers' yards is readily identifiable and should not therefore enter the food chain. The regulations are enforced by local authorities and the information requested is not held centrally.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Employees

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of local government employees, by category, in Scotland at 30 September in (i) 1979, (ii) 1989, (iii) 1994, (iv) 1995 and (v) 1996. [11870]

Mr. Kynoch: The available information, from the published results of Scottish joint staffing watch surveys, is given in the tables. Table 1 gives the full-time equivalent number of employees by category for September 1979, 1989, 1994 and 1995. These figures are not directly comparable. The footnotes to the table identify major breaks in comparability in the data over the period. Table 2 provides the latest available information, giving full-time equivalent number of employees by local authority service for July 1996. This is taken from the published results of the revised joint staffing watch survey introduced following local government reorganisation in Scotland.

Because of changes in definitions and coverage these data are not directly comparable with staffing figures for earlier periods. In particular the figures exclude some 7,000 full-time equivalent staff in services such as water and sewerage transferred from local authorities at the time of reorganisation.

The press release "Joint Staff Watch—July 1996 Return—Scotland", a copy of which is available in the Library, describes the results of the survey in more detail and explains the differences between this and earlier surveys. Joint staffing watch figures for September 1996 will be published shortly.

Total adjusted for breaks in comparability listed below	243,865	244,726	255,306	253,930

[1] Major breaks in comparability over the period are: (a) From 1981 the figures include some 2,298 relief workers omitted by some authorities prior to 1981.

(b) From 1987, this excludes some 5,961 full-time equivalent staff transferred from local authorities on the creation of public transport companies in October 1986.

(c) From 1993 the figures exclude some 6,347 full-time equivalent lecturers and teachers and some 2,829 full-time equivalent other education employees transferred from local authorities following the transfer of further education from local authority control.

(d) September 1995 staffing totals were affected as authorities prepared for local government reorganisation in the following spring. A number of staff had transferred to shadow councils, which were not covered in the JSW survey. Also authorities were generally not filling vacant posts in the period up to reorganisation.

1. The analysis excludes any staff on government training programmes who were not also local authority employees.

1. The joint staffing watch survey was revised following local government reorganisation. For most services the full-time equivalent staff estimates given in the new survey are not directly comparable with those supplied to the previous surveys.

2. From July 1996 the joint staffing watch excludes some 7,000 staff in services such as water, sewerage and the children's reporters service, transferred from local authority control at the time of reorganisation.

Irvine Development Corporation

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Scottish Office raised from disposing of assets of the Irvine development corporation; and what was the turnover of Irvine development corporation in each of the last five financial years. [11918]

Mr. Kynoch: During wind-up Irvine development corporation repaid £52.7 million to my right hon. Friend from the receipts generated from disposal of its assets. This sum has been used to extinguish the corporation's indebtedness to the national loans fund. While the annual accounts of the corporation do not use the term "turnover", they disclose all the income generated from operating and investing activities and the financing received by the corporation. Copies of the corporation's annual reports, which incorporate the accounts, are held in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Road Accidents

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimates he has made of the number of persons (a) killed and (b) injured as a result of icy conditions on roads in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years, and the current year to the latest available date; and how many such deaths and injuries occurred on (i) gritted and (ii) non-gritted roads. [11909]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. William Ross, dated 23 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to respond to your Parliamentary Question about deaths and injuries as a result of icy conditions on roads in Northern Ireland.

The information is not available in the precise format requested and could only be provided at disproportionate costs.

However, the most recent records available indicate that, in the period 1 January 1993–31 December 1995, there were a total of 20,092 injury accidents in which 444 people were killed and 34,475 injured. Ice, snow or frost was a factor in 490 of the total injury accidents which resulted in 8 deaths and 880 injuries. Of these accidents 148 were on roads which were not on the gritting schedule.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Residential Homes

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average weekly cost of a place in (a) a private residential home, (b) a voluntary residential home and (c) a statutory residential home for an individual, over pension age, who is in receipt of income support. [11686]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available in the exact form requested.

The table discloses for each of the four boards the average weekly cost of a place in a private-voluntary and statutory residential home for an elderly person. It is not possible to identify the cost for an elderly person in receipt of income support.

Average weekly costs for elderly persons in residential homes for 1996–97

Board area	Private/voluntary £	Statutory £
Northern	203	254
Southern	203	208
Eastern	203	285
Western	234	248

The information is a board average obtained from costs supplied from individual HSS community trusts for each board area.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average annual expenditure from public funds, per individual, on (a) private, (b) voluntary and (c) statutory placements in residential homes in each financial year since 1990. [11687]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available in the exact form requested. The tables disclose the total expenditure on categories of homes in each board area for the years 1990–91 to 1994–95. The expenditure for 1995–96 is not yet available.

This information has been extracted from supplementary statements produced by HPSS boards and HSS trusts to provide further analysis of the expenditure disclosed in the financial accounts. These supplementary statements analyse expenditure over categories of homes rather than over private, voluntary or statutory residential homes. The format of these statements was revised in 1992–93 to provide an analysis of expenditure by care area and a further change was introduced in 1993–94 to provide an analysis of expenditure over programmes of care.

In order to calculate the average expenditure per individual it is necessary to have access to information on the number of individuals covered by the expenditure. This information is not available from financial records.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the formula used to determine the income support entitlement of an individual in a (a) private, (b) voluntary and (c) statutory residential home. [11688]

Mr. Moss: People who were living in private or voluntary residential care homes on 31 March 1993 came under the preserved rights rules and may be entitled to the special higher levels of income support. The higher levels available are the amount of the fees charged by the home or a set national limit, whichever is the lower, and an amount for personal expenses.

From April 1993, people entering private or voluntary residential care homes for the first time may be entitled to income support at the normal rates applicable as if they were living in their own home plus a residential allowance to help with the accommodation costs.

People living in homes owned or managed by health and social services boards may be entitled to a fixed rate allowance of £61.15, less any other income they possess. This rate of income support recognises that health and social services boards received additional funding from Government and prevents duplicate funding for the same individual.

Hedgerows

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what length of hedgerow has been lost in Northern Ireland in each year since 1979. [12483]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Environment and Heritage Service under its chief executive, Mr. Robert C. Martin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert C. Martin to Dr. Gavin Strang, dated 24 January 1997:

As Chief Executive of Environment and Heritage Service, I am responsible for all operational aspects of the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland's environment policies.

I am therefore responding to the Parliamentary Question which you put down in the House of Commons on 22 January 1997:

"to ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what length of hedgerow has been lost in Northern Ireland in each year since 1979."

The Northern Ireland Countryside Survey 1990 indicated the amount of hedgerow existing at that date, and it will not be until the results of the second such survey are available that any comparisons will be possible. This survey is currently planned for the year 2000.

I therefore regret that I am unable to provide you with the information you seek.

Bloody Sunday

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further investigations are being mounted into the killings in Derry in 1972 known as Bloody Sunday. [12459]

Sir John Wheeler: None. These events were fully investigated at the time by the tribunal headed by Lord Widgery.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Project Work Pilots

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date project work pilots will commence; and when she expects regulations will be laid before Parliament. [10260]

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, to my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, North-East (Mr. Congdon) on 12 December 1996, Official Report, columns 315–16.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many assisted places have been taken up by pupils; and at what average cost. [12419]

Mrs. Gillan: In the last academic year—1995–96—for which final figures are available, 29,917 pupils held assisted places in England at an average cost to the Department of £3,816 per pupil.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the schools offering assisted places in 1996–97 and 1997–98, indicating for each (a) the number of places offered, (b) the income received and (c) the proportion of the schools' intake covered by assisted places. [12189]

Mrs. Gillan: I am placing in the Library a list of the 355 schools participating in the assisted places scheme in England showing the total number of places on offer at each school in the current academic year 1996–97. Final figures for the amounts paid to each school will not be available until after the end of the school year. Information relating to the proportion of the schools' intake covered by assisted places is not yet available.

For the academic year 1997–98, I have invited eligible schools to bid for a further tranche of places to complete our commitment to double the scheme over time. Further information about the number of participating schools and places on offer will be made available in due course.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures she has taken to establish whether those schools receiving funding under the assisted places scheme are conducted for charitable purposes only. [12617]

Mrs. Gillan: All schools applying for participation in the assisted places scheme are required to confirm in writing that they are conducted for charitable purposes only and to provide relevant details such as their registered charity number allocated by the Charity Commissioners. Additional checks are made against information held on the Department's register of independent schools, which is updated on an annual basis, and by examining schools' audited financial accounts.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many responses she has received to the consultation paper on changes to teachers' superannuation scheme early retirement arrangements; and if she will (a) provide a summary of the responses and (b) indicate the proportion of consultees in favour of the proposed arrangements. [12195]

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of those enrolled on teacher training courses in each of the last five years including 1995–96 failed to complete the course. [12193]

Notes:
1. Sources: Court of Auditors Report on 1995 Community Budget and Eurostat.
2. The Court of Auditors uses ecu figures. These have been converted to sterling using the annual average £ sterling/ecu exchange rate for 1995, £ = 1.2211 ecu.
3. Contribution figures are after account has been taken of the UK's abatement.
4. The Court of Auditors Report does not allocate all Community spending to the Member States so that the receipts figures in the table may not represent the full amount of expenditure by the Commission in each Member State. Consequently the net figures in the table are likely only to be indicative of the amount of Member States' net contributions.
5. Figures for both population and the number of households are the latest available (Eurostat figures) and relate to 1990–91.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in respect of which goods or services the rate of tax payable is dependent on the vendor from whom the product is purchased. [11651]

Mr. Oppenheim: There are a number of occasions when the status of the vendor affects the chargeability to VAT of goods and services. No tax at all is due if the supplier is not registrable for VAT, or if the supplies are made outside the UK, and certain VAT reliefs are dependent on the status of the supplier, for example in the area of postal and education services. In addition, the Budget proposed a higher rate of insurance premium tax, as an anti-avoidance measure which depends on the status of the vendor.

Internet

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his letter of 17 December, when he expects to make a statement on a derogation from the sixth VAT directive in relation to Internet access services. [10830]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 23 January 1997]: All member states have now lodged a request for a general derogation from the sixth VAT directive in relation to telecommunications services, including Internet access services. The European Commission is expected to submit a proposal for such a derogation to the Council of Ministers later this month or shortly thereafter. Once the Council has agreed the proposal, UK secondary legislation giving effect to the derogation will follow.

Taxation

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his Answer of 13 January, Offical Report, cols 21–22 relating to taxation, if he will provide equivalent figures for *(a)*1978–79 and (b) 1992–93. [11449]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 17 January 1997]: Estimates are given in the tables. For 1978–79 married couples are counted as one taxpayer and their incomes are combined; for 1992–93 husbands and wives are counted separately.

VAT Harmonisation

Mr. Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the increase in the costs of (a) housing, (b) travel, (c) books and newspapers, (d) children's clothes and (e) food after 2005 when the definitive system of VAT is introduced in the EU; and if he will make a statement. [11103]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 21 January 1997]: No such estimate has been made. No agreement has been reached to introduce a definitive system of VAT in the European Community from 2005 or any other future date.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the EU Commission's plans for VAT after 2005; what decisions have been made about the United Kingdom's transitional system of VAT after 2005; what is the definitive system to which the Government have already agreed; and if he will make a statement. [11188]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 21 January 1997]: In July 1996 the European Commission produced a suggested programme for a common system of VAT, or "definitive system", to apply throughout the European Community. This programme contains no specific legislative proposals, but outlines a series of steps which the Commission proposes should be taken toward the creation of a common system. An explanatory memorandum on the Commission's proposals was submitted to Parliament last September.

Any change to the EC VAT system requires the unanimous agreement of member states, and the current transitional regime continues automatically in the absence of an agreement upon a definitive regime. Discussion of the programme within the EC has so far been very limited, and no decisions have been made about the programme itself or about the future shape of the VAT system.

Contrary to recent assertions in the press, the Government have agreed no changes, whether from 2005 or any other date.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the goods and services to be subject to a VAT rate above 0 per cent. after 2005; what exemptions from VAT will be abolished; when he agreed such changes with his EU counterparts; and if he will make a statement. [11104]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 21 January 1997]: I have agreed no such changes. The current EC VAT regime—including its provisions for the United Kingdom's zero rates, and those in respect of exemptions—cannot be changed without the unanimous agreement of member states, and so will automatically continue to apply in the absence of any agreement to amend it.

Treasury Building

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which bodies or individuals have been consulted about the security implications of the Treasury building redevelopment (a) before 25 November 1996 and (b) since 25 November 1996; and if he will make a statement. [12147]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The relevant security authorities have been consulted about the proposals. It would not be appropriate to give further details.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the level of savings to public funds arising from the proposed change in the regulations regarding teachers' early retirement. [11166]

Mrs. Gillan: I have been asked to reply.

If the proposed change goes ahead, employers' contributions to the teachers' superannuation scheme will be 7.2 per cent. of salary rather than 8.8 per cent. of salary. That will save public sector employers about £200 million a year. To offset that, employers will need to fund the direct costs of premature retirement. The cost of that will depend on the numbers of premature retirements that employers decide to award: at the illustrative levels of premature retirement that we have forecast, the extra cost to public sector employers of these direct costs would be about £30 million a year.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 288

SESSION 1996–97

13th January—24th January 1997

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
